STERLING, VA (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Star Technologies, Inc. (NASDAQ: STRRC) today reported revenue of $33.9 million for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990, compared with revenue of $39.0 million for the previous year. The company reported a net loss for the year of $4.9 million, or (30 cents) per share, compared with a net loss of $7.4 million, or (46 cents) per share, for the same prior-year period.

For the fourth quarter ended March 31, 1990, Star reported revenue of $8.0 million, compared with revenue of $10.5 million for the year-ago period. The company reported a net loss for the quarter of $1.4 million, or (9 cents) per share, compared with a net loss of $2.9 million, or (18 cents) per share, for the same prior-year period.

Richard J. Gallagher, Star Technologies' vice president of finance and CFO attributed the decline in revenue for the year to a combination of lower array processor sales, and declining sales to the defense and aerospace markets, particularly sales of Star's Graphicon(tm) image generation products. In addition, earnings for the year were also impacted by continued new product development expenditures, as well as costs associated with the August 1989 acquisition of Glen Culler & Associates, a highly regarded computer design and engineering consulting firm in Goleta, Calif.

"The year's results reflect Star's commitment to product diversification for future growth," said Robert C. Compton, Star's chairman, president and CEO. "Within the last two years, Star has completed two successful acquisitions and launched major new product development programs in each of these strategic new business areas." Star's product diversification plan was initiated in April 1988, with the acquisition of the Graphicon Products Division from GE.

Compton added, "This year, we introduced and have recently shipped the Graphicon 2000, the first of the new products developed through our diversification program. In the very near future, we will be announcing another product family that resulted directly from the Culler acquisition. These innovative new products will position Star for future growth."

The Graphicon 2000 (G2000), introduced in November 1989, represents a major component of Star's R&D program. The G2000 is a high- performance image generator that significantly advances price/ performance levels for visual simulation and training systems. It offers real-time image generation, processing up to 3,000 polygons at 60Hz, and such advanced features as photo-derived texturing for complex scenes, for a unit price of less than $175,000. These advanced features were previously available only on large, multi-million dollar simulation systems.

Compton added that the acquisition of Glen Culler & Associates greatly strengthened Star's R&D capabilities. The Culler group, now Star's Santa Barbara R&D Center, is headed by Dr. Glen J. Culler, an internationally known mathematician and computer scientist. Among his many credits, Dr. Culler is known as the "father of array processor technology" through his pioneering work on advanced computer architectures.

Star Technologies, Inc. is a leading manufacturer of high- performance computing products, including array processors and graphics processors.

Lindland as president, on July 2 1990. Luce will retire on July 2, although he will continue as a trustee for the bank.

"Robert Kemper is an outstanding business executive with broad experience in banking and management," Luce said. "He has established himself as a leader and has proven to be a man able to meet the challenges of the banking environment."

Luce announced at Great American's annual shareholders' meeting in May that he would retire when a new chairman and chief executive officer was selected. Despite Luce's retirement as chairman and chief executive officer, he will remain active with Great American.

"Gordon has played a very important role at Great American," Yale said. "While his everyday presence as chairman and CEO will be missed, we welcome his continued service as a trustee."

MIAMI (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Lennar Corporation (NYSE: LEN), one of the nation's leading home building and real estate organizations, today reported second quarter 1990 revenues and earnings.

Leonard Miller, chairman of the board and president, announced earnings of $3,729,000, or $.37 per share, on revenues of $86,532,000 for the quarter ended May 31, 1990, compared with earnings of $6,448,000, or $.64 per share, and revenues of $105,528,000 for the same period of 1989.

For the six-month period, Lennar's revenues were $167,963,000, compared with $190,173,000 for the first half of fiscal 1989. Six-month earnings were $7,009,000 or $.70 per share, compared with earnings of $12,215,000, or $1.22 per share, for the first half of fiscal 1989.

The company delivered 735 homes during the second quarter of 1990 compared with 995 deliveries during the same period of 1989. Deliveries for the six months of fiscal 1990 totaled 1,437 compared with 1,828 homes delivered in the first six months last year.

At May 31, 1990, Lennar had approximately $142 million in backlog of home sales for future delivery, as compared to $216 million at May 31, 1989. These dollar amounts represent a 1,460 backlog of home sales as of May 31, 1990, as compared to a backlog of 2,394 a year earlier.

Miller stated that Lennar's second quarter 1990 results reflect the slower housing market generally being experienced in Florida and that the company's performance during the balance of 1990 would continue to be below levels achieved in the prior year. He remains optimistic about Lennar's financial strength and unique position in the marketplace. He concluded that the decline in the housing market, coupled with less real estate credit availability, would likely result in reduced competition and new opportunities for Lennar.

C.I.S. is one of several service companies in which SwissRe acquired substantial interests during 1987 and 1988. STAMFORD, CT (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - General Signal Corporation (NYSE: GSX), announced today that it has decided to withdraw from the sale of its Telecommunications Equipment Group. Edmund M. Carpenter, General Signal's chairman and chief executive officer, stated, "After reviewing acquisition proposals submitted for each of the operations, we've concluded that it is in the best interests of the company and its shareholders to remain in the telecommunications equipment business and continue to optimize the performance of this group."

"With the current softness in the acquisitions market," he continued, "particularly within the technology area, offers presented were below reasonable expectations and thus rejected." The group's performance through the first five months of 1990 is significantly ahead of last year and with strong backlogs, the current forecast calls for full-year sales of approximately $150 million with operating profit margins before corporate allocations in the mid-teens.

General Signal had announced earlier this year its intention to explore the sale of the Telecommunications Equipment Group and to repay debt with the proceeds. "However, with the improved performance, a transaction would have been dilutive," said Carpenter.

The Telecommunications Equipment Group consists of three companies -- Telenex, Tau-tron, and TTI -- which supply telecommunications test equipment and network diagnostic and control equipment. In 1989, the group generated nearly $120 million in sales.

STAMFORD, CT (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - According to an announcement made today by Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Edmund M. Carpenter, General Signal Corporation (NYSE: GSX) is planning to divest its Semiconductor Systems and General Signal Thinfilm units. The former designs and manufactures wafer processing equipment used to produce semiconductor devices; the latter designs and manufactures equipment that deposits thin films on semiconductor wafers. Both operations are part of the semiconductor equipment group within General Signal's technology industries sector.

With the recently announced creation of a new optical lithography systems unit combining its GCA and Ultratech Stepper units, General Signal has decided to focus its resources and future investment on such front-end operations as lithography and etching and back-end operations such as wafer probing and assembly.

In commenting on the proposed sales, Carpenter added that, "General Signal will invest in those units of our semiconductor equipment business where we have the critical mass and market position to be successful in the future. Both of the units to be divested have been unprofitable and appear unlikely to meet General Signal's overall performance objectives. In addition, these units will require continued investment and would thus be better suited to a company or companies that either already have or are planning to build significant positions in the wafer processing and deposition market segments."

DALLAS (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Central and South West Corp. (NYSE: CSR) today said it has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to reactivate its CSW Energy Inc. subsidiary.

CSW Energy was formed in 1983 to develop cogeneration and other non-utility generation projects. No projects were ever completed, and the operations were discontinued in 1986.

Central and South West said it has moved to re-enter the business because of the expected growth in the market for non-utility generation during the 1990s.

The company said a recent internal study identified many opportunities to develop or invest in cogeneration projects. If the SEC approves its application, CSW Energy would develop projects in joint ventures with other independent developers and through limited partnerships in projects now operating or under construction. Its operations would be limited to those that are "qualified facilities" under the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act.

Central and South West Corp. is a Dallas-based public utility holding company. It owns four electric operating companies that serve customers in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. It also owns an Oklahoma intrastate natural-gas transmission company and four other subsidiaries besides CSW Energy.

(NASDAQ: VKNG) today announced at an investment seminar in Chicago that revenues for the 11 months ending May 31, 1990, increased approximately 20 percent over the same period last year. Sales for April and May 1990 increased 27 percent compared to the same period in 1989, during which period sales for the company's five distribution centers increased in a range of 16 percent to 36 percent.

Helford also reported that Viking's active customer base as of May 31, 1990, had grown to 416,000, an increase of 13 percent from July 1, 1989. For the 11 months ended May 31, 1990, the number of customers purchasing for the first time increased by 22 percent over the same period last year.

It is anticipated that Viking Direct Ltd. will commence operations in September 1990. Preliminary forecasts indicate that the U.K. subsidiary will incur operating losses of approximately $2.2 million in the United Kingdom during fiscal year 1991, slightly higher than originally forecasted, but should become profitable during fiscal year 1992.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The automotive refrigerant industry, representing the largest use of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) in the United States, today praised a new international agreement to virtually ban CFC production by the year 2000.

The pact, agreed upon today by the United States and other nations meeting in London, is intended to protect the earth's ozone layer, which is damaged by CFCs and other chemicals. Automotive air- conditioning refrigerant, or CFC-12, is also known by trade names such as freon and genetron.

"The only way to stop the environmental threat posed by CFCs over the long term is to stop making them, period," said Hoyt B. Wilder, spokesman for the Automotive Refrigeration Products Institute (ARPI). ARPI represents the major U.S. producers and packagers of automotive refrigerant, including companies which already have pledged to stop CFC production by the year 2000 and are leading the development of ozone-friendly CFC substitutes.

"This production ban will create increased incentives for recycling refrigerant and avoiding wasteful servicing practices," said Wilder. "CFC based automotive refrigerant will become a precious commodity that we all must conserve until CFC substitutes and compatible cooling systems become widely available," he continued.

Wilder added that the pact demonstrates the need for a multi- national approach to CFC control: "Ozone depletion doesn't respect state, national or international borders. It is a problem that must be addressed by united international action." CFC production was previously regulated by the Montreal Protocol, a 1987 agreement to phase-down CFC production to 50 percent of 1986 levels over a 10 year period.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Time Warner Inc. (NYSE: TWX), Warner Bros. Inc., and Warner Home Video Inc. today filed suit in Superior Court in Los Angeles against Pathe Communications Corp. (NYSE: PCC), Pathe Entertainment Inc., and Pathe Films N.V.

The lawsuit includes the following causes of action: (i) Breach of the April 9, 1990, contract pursuant to which Warner Bros. would provide distribution services on an exclusive basis for newly produced films and for the Pathe and UA libraries and Time Warner would provide certain financing for Pathe's proposed acquisition of MGM/UA Communications Co.

(ii) Breach of an exclusive theatrical distribution agreement covering Pathe Entertainment films.

(iii) Breach of an exclusive home video distribution rights agreement for Pathe Entertainment films.

The complaint alleges specifically that Pathe "acted as if the (April) contract gave Pathe a one-way option to decide which of its obligations it would honor, which Time Warner rights it could ignore, and which conditions it would satisfy."

The complaint further asserts that Pathe is creating a "smokescreen to obscure the actual fact that Pathe was unable or unwilling to perform under the April 9 letter agreement and as an excuse to seek 'alternative financing.'"

With respect to the video rights agreement, the complaint alleges that Pathe entered into an agreement with Warner Home Video purportedly granting it rights that, without Warner's knowledge, had previously been granted to another company.

The complaint seeks damages of at least $100 million, the final amount to be determined at trial.

(JUNE 29) UPI - The prosecution today played its strongest card against

Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry. The jury at the drug and perjury trial saw the videotape of Barry's January drug bust in an F-B-I sting at a downtown Washington hotel. Barry was shown paying for and smoking crack, but he also contradicted prosecution testimony that he was a regular drug user by asking how the pipe worked before smoking it.

Negotiators signed an agreement in Tokyo today designed to improve trade between the United States and Japan. The Japanese promise to open their markets to foreign goods. But Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher calls the pact ''just a step forward, and NO more than that.''

The drug cartels went on the offensive again today in Colombia, concentrating their attacks on the cocaine capital of Medellin . A car bomb in the city left 14 people dead and 32 others injured. Nine police officers were murdered in attacks throughout the region.

Common Cause says the savings-and-loan industry contributed more than 11-Million dollars to politicians and their campaigns during the '80's. S-and-L's gave heavily to members of the House and Senate banking committees, and also contributed 600-thousand dollars to the 1988 campaign of George Bush.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Nelson Mandela took his U-S tour to Detroit Thursday, where he was greeted by civil rights pioneer Rosa Parks. He then visited a Ford plant in Dearborn, Michigan, as a gesture of thanks to the United Auto Workers, who've long supported the anti-apartheid movement. Mandela closed the day with a speech before 49-thousand people at Tiger Stadium. The South African black nationalist quoted from a song by the late Marvin Gaye, saying there are far too many people still dying in South Africa.

The biggest wildfire burning in Southern California has come within six miles of the Santa Barbara city limits. Winds remain strong, but for the moment they're favorable, blowing the flames away from houses. Wildfires have consumed about 500 houses in Southern California, worth an estimated 200-Million dollars. Four fires in the region have destroyed nearly 600 structures.

Jury deliberations continue for a second day Friday in the New York City fraud and racketeering trial of Imelda Marcos and Saudi Arabian arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi. Jurors began deliberations Thursday with a 90-minute session at the end of the day. Before deliberations began, the panel were told by U-S District Judge John Keenan NOT to let ''bias or sympathy'' intrude on their ultimate verdict.

A Florida representative is coming to the defense of 2 Live Crew, saying racism is implicit in the attack on the popular black rap group. Democrat Ron Wilson called a news conference to display record jackets by white acts that he says... ''make 2 Live Crew seem like choir boys.'' Wilson says the group is a victim of- quote- ''good ole boy let me get on the bandwagon attorneys.''

(JUNE 29) UPI - A world-wide environmental agency has issued a report in London saying that 500-thousand dolphins are killed each year and that the species could soon face extinction. The Environmental Investigation Agency says its estimates are conservative. The report cites Japan as the worst offender, blaming Japan for a documented 100-thousand dolphin deaths a year.

11 research monkeys in the hands of the National Institutes of Health at Tulane University are caught in a brutal Catch-22. A federal judge in Washington Thursday rejected a suit attempting to halt fatal experiments on the monkeys. The N-I-H argues that the experiments should proceed as soon as possible because the monkeys are already suffering from injuries sustained in earlier experiments. The lawsuit is now being appealed.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Budget negotiators gave serious consideration to reducing Social Security benefits - one of the most sensitive issues in the budget - and Democrats proposed drastic cuts in defense spending.

The proposals thursday were evidence of new movement in the budget talks between Congress and the White House, which had displayed few signs of progress since beginning in mid-May.

One negotiator, Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said there was discussion about a possible ''three-month delay'' in annual Social Security cost of living adjustments.

But participants said no specific cuts - in Social Security, Medicare or any of the other formula-set federal entitlement programs under discussion - were approved by the bipartisan group of White House and congressional negotiators, who were spending their second day of discussions on entitlement savings.

''While no one has said no, no one has said yes, either,'' House Budget committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said of the discussion about Social Security reductions.

Panetta also said he was proposing, with the backing of most of the Democratic negotiators, a $16 billion cut in defense spending that would require ''a dramatic scale-back'' in the ''Star Wars'' missile defense system and other high-priced military hardware.

Panetta said in an interview the proposal calls for spending $10 billion less on defense next year than President Bush has requested for the fiscal 1991 budget. It would also propose a cut of $270 billion over five years.

The administration's most recent request called for a cut of $5.9 billion in defense spending below the amount needed to keep pace with inflation.

''If we're going to reach the deficit savings we've targeted, you've got to go higher on defense (savings),'' Panetta said.

Asked if he supported the Democratic defense proposal, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., a budget negotiator, said, ''Of course not.''

''I truly believe it is way too Draconian and could not be achieved,'' he said. ''They're way too high in the first year and way to high over five years.''

The negotiations between Bush's top budget aides and key members of Congress from both parties began May 15 in hopes of crafting a package that would slash the federal deficit, which is threatening to top $250 billion in fiscal 1991.

The Gramm-Rudman budget law requires the deficit to be $64 billion in 1991. If that figure is not reached, the law requires across-the-board reductions that would be too deep to be acceptable to Congress and Bush.

Despite agreement on all sides that drastic action was needed, the talks remained stalled until this week. Bush broke the impasse by reversing his longstanding opposition to a tax hike and acknowledging publicly that higher taxes would be needed to control the deficit.

Democratic negotiators, who wanted a sign from Bush that he was willing to make some politically difficult choices, were encouraged by the president's move. They demonstrated their own willingness to sacrifice political sacred cows by bringing up the possibility of cutting entitlements, an area Democrats generally are loathe to touch.

That prompted Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., to cautiously predict that they could craft a package to control the mushrooming deficit that would win congressional approval despite some tough decisions.

''I think we're going to get a deal and I think it will be a deal that will pass the Congress,'' Packwood said. ''And I think the public, by and large, in the aggregate, will like it (but) there will be specifics they don't like.''

Social Security is one of the most sensitive issues brought up so far, and the mere mention of cutting benefits is sure to raise the ire of one of the most vocal and politically influential segments of the population - the elderly.

Negotiators said they believed, however, that they could win support for a compromise if one particular special interest group did not feel they were taking the brunt of the budget cuts.

Packwood, ranking Republican on the Finance Committee, suggested that ''of all the groups in this country willing to sacrifice'' to help reduce the soaring deficit, the most willing are ''probably those that are on Social Security - so long as they don't think they are being singled out.''

In addition to a three-month delay in benefit increases, participants said there was discussion of increasing the tax liability of some Social Security recipients. Currently, 50 percent of Social Security payments received by individuals with annual outside incomes of more than $25,000, or couples with annual outside incomes of $32,000, are considered taxable. The proposal would increase that level to 85 percent of the excess income.

And negotiators discussed lowering the income threshold at which benefits are taxed. Such proposals could raise up to $23 billion over five years.

The defense spending cuts proposed by Panetta are the deepest to be given serious consideration so far and would slash money for the Star Wars defense system, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Panetta said he was offering his proposal ''because of the changing world situation'' and the reduced Soviet military threat and because of the need to control the spiraling federal deficit.

TOKYO (JUNE 29) UPI - Prince Aya, second in line to Japan's 2,000-year-old Chrysanthemum throne, married his college sweetheart Kiko Kawashima, a commoner, in an elaborate court ceremony Friday with an eager nation watching on television.

The wedding marked only the second time an imperial family member has wed a commoner. In 1959, Aya's father, Emperor Akihito, broke precedent when as crown prince he married the former Michiko Shoda, daughter of an industrialist.

The 23-year-old Kawashima, wearing a 12-layer silk kimono weighing 37 pounds and a wig tied in a long pony tail that flowed the length of her back, was wedded to the prince in a 10-minute Shinto ceremony at Kashikodokoro, one of three religious sanctuaries in the Imperial Palace.

The prince, 24, wore stiff black robes, embossed with a centuries-old pattern exclusive to the imperial family, and a curved headdress.

The couple knelt on tatami straw mats in the shrine, attended by Shinto priests, where they read a pledge of marital bonds and drank ceremonial sake, or rice wine.

About 150 invited guests attended the austere ceremony, which began at 10 a.m., while the rest of the nation was offered discreet glimpses by television.

Akihito and Empress Michiko, who ascended to the throne in January 1989 after former Emperor Hirohito died, were not present. By tradition, they waited in another part of the palace for the newlyweds to come and formally announce their marriage.

Following the daylong festivities, the couple led a procession to their new home at the Akasaka Imperial Palace. People waving Japanese flags lined the parade route to catch their first glimpse of the newlyweds.

But no honeymoon awaits the royal couple. Although the prince had suggested a trip to Thailand, the Imperial Household Agency determined the two must visit Shinto shrines in central Japan and present their marriage to the gods.

Aya met Kawashima when they were undergraduates at Gakushuin University in Tokyo. In June 1986, Aya proposed to Kawashima while waiting at a traffic light. After considering a few days, she accepted.

Following his graduation from Gakushuin in 1988, Aya completed a master's degree in zoology at Oxford University in Britain. Kawashima remained at Gakushuin to perform graduate work in psychology.

The official announcement of the engagement in September 1989 cast a spotlight on Kawashima, daughter of Tatsuhiko Kawashima, an economics professor at Gakushuin, and his wife, Kazuyo.

Her face has appeared on magazine covers weekly, and countless television shows have examined every detail of her life.

Young Japanese women were especially stricken with Kiko-mania. Many have imitated her natural swept-back, shoulder-length hairstyle, and requests for the traditional wedding kimono that Kawashima wore overwhelmed formal wear shops, said Yoshikazu Ogawa, a store owner.

Sales of pearl necklaces, the jewelry worn by Kawashima at the engagement announcement, have increased 45 percent in the past year, said a Mitsukoshi department store spokesman.

Some Japanese have said the media had given too much attention to the newest member of the imperial family.

''I feel sorry for her because the press has been chasing after her,'' said Ohichi Ogata, a 71-year-old retiree. ''I'd like her to take action on her own free will.''

(JUNE 29) UPI - The outfield wall in the Houston Astrodome doesn't enjoy the same notoriety as the one in Boston but Thursday it was the center of attention.

With the score tied 1-1 in the 10th inning, Eric Anthony ripped a double to right field that scored Craig Biggio from first base with the winning run, thanks to a big assist from the wall.

Biggio had singled with one out off Mark Grant, 1-1, and when Anthony ripped his double to right Biggio didn't think he had a chance at crossing the plate.

''After the ball was hit, I didn't think I could score,'' Biggio said. ''Apparently, the ball got stuck under the wall. Matt Galante (Houston's third base coach) kept waving his arms and I kept going.''

That's exactly what happened. When right fielder Tony Gwynn turned to play Anthony's ball on a rebound, there wasn't one. The ball just sat on the warning track as the speedy Biggio raced home.

''He threw me a sinker, but it ran back over the plate,'' said Anthony. ''There was a hole open for a hitter like me because we had a runner on first.''

With the win the Astros swept their sixth straight series at home but have won only eight of 33 games on the road this season.

The Padres had taken a 1-0 lead in the third on Joe Carter's single before the wall was involved in a controversial call.

Houston tied the score in the sixth on Rich Gedman's double over Carter's head in centerfield.

After Glenn Wilson singled and Anthony walked, Gedman doubled to deep center and the ball bounced against the wall, enabling both runners to score. The Padres protested that the ball had hit above the wall and after a discussion, umpire crew chief Paul Runge ruled the ball hit a concrete barrier behind the fence, ruling it a ground-rule double. He sent Anthony back to third and Astro starter Mark Portugal lined out to end the inning.

Padres' starting pitcher Ed Whitson praised Portugal's performance. Portugal worked 7 1-3 innings allowing one run, four hits, walking two and striking out four. Whitson posted similar statistics working six innings and giving up one run, five hits, walking five and fanning four.

''These are the kinds of games that you like to come out and watch,'' said Whitson. ''Pitchers' duels where everyone's on top. We came in here and Mark Portugal looks like Cy Young.''

Larry Andersen, 4-1, worked two innings to earn the victory. He struck out three and walked one.

With the score tied 2-2 in the ninth, Luis Salazar singled off Bill Sampen, who fell to 6-1. Salazar was pulled for Varsho. Les Lancaster, 6-4, walked before Varsho reached third on Shawon Dunston's fly ball and scored on Wynne's loopinf single to center.

Mets 5, Reds 4

At New York, Kevin Elster drove in two runs and scored once to help Dwight Gooden win his fourth straight decision and extend New York's winning streak to 10. Gooden, 7-5, allowed 10 hits and struck out five in 7 1-3 innings. John Franco finished for his 14th save. Jose Rijo, 5-3, gave up five runs for the loss.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 1

At St. Louis, Bob Tewksbury allowed five hits over 8 2-3 innings and Willie McGee collected three hits and drove in two runs leading St. Louis. Tewksbury, 3-0, collected his third win in three starts since being purchased from AAA Louisville. Lee Smith got his eighth save as the Cardinals snapped a four-game losing streak. Doug Drabek, 8-4, was the loser, giving up four runs and 10 hits in five innings.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (JUNE 29) UPI - Hundreds of people burned out of their houses by a vicious arson fire that destroyed more than 500 dwellings and caused up to $200 million damage returned to the rubble that was once a placid seaside community and now looks like a battlefield.

Although the 4,000-acre fire still burned out of control early Friday, a 20-degree drop in the temperature and the failure of dreaded ''Sundowner'' winds to materialize helped 800 firefighters from all over California keep the blaze from spreading as much as had been feared.

Fire bosses early Friday could not predict when the fire would be contained.

Authorities said 567 homes - including houses and apartments - were destroyed since the fire started Wednesday at 6 p.m. Witnesses saw somebody throw something from a car just before the fire started in the San Marcos Pass and a $50,000 reward has been offered for the arsonist.

The fire was burning in two areas Thursday night, in canyons and along ridges about 6 miles northwest of the city limits. But fire officials said lower temperatures - down 20 degrees from 100-degree-plus readings of Wednesday, easing winds and higher humidity aided weary crews.

The Santa Barbara inferno was just one of four major blazes that, fueled by hot winds, triple-digit heat, four years of drought and firebugs, destroyed 613 homes across Southern California from San Diego to Santa Barbara.

Gov. George Deukmejian toured the devastation and declared a state of emergency in response to the Santa Barbara fire as well as to one that leveled dozens of homes in the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale, paving the way for state help to residents who lost everything.

The extreme danger of even more fires in the drought-dry region prompted authorities to ban open fires at campgrounds and stop issuing fire permits in areas that fall under the protection of the three agencies.

Several firefighters and residents were injured, the most seriously a helicopter pilot who broke his leg when his chopper went down while dropping water on the Santa Barbara fire.

By 9 p.m. Thursday, the fire was burning near U.S. Highway 101 and north of State Route 154. Tankers dropped water on the northern fire perimeter to permit crews to enter the fire area.

In Glendale, officials said 46 homes in the affluent College Hills area were destroyed and 20 damaged Wednesday in a deliberately-set fire, causing an estimated $32 million to $50 million in losses.

Another arson fire, meanwhile, broke out Thursday afternoon in Claremont, about 30 miles east of downtown Los Angeles. No structures were threatened and no injuries were reported from the 400-acre blaze.

In San Diego County, yet another arson blaze erupted at 2:15 p.m. Thursday evening, scorching some 1,000 acres of vegetation in a remote area near Lake Henshaw, about 60 miles northeast of the city. Firefighters drew water from the lake to fight the blaze, which was moving south but no structures were threatened. Two of the 450 firefighers on the lines were slightly hurt. About 390 people at a Boy Scout camp were evacuated.

Santa Barbara County Planning Director John Patton said local officials would meet Friday to ratify the state's emergency declaration, but he added he did not take much comfort from the fire's stabilization.

''We have a reprieve of sorts at this point, behind which lies serious devastation,'' Patton said. ''I don't think you can speak of losses of this magnitude as winning a battle. It may be the battle will not get much worse.''

Whipped by fast, hot winds the fire played cruel tricks, leveling a string of houses then for some reason skipping one or two, leaving them islands in a sea of devastation.

''In my personal experience ... it's one of the most devastating fires we've seen,'' said County Fire Marshal Michael Bennett, a 20-year veteran. ''As the winds pick up, you could have thousands and thousands (of firefighters) on the line and it could blow right over our heads.

''The amount of work effort needed before it can be contained is a complete ring around the fire,'' Bennett said.

After a day of assessing the area, Jane Brechwald, a county emergency official, said losses to homes were set at a minimum of $190 million and another $4 million in damage to public buildings. Commercial damage was set at $2.6 million.

''I guess everybody thinks if you have a fire, the fire department is going to come,'' said Vivian Nelson, whose family managed to save their house. ''We were on our own totally. We had no aid. No phones. And no water when the pipes melted.''

The Pentagon contributed two Air Force C-130 military cargo planes and two Air National Guard C-130s equipped with firefighting gear to help fight the blaze with chemical retardant in the water-short region ravaged by four years of drought. Five other planes were involved in the effort.

At least 12 houses were destroyed in a 2,200-acre brush fire in the Cleveland National Forest south of Corona about 60 miles east of Los Angeles. It was 40 percent contained Thursday.

Fourteen houses were destroyed in the Sleepy Hollow community of Chino Hills area of San Bernardino in another arson fire.

In Arizona, the U.S. Forest Service reported the fire in the Tonto National Forest, which killed six firefighters and destroyed 53 summer homes earlier this week, was still burning out of control Thursday.

The fire, touched off Monday by a lightning strike, also destroyed a historic cabin used by late Western novelist Zane Grey.

DETROIT (JUNE 29) UPI - After a cold greeting in tropical Miami, the booming applause returned for Nelson Mandela at a sold-out Tiger Stadium rally where he recalled that the city's Motown music soothed him in his prison cell.

Mandela, near the end of a physically demanding eight-city tour, spoke briefly Thursday at a Ford auto plant, appeared at a downtown reception, and said an ''important breakthrough'' was near in the struggle against apartheid.

Unlike his appearance in Miami where he was snubbed by city officials angered over his support of Cuban President Fidel Castro, Mandela received an official welcome from Mayor Coleman Young and Michigan Gov. James Blanchard and civil rights pioneer Rosa Parks .

Mandela was to appear at a breakfast for the South African community in the Midwest Friday and then hold a brief news conference before flying to Los Angeles, the second-to-last stop on his tour. From there he was to head to Oakland before leaving for home on Sunday.

''When we were in prison, we appreciated and obviously listened to the sound of Detroit - Motortown,'' Mandela told a crowd of 49,000. ''On reaching Detroit I recalled some of words of songs sung by Marvin Gaye. Those words, go, 'Brother, brother, there's far too many of you dying. Mother, mother, there's far too many of you crying.'

''These words are a reflection of the South African condition,'' Mandela said. ''For how long must our brothers and sisters go on dying? We declare: Not for long. We are going to free South Africa so that all the people, black and white, live in harmony and peace. We don't want apartheid to survive even one more day.''

Mandela declared that ''victory is in sight,'' but he added that the final mile may be the ''most difficult, painful and intractible.''

Earlier in the day, Mandela apologized for having to cut short his Detroit schedule. ''I would like to say more and spend more time with my sisters and brothers here ... people who have given enormous strength and encouragement,'' Mandela said on arrival at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

A spokesman for the African National Congress said the vigorous schedule and the attentions of the crowd had been taxing to the 71-year-old leader's health. ''It is the kind of adoration that interferes with his schedule,'' Zwelakhe Sisulu said. ''It is the kind of adoration that is taxing on his health.''

Later, Mandela told a wildly cheering crowd of several hundred autoworkers at the Ford Motor Co.'s Rouge plant in suburban Dearborn that they are the ones who can help insure that America's foreign policy promotes peace and the welfare of all nations in the world.

''I am your flesh and your blood. I am your comrade,'' Mandela declared.

Noting that he had just come from addressing an AFL-CIO conference in Miami, Mandela said he and his wife will return to South Africa ''knowing we have behind us the full support of the working people in this country.''

Most of those attending the rally inside the giant Ford plant were wearing Mandela buttons and T-shirts, and many were brandishing posters commemorating the event. Mandela was met by a forest of clenched fists when he and his wife entered the factory.

Before his stadium speech, Mandela appeared at a reception in downtown Detroit's Renaissance Center wearing a Detroit Pistons' hat and jacket. Pistons guard Isaiah Thomas and forward John Salley were among those attending receptions at the center.

''We are on the verge of an important breakthrough in our political struggle,'' Mandela said.

The mayor, who introduced Mandela at the Tiger Stadium rally, said later he was ''deeply impressed with his message. Nelson Mandela is a heavy dude as the young people say. He is a deep thinker.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The Senate, virtually finishing a major anti-crime bill, voted for a second time to ban nine assault weapons and approved the death penalty for major drug ''kingpins.''

A late-night effort to finish the bill Thursday failed and a final vote was set for July 11 for the legislation which had been declared all but dead three weeks ago. Only one possible amendment, dealing with more enforcement manpower in the savings and loan scandal, was left pending.

The Senate voted 50-48 for the ban on the semi-automatic assault weapons, a weapon of choice for criminals and drug dealers, in a final defeat for the administration and the National Rifle Association, which now will have try to kill the prohibition in the House.

The Senate also approved 87-12 an amendment that provides mandatory prison sentences, life imprisonment or death in case of murder, when a firearm is used in a violent or drug-related crime. The proposal also calls for mandatory sentences for dealers who sell drugs to children.

In a flurry of activity, the Senate increased to 31 the number of crimes for which the federal death penalty can be imposed.

The Senate approved 66-32 an amendment that provides the death penalty for ''major drug dealers'' even if there is no direct link to a killing.

But the Senate rejected by 55-43 an amendment permitting executions of persons convicted of murder during violation of someone's civil rights.

The long-running campaign by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to abolish the death penalty for all federal crimes and substitute a mandatory life sentence was again defeated 73-25.

''We seem to be on a death penalty rampage here,'' Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said. ''We seem to have exempted only child truancy.''

The Senate approved 96-2 an amendment to add 1,000 more FBI agents and 250 more drug enforcement agents, with orders to post some of them in rural areas where drug use is on the increase.

Also adopted 64-39 was a program of scholarships and training assistance to provide better-educated policemen at an annual authorization of $1.5 billion.

Before putting the bill aside early this month, the Senate had incorporated major provisons of the bill: expansion of the death penalty to 30 crimes; a speedier process in federal courts for death row inmates; and a prohibition on the manufacture or importation of nine military-style assault weapons.

Many of the amendments approved Thursday night increased and made mandatory prison sentences for a variety of crimes: kidnapping a child; possession of the new drug of choice ''ice;'' sex with a child under 12; child pornography; and ''buying and selling'' of children.''

The amendments would outlaw possession and viewing of child pornography; give new protections for victims of child abuse; provide treatments for juvenile delinquents who suffered child abuse. The measures also would expand the program under which prisons use tents to house convicts and would deny inmates frills such as color television and pool tables.

An agreement worked out by Democratic and Republican leaders, which almost collapsed, assured a final vote on the anti-crime bill which was once seen as hopelessly deadlocked by Republican refusal to cut short debate.

The Senate approved the agreement after Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, withdrew earlier objections that threatened to end any chance of the Senate passing an anti-crime bill in this session.

As soon as the agreement was approved, Gramm offered an amendment to kill the assault weapon bill and substitute mandatory sentences for the use of firearms in a violent or drug-related crime.

But Democrats immediately moved to attach the once-passed ban as a rider to the Gramm amendment, forcing another showdown on prohibition against the military-style assault weapons. The strategy forced the first critical vote on the ban.

''Instead of having to choose between those God-awful weapons and controlling crime, let's have both,'' said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

But Gramm argued that the ban would have no real effect, saying ''those who are going to violate the law are going to violate the gun control law. It is no real impediment to people shooting guns to kill people.''

Gramm said that the first time the Senate voted there was no alternative to the ban. But this time, he said, senators ''have an alternative to gun control and that is criminal control.''

LUSAKA, Zambia (JUNE 29) UPI - Police evicted University of Zambia students and closed the campus Friday after a clash between students and riot squads sparked days of anti-government protests that killed 30 people and threatened President Kenneth Kaunda's rule.

''We were rounded up ... and ordered out with our luggage ... we were told to sit out in the cold and wait for transport home,'' one student said. Police confirmed the campus was sealed and said Lusaka was quiet.

Kaunda, dealing with the worst crisis of his 26-year leadership, said Thursday of the riots and looting that began Monday, ''Zambia will not allow itself to be ruled by thuggery.''

He vowed to crack down on the demonstrators, who were protesting against the doubled price of the staple cornmeal - part of economic austerity measures - and Kaunda's one-party rule.

Police have detained up to 550 people, and about 200 were wounded in running battles or crossfire. But security sources relaxed their vigil on the capital Thursday, when the turmoil eased, and Kaunda toured Lusaka pledging to not abandon his steps to stabilize the tottering economy.

Newspapers reported 23 deaths but unofficial sources put the figure at up to 30, and hospitals, makeshift aid stations, and support workers said most of the 200 wounded were discharged by Friday.

Kaunda has blamed ''enemies of Zambia for inciting people in many places '' and officials have called the turmoil the most serious threat the 66-year-old president has faced since he took office upon independence from Britain in 1964.

Sympathizers joined students in battling the police and the conflict spread north, where during Zambia's last major civil unrest in 1986, security forces shot dead 15 people protesting food-price increases in the nation's copper region.

Students accused Kaunda of balking on introducing a multi-party democracy and breaking promises to feed all the people.

Many of Zambia's 10 million citizens are starving as the copper-based economy struggles against decades of economic mismanagement and socialist experiments to introduce a free-market agriculture-based system.

Kaunda, who cut short a working holiday Tuesday to return to the capital, had left town Monday apparently to discuss economic remedies with advisers.

TOKYO (JUNE 29) UPI - An explosion rocked a fireworks factory in western Japan Friday, killing five workers and injuring five, one seriously, police said.

Police said the explosion occurred about 11 a.m. at the factory of Toyohashi Fireworks Co. in Aichi state, about 150 miles southwest of Tokyo.

One man and four women were killed in the blast and subsequent fire at the factory in the small town of Hirano, police said.

Five other employees were injured and taken to hospitals, where one was in serious condition, police said.

Initial reports said the explosion occurred at a storeroom where about 440 pounds of black powder was kept, they said. The cause of the accident was under investigation.

The blast destroyed two of 14 factory buildings in the company's compounds police said.

Firefighters brought the blaze under control in about 30 minutes.

MOSCOW (JUNE 29) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl will visit the Soviet Union July 15-16 at the invitation of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, the official Tass news agency said Friday.

Tass did not describe the purpose of Kohl's visit, but his talks with Gorbachev are expected to focus on the rapid movement toward German unification, which will be advanced Sunday with the union of the West German and East German currencies.

Kohl has pledged a massive influx of aid to bolster Gorbachev's flagging economic reforms, and he urged European Community leaders gathered in Dublin, Ireland, this week to make similar commitments of assistance.

Kohl's pledge of economic help is widely viewed as part of an attempt to gain acceptance by Gorbachev of a single Germany's membership in NATO, which Moscow has steadfastly opposed.

BOMBAY, India (JUNE 29) UPI - A five-story building on the edge of the central business district collapsed following heavy rains, killing at least 29 people, seriously injuring 22 and trapping others in the rubble, officials said Friday.

The collapse of the 70-year-old Yusef Patel building late Thursday was the first such incident of the current monsoon season. About 2,000 buildings in the city are considered to be in danger of collapse, but the Yusef Patel had not been identified as a threat.

The building, located in the densely populated Pydhonie district, housed a number of shops, including goldsmiths and diamond dealers. Authorities said most of the people in the building worked or lived there.

Fire brigades rushed to the scene following the collapse but were hampered in their rescue efforts by the close proximity of buildings in the crowded area. They eventually broke through the walls of the neighboring buildings in an attempt to reach those trapped, fire brigade sources said.

Rescue workers had to use gas torches to cut through steel beams and metal window gratings to reach at least 109 people who were trapped. It was not known how many others remained under the debris.

Authorities said 29 bodies had been dragged from the rubble by Friday afternoon.

Twenty-two of the survivors were seriously injured, while the others rescued sustained only minor injuries and were treated and released at local hospitals.

Authorities have begun an investigation into the collapse.

At least 45 people have been killed in rain-related disasters in Bombay so far this monsoon season.

(JUNE 29) UPI - The Senate has given up on a late-night effort to finish a major anti-crime bill. But work is almost done and a final vote is set for July 11th. Senators approved the death penalty for major drug traffickers. The chamber rejected an amendment to abolish the death penalty for all federal crimes.

The capital of Zambia quieted down yesterday after three days of anti-government rioting. Officials say up to 30 people died in the riots that followed the African nation's decision to double the price of corn meal. Police detained up to 550 people, many of them students.

An off-duty Chicago police officer was shot and killed in an alley behind his North Side home last night. A neighbor had summoned officer John Martin to help chase away a man tampering with his car. Martin was shot in the heart. A suspect was arrested in a near-by building.

The former police chief in Brockton, Massachusetts, has pleaded guilty to charges that he stole cocaine from the evidence room. Former Chief Richard Sproules said he stole the cocaine to support a five-year drug habit. He called himself a ''ruined man.''

An armored car guard was shot and critically wounded in a robbery in Philadelphia yesterday. Police believe the hold-up was committed by two suspects involved in four similar robberies since March. NO one was seriously hurt in the previous heists.

Congress gave final approval late last night to a bill that would allow states to dip into their 1991 funds to pay for a special supplemental food program for low-income women and their children. A money crunch was forcing people off the program rolls. The measure now goes to the White House.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Wildfires in the West... budget negotiations in Washington... a trade agreement in Japan... the latest news developments from across the nation and around the world... U-P-I has the details.

Firefighters say damage from the inferno raging near Santa Barbara, California, is one of the most devastating fires to ever hit the area. Hundreds of people have been burned out of house and home because of the blaze, which officials say was set by an arsonist.

More than 500 homes worth a total of 200-Million dollars have been destroyed, and fire bosses are NOT speculating when the blaze will be contained.

By late last night, the four-thousand-acre fire still burned out of control... but a 20-degree drop in temperatures and higher humidity helped prevent it from spreading.

The fire was burning in two areas last night, in canyons and along ridges about six miles from the Santa Barbara city limits. The blaze is one of four major fires racing across Southern California, fueled by three-digit heat and four years of drought.

Several firefighters and residents were injured, including a helicopter pilot who broke his leg when his chopper went down while dropping water on the Santa Barbara fire.

Governor George Deukmejian has declared a state of emergency in response to the Santa Barbara fire as well as one that leveled dozens of homes in the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale.

Firefighters in Arizona also have their hands full with a raging fire in the Tonto National Forest. The fire spread to 24-thousand acres yesterday, but firefighters managed to save a church camp and a development of summer homes.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (JUNE 29) UPI - The foreign minister of Hungary, which plans to withdraw from the Warsaw Pact, met Friday with top NATO officials but said the question of switching alliances was not raised.

The Soviet Union's security concerns rather than Hungary's situation is the crucial issue facing European policymakers, said Foreign Minister Geza Jeszenszky.

''I think the key to the future will be not whether one country or another changes alliances but rather to alleviate the fears of isolation in a power that is, after all, a nuclear superpower,'' he said.

Hungary's Parliament on Tuesday voted 232-0 to leave the crumbling Warsaw Pact by the end of 1991. The vote binds the government to begin negotiations with Warsaw Pact members on Hungary's withdrawal.

Jeszenszky said prospects of joining NATO was ''not discussed at all'' during two hours of talks with NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner and alliance ambassadors at NATO headquarters.

''Nobody can see the future but certainly Hungary does not want to make the European security situation less stable than it is today,'' Jeszenszky said.

''Even if it was possible politically for us to think about applying for membership to NATO, that would not be conducive to security right now,'' he said. ''We have to bring the Soviet Union into something quite parallel quite independent of NATO, into a European security arrangement.''

The Soviet Union want the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to replace the old adversarial blocs as the guarantor of Europe's stability.

Woerner said, ''We will, I think, establish political contacts, and whatever we can do to support democracy and economic development of Hungary will happen.''

(JUNE 29) UPI - Black South African leader Nelson Mandela told an enthusiastic crowd in Detroit last night he is more than fond of the music of Motown.

Mandela said while he was in prison, he listened to and appreciated the sound of Detroit- what he called ''Motortown.'' Mandela told a crowd of 49-thousand that when he reached Detroit, he recalled some of words of songs sung by Marvin Gaye.

Quoting Mandela now- ''Brother, brother, there's far too many of you dying. Mother, mother, there's far too many of you crying.''

Mandela said the words are a reflection of the South African condition. As he put it- ''For how long must our brothers and sisters go on dying?'' He responded- ''Not for long.''

Mandela appeared at a sold-out rally at Tiger Stadium near the end of his eight-city tour. He'll head to Los Angeles today and Oakland tomorrow.

Reductions in Social Security payments and drastic cuts in defense spending are being considered by congressional and White House budget negotiators.

The Republican and Democratic bargainers gave serious consideration yesterday to reducing Social Security benefits- one of the most sensitive issues in the budget. Democrats at the budget summit proposed drastic cuts in defense spending.

Congressman Silvio Conte, a Massachusetts Republican, says there was talk about a possible three-month delay in annual Social Security cost-of-living adjustments.

But summit participants say NO specific cuts in Social Security, Medicare or any of the other formula-set federal entitlement programs have been approved.

House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, a California Democrat, explained it in these words- ''While NO one has said NO... NO one has said yes, either.''

Panetta also said he was proposing, with the backing of most of the Democratic negotiators, a 16-BILLION-dollar cut in defense spending. He said it would require ''a dramatic scale-back'' in the ''star wars'' missile defense system and other high-priced military hardware.

(JUNE 29) UPI - A major anti-crime bill is almost wrapped up in the Senate.

A late-night effort to finish the bill failed- but a final vote is scheduled July 11th for the legislation. Only one possible amendment is still pending. It deals with more enforcement manpower in the savings and loan scandal.

Senators voted for a second time to ban nine semi-automatic assault weapons- the weapon of choice for criminals and drug dealers. Senators also approved the death penalty for major drug kingpins. The bill also calls for mandatory prison terms for dealers who sell drugs to children.

The Senate also approved an amendment that provides mandatory prison sentences, life imprisonment or death in case of murder, when a gun is used in a violent or drug-related crime.

The Senate increased to 31 the number of crimes for which the federal death penalty can be imposed... but rejected an amendment permitting executions of persons convicted of murder during violation of someone's civil rights.

Many of the amendments approved last night increased and made mandatory prison sentences for a variety of crimes- kidnapping a child... possession of the new drug ''ice''... sex with a child under 12... child pornography... and ''buying and selling'' of children.''

(JUNE 29) UPI - Japanese diplomats say a willingness by President Bush to consider raising taxes to reduce the budget deficit helped facilitate a U-S-Japanese agreement on economic reforms. Assistant Treasury Secretary Charles Dallara says the new agreement should help reduce trade imbalances.

Dallara says the pact also should lead to more efficient, open, and competitive markets. Japan has committed itself to numerous measures that would open its markets considerably, such as reforming its distribution systems.

Japan also agreed to discouraging business practices that exclude foreign goods and to punish price-fixers. U-S officials say the pact should lower the chronic U-S trade deficit with Japan within two to three years. Last year the deficit stood at 49-BILLION dollars.

Both Japanese Prime Minister Kaifu and President Bush called the trade talks successful.

Lithuanian lawmakers this morning are debating a moratorium on the republic's drive for independence. It's NOT clear which path the legislators will ultimately choose as the Parliament seems evenly split.

Earlier, lawmakers applauded a man old enough to remember pre-war Lithuania. The 82-year-old man asked the deputies to remember the Lithuanians who died in Siberian camps.

The chief librarian and the Institute of Lithuanian Language and Literature told legislators- ''All Lithuanians waited for this declaration of independence for 50 years.''

The debate comes after a surprise meeting between Lithuanian President Landsbergis, Lithuanian Prime Minister Prunskiene and Soviet President Gorbachev .

Prunskiene told Parliament Gorbachev was very clear on what a moratorium would mean. The door would be open for negotiations with Moscow and economic sanctions imposed by the Kremlin would be lifted.

Landsbergis says he still has reservations about postponing the declaration of sovereignty.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (JUNE 29) UPI - Engineers pumping rocket fuel into the shuttle Atlantis's external tank Friday detected a leak similar to one that grounded the shuttle Columbia last month.

In what could be another major setback for NASA's launch schedule, sensors detected high levels of hydrogen gas around a critical fuel line fitting blamed for delaying Columbia's planned May 30 blastoff.

''We have stopped flowing propellant at this time,'' a NASA official said. ''There was a leak detected ... at the orbiter-to-external tank disconnect. We did pick up some leakage at that point and have stopped flowing liquid hydrogen.''

Top NASA managers were on hand for the unusual test, wrapping up a two-day flight readiness review to clear Atlantis for launch next month on a secret mission to ferry a hush-hush Pentagon payload into orbit. But with an apparently major leak in Atlantis's fuel line system, the flight likely will be delayed.

The test began shortly before 8 a.m., a day late because of weather concerns, when about 20,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen were pumped into the tank to condition the shuttle's fuel lines to the minus 423-degree temperature of the frigid propellant. Engineers then began high-speed fueling.

It was at that point during Columbia's fueling the night before its planned May 30 blastoff that hydrogen gas began spewing into the ship's engine compartment from a 17-inch-wide fuel line fitting where the main propellant line enters the belly of the orbiter.

Signs of a leak aboard Atlantis appeared almost immediately near a 4-inch line adjacent to the primary 17-inch fuel line in the disconnect fitting.

Atlantis and its five-man, all-military crew had been expected to be cleared for launch on the morning of July 16 - one day later than planned because of the fueling test delay.

As usual with such military missions, details are classified. But sources have said liftoff is planned for around 8 a.m. and that Atlantis will be launched into a 190-mile-high orbit tipped 28.5 degrees to the equator. The mission is expected to last about four days.

But officials said if a leak like Columbia's showed up during the tanking test, Atlantis would be grounded and NASA's shuttle launch schedule would be faced with a major disruption. That appeared to be the case, although complete test results were not immediately available.

Columbia's launch last month on a 10-day astronomy mission was called off just six hours before liftoff when sensors detected explosive hydrogen gas spewing into the ship's engine room during fueling for the planned May 30 launch.

Engineers traced the leak to somewhere inside a massive 17-inch-wide ''disconnect'' fitting where the fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter. The disconnect fitting allows the tank to be jettisoned after the shuttle reaches orbit.

Columbia could not be fixed at the launch pad and NASA managers reluctantly ordered the spaceplane back to its hangar. At the same time, they decided to proceed with plans to launch Atlantis next month on its military mission.

A critical 17-inch valve assembly on the tank side of Columbia's disconnect fitting passed a series of tests over the weekend, prompting NASA managers to order the disconnect hardware aboard Columbia to be removed and replaced with a valve assembly built for the new shuttle Endeavour.

Engineers had hoped to have Columbia ready for another launch try as early as Aug. 12, but that date would appear to be in jeopardy given the apparent leak aboard Atlantis.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (JUNE 29) UPI - Czechoslovakia's new government resigned and was reappointed by President Vaclav Havel Friday to satisfy a legal requirement to ensure its constitutionality.

Legislators had suggested the new government had not been constitutionally appointed when Havel announced it Wednesday.

Under the 1961 constitution, the government is required to resign after the first session of a newly elected Parliament, but Wednesday night's session of the Federal Assembly was prolonged as deputies wrangled over electing new parliamentary officers.

With Havel and a national television audience waiting to see the new government sworn in, the president administered the oath of office to Prime Minister Marian Calfa and his new goivernment 90 minutes before Parliament adjourned. The move left the country with a new government that ought to have resigned at the close of the Wednesday night session.

After several deputies questioned the procedure Thursday, Havel accepted the new government's resignation on Friday and immediately re-appointed it.

The new ''government of national sacrifice'' is the result of 18 days of negotiations following the victory in parliamentary elections of Civic Forum and its Slovak twin, Public Against Violence, the pro-democracy movements that led November's Velvet Revolution and overthrew 42 years of communist rule.

The parliamentary electins June 8-9 were the country's first free vote in 44 years.

Later Friday, Havel presented the new government to Parliament and outlined the tasks he has set for it. The government will present its formal plan to parliament July 3.

''The renewed Czechoslovak state must rest on such principles as real political pluralism, freedom of speech, association and assembly, a balanced role of the legislative, executive and judicial powers and local administration in all spheres,'' the president said.

''It must not be based on a sole ideology or political concept,'' he said.

''It must proceed from respect for man, human rights and the bequest of our forefathers.''

Havel said for Czechoslovakia to become a prosperous state, it must pass from a centralized, totalitarian economy to a functioning market economy.

''This process will be most complex since so far it has not been achieved anywhere,'' he said.

Havel expressed his full confidence in Calfa, a former top communist official who switched his support to Civic Forum during the revolution, saying ''his moral profile is clean.''

Havel also outlined his plan to reorganize the government and to halve the size of the 300-member Federal Assembly, while devolving some of its powers on the separate Czech and Slovak National Assemblies.

The government has shrunk from 23 to 17 members, but will include an anti-trust office, an environment commission and a ministry for national economic strategy. Those changes were apparent in the makeup of the new government, but Parliament must approve any changes in its structure.

Havel formalized his plans to put the secret police, now the Office for the Protection of the Constitution and Democracy, under direct control of Parliament. Disputes involving the former interior minister's handling of the secret police and its files embittered the June election campaign.

(JUNE 29) UPI - A raging fire burns within six miles of the Santa Barbara city limits, but fire officials say easing winds and higher humidity is helping firefighters prevent the blaze from spreading. The inferno, apparently set by an arsonist, has destroyed more than 500 homes and left hundreds of people homeless. The Santa Barbara fire is one of four major blazes racing through southern California. Dozens of homes also were leveled in the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale.

The drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry is to resume this morning. Defense lawyer Kenneth Mundy contends Barry was lured by former model Rasheeda Moore into using the drug. Earlier, Moore testified she used cocaine with Barry more than 100 times.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Budget negotiators are considering whether to reduce Social Security benefits, but both Republican and Democrat participants say NO specific cuts have been approved. Democrats have come up with their own plan to cut the budget deficit- a defense spending cut 10-BILLION dollars more than requested by President Bush for 1991. Both proposals indicate new movement in the talks which have displayed little progress since they began in the middle of May.

Congress has approved and sent to the White House a bill allowing states to dip into their 1991 coffers to continue funding a special supplemental food program for low-income women and children. Supporters of WIC- which stands for women, infants, and children- say without congressional action up to 280-thousand people would be dropped from the program. Unexpectedly high food prices are to blame for the shortage in funds.

A school teacher testified in New York yesterday that he was attacked and severely beaten in Central Park the same night a woman jogger was gang-raped, beaten and left for dead. 41-year-old John Loughlin told a packed courtroom he was jogging around the park when he stopped because he saw a group of youths standing around a person laying on the ground. In earlier testimony, police said Loughlin looked as if he had been ''dipped in a bucket of blood'' after being attacked.

A judge in New York City has ordered weary jurors to continue deliberating the case of John Vento, the third person to be tried in the racial killing of Yusuf Hawkins. GENEVA (JUNE 29) UPI - Members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have extended the term of Arthur Dunkel, the group's director general, by 15 months through the end of 1992.

Dunkel's term was slated to expire in September 1991.

The GATT Council agreed that Dunkel, the head of the free trade regulatory agency since 1980, should stay in office to supervise the introduction of agreements in the current Uruguay Round liberalization talks.

The most ambitious of all GATT negotiations, the Uruguay Round is scheduled to end with a package agreement in December. However, it is widely conceded the toughest issues such as farm trade and services not be resolved until next year.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 29) UPI - The NATO summit in London next week will produce a non-aggression declaration toward the Warsaw Pact, the Atlantic alliance's top official said Friday.

''You will get a very clear message about the peaceful intentions of our members, about changes happening at this very moment in NATO and also about the non-aggressive character of our alliance,'' said NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner.

''We are just preparing it,'' he said, so ''the concrete form of such a declaration has not been decided upon.''

Woerner said he would prefer a declaration to be signed by member nations individually, rather than a non-aggression treaty binding the alliance as a whole.

The 16 NATO heads of state seek to win Soviet acceptance of a united Germany in the Western alliance and plan to send reassuring signals to the Soviet Union from the London summit on Thursday and Friday.

''We want to build a new European order of cooperation and security,'' Woerner said after meeting with Hungary's foreign minister. ''NATO is changing but it will maintain its character as an instrument of stability.''

The NATO secretary general avoided a question on whether the London summit would reaffirm the alliance's doctrine of ''flexible response,'' which calls for the first use of nuclear weapons if necessary to repulse an overwhelming conventional attack.

Adapting to changing circumstances ''will somehow also change the role of nuclear weapons,'' Woerner said.

''But one thing is sure,'' he said. ''We want to maintain a coherent defense which makes wars impossible. We do not want to make Europe safe for conventional wars. We remain interested in preventing conventional and nuclear wars.''

Many nuclear planners say the flexible response strategy is obsolete because NATO short-range missiles based in West Germany are aimed at the now-friendly countries of Eastern Europe.

Last month, NATO scrapped plans to modernize land-based nuclear missiles and artillery but seeks to replace the short-range systems with an air-launched Tactical Air-to-Surface Missile now under development.

BATON ROUGE, La. (JUNE 29) UPI - Foes of abortion are calling on lawmakers to override an expected gubernatorial veto on a tough anti-abortion bill and have asked some reporters to persuade Gov. Buddy Roemer to sign the measure into law.

On Thursday, 230 demonstrators circled state Sen. Joe McPherson's office, sang ''Jesus Loves the Little Children'' and asked the lawmaker to vote to override the expected veto.

Despite the protest, McPherson - who voted against the bill - said he would not vote to override the expected veto. The Democrat has said he wants exceptions for rape and incest in the bill, exceptions that were not accepted by the Legislature.

At about the same time, at least two Baton Rouge-area political reporters were contacted by a woman who asked them to beg the governor to sign the bill into law.

The anti-abortion bill is on Roemer's desk. Roemer has repeatedly said he would veto the legislation because it did not contain the rape and incest exceptions.

''I'll take the next few days to think it through, look at all the details '' Roemer said late Thursday. ''We're looking at the bill now and getting our message together and there's always flak on a veto, particularly on an issue this important and this difficult.''

The governor has 10 days to sign, override or ignore the bill. Should he take no action, it would lapse into law. Should he sign it, the legislation likely would become a test case before the Supreme Court to ban almost every abortion in the nation.

An override of Roemer's veto appears unlikely because both houses of the Legislature would have to give two-thirds approval to such action. Senators have said they do not have the 26 votes necessary for the override.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Sales of new single-family homes - helped along by a dip in prices - edged up 0.4 percent in May in the first gain since last November, the government said Friday.

The modest advance follows a 5.2 percent drop in April and a 7.8 percent plunge in March, according to revised figures released by the Commerce Department and Housing and Urban Development Department.

''Sales of new one-family homes in May were at a sesaonally adjusted annual rate of 532,000,'' the government said. ''Before seasonal adjustment, an estimated 50,000 new houses were sold in May.''

The median price of a new house fell to $128,500 in May from $133,400 in April, while the average price dropped to $150,400 in May from $154,200 in April, the government report said.

The number of new single-family dwelling remaining on sale at the end of last month declined by 1.1 percent, and the supply of new houses on the market stood at 8.2 months, down from 8.4 months in April, the report also said.

Home sales by region:

-Northeast, down 10.6 percent.

-Midwest, up 7.9 percent.

-South, down 1 percent.

-West, up 4.9 percent.

Private analysts were split on their expectations for the May housing data with some predicting a nationwide decline of 3.8 percent and others calling for a surge of 2.6 percent in home sales over April.

Despite lower costs, ''new home prices are at a major disadvantage in the current housing market,'' said a market letter by Mitsubishi Bank in New York. ''New home prices are about 30 percent higher than existing home prices.''

The bank letter also said ''what appears to be happening is that more people are staying put and fixing up their existing house.''

ROANOKE, Va. (JUNE 29) UPI - Gov. L. Douglas Wilder says he is nothing more than friends with Patricia Kluge despite published reports Friday he spent two recent weekends with the estranged wife of John Kluge, the richest man in the country.

A source at Kluges' Albemarle Farms estate told the Roanoke Times & World-News that Patricia Kluge, 41, spent Memorial Day weekend with Wilder who has been divorced for more than 10 years, at Camp Pendleton near Virginia Beach.

The same source also said she spent a four-day weekend with him in Nantucket, Mass., on June 7-10.

''We're friends,'' Wilder, 59, said before a speech in Hot Springs Thursday. ''Both of the Kluges are friends and that is it.''

Patricia and John Kluge cited irreconcilable differences when they separated about two months ago after nine years of marriage. They have a 6-year-old son.

John Kluge, who contributed $200,000 to Wilder's succesful bid to become the nation's first black elected governor, is listed by Forbes magazine as America's wealthiest man, worth an estimated $5.2 billion. As part of their settlement, John Kluge gave Patricia the Charlottesville mansion and the annual interest from $1 billion.

Candace Campbell, Patricia Kluge's spokeswoman, acknowledged that ''rumors are rampant'' about the governor and her client, who has made at least one unannounced visit to Wilder at his office.

Campbell said Patricia Kluge considers Wilder a ''close friend.''

The Charlottesville Daily Progress reported Friday that the governor has traveled to Charlottesville, where Patricia Kluge lives in a 45-room mansion, three of the past five weekends. The newspaper said during the two most recent trips, June 16 and 24, the governor attended private parties also attended by Patricia Kluge.

On June 16, Wilder flew to Castle Hill, home of Albemarle County businessman Russell Pace, for a dinner with guests that included Kluge. Pace worked in Wilder's gubernatorial campaign to raise funds for his election.

The following weekend, Kluge hosted a dinner party for four, including the governor, writer Rita Mae Brown and Carolyn Van Clief, a former Charlottesville shop owner. The party was held in honor of Van Clief's 40th birthday.

The Charlottesville newspaper also reported Kluge accompanied Wilder to Camp Pendleton, a popular retreat with Virginia governors, on the Memorial Day weekend, and hinted that Kluge was one of four people who accompanied Wilder to Nantucket in a state plane. The paper said Wilder has repaid the state $3,707 for that personal trip.

Speculation about Wilder's friendship with Patricia Kluge increased this week after The Washington Post revealed state police plane and helicopter logs showed he used a helicopter for 18 unannounced trips, some of them including trips to Kluge's sprawling Albemarle County estate.

Republicans suggest his silence means the travels were for personal reasons and he should pay for them.

Wilder appointed Patricia Kluge to the University of Virginia board of visitors in February. She also has been active in promoting Virginia to filmmakers and accompanied Wilder on a trip to California to woo the movie industry.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Sales of new single-family homes - helped by a dip in prices - edged up 0.4 percent in May in the first gain since last November, the government said Friday.

The modest advance follows a 5.2 percent drop in April and a 7.8 percent plunge in March, according to revised figures released by the Commerce Department and Housing and Urban Development Department.

''Sales of new one-family homes in May were at a sesaonally adjusted annual rate of 532,000,'' the government said. ''Before seasonal adjustment, an estimated 50,000 new houses were sold in May.''

The median price of a new home fell to $128,500 in May from from $133,400 in April, while the average price dropped to $150,400 in May from $154,200 in April, the government report said.

The number of new single-family dwelling remaining on sale at the end of last month declined by 1.1 percent, and the supply of new homes on the market stood at 8.2 months, down from 8.4 months in April, the report also said.

Home sales by region:

-Northeast, down 10.6 percent.

-Midwest, up 7.9 percent.

-South, down 1 percent.

-West, up 4.9 percent.

Private analysts were split on their expectations for the May housing data with some predicting a nationwide decline of 3.8 percent and others calling for a surge of 2.6 percent in home sales over April.

Despite lower costs, ''new home price are at a major disadvantage in the current housing market,'' said a market letter by Mitsubishi Bank in New York. ''New home prices are about 30 percent higher than existing home prices.''

The bank letter also said ''what appears to be happening is that more people are staying put and fixing up their existing house.''

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (JUNE 29) UPI - Prime Minister Ante Markovic announced proposals for privatizing state-owned industries Friday as part of the second phase of an ambitious plan to turn Yugoslavia from communism to democracy.

In a 100-minute speech to Parliament, Markovic also called for speedier political reform and warned that rising frictions between ethnic groups could undermine chances for Yugoslavia's rejuvenation and lead to conflicts and the dismemberment of the country of 23 million.

''The fanning of national passions and intolerance are the main obstacles to the construction of a democratic society,'' the communist reformer said.

In December Markovic started a five-year program of political and economic reforms designed to lead Yugoslavia out of 43 years of economically disasterous communist rule and create a democratic system that would permit integration with the rest of Europe.

In the first phase, he took aim at galloping inflation, slashing it from 64 percent per month to zero in May by freezing wages, tightening the money supply and making the Yugoslav currency, the dinar, convertible, pegging it to the West German mark.

He also proposed new laws and constitutional amendments to allow private ownership and enterprise, foreign investment, capitalist-style fiscal and monetary policies and democratic politics.

In his nationally broadcast speech Friday, Markovic announced new steps to further his plan, including proposals of privatizing state-owned industries, which he said is needed to increase productivity, competition and capital for technological improvements.

The proposals also would apply to so-called socially owned firms, which are managed by workers, have no formal owner and comprise 80 percent of Yugoslavia's businesses.

The measures, which Markovic submitted for legislative approval, would allow present and retired workers to buy limited shares in state- and socially owned enterprises.

''By selling social capital to workers, we should increase the workers' interest in firms and in their work,'' Markovic said.

He said firms that make profits will be allowed to raise wages but the raises would have to take the form of shares, and not cash.

Markovic also said the dinar would remain pegged at a 7-to-1 rate to the mark until December and urged the nation's six republics to follow the government in slashing taxes and budgets.

He urged the legislature to quickly enact amendments to the constitution that he proposed in December to legalize implementation of many of his economic proposals and political reforms.

Markovic wants to hold multi-party polls to Parliament by the end of the year, but the communist-dominated legislature has yet to approve measures to legalize political parties and free elections.

''A democratic Yugoslavia is in the interest of all our peoples and national minorities, and also in the interest of Europe,'' he said.

Resistance to Markovic's proposals has also come from the republics of Slovenia and Croatia, whose nationalist governments oppose giving federal bodies greater powers as they fear domination by Yugoslavia's 8.5 million Serbs, by far the largest ethnic group.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 29) UPI - United Steelworkers union members at a Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. plant in Ohio overwhelmingly approved a strike resolution, and thousands of members in three states are expected to follow suit, a union official said Friday.

USW leaders at the union's Pittsburgh headquarters said they are frustrated by what they consider inadequate contract proposals and reorganization plan of the steelmaker, which has been operating under Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy protection since April 1985.

Wheeling-Pitt, once based in Pittsburgh, now has its headquarters in Wheeling, W.Va. It operates plants in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

USW District 15 Director Andrew Palm said union members at Wheeling-Pitt's Yorkville, Ohio, plant overwhelmingly approved a call for a walkout if deemed necessary. Other locals are expected to approve the resolution within about 10 days, he added.

''This action is fully justified by the company's refusal, so far, to offer its workers a fair deal, in either its reorganization plan or its proposed labor agreement,'' Palm said.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh spokesman Ray Johnson said the company would have no immediate comment on the union's position.

Wheeling-Pitt has about 5,000 union employees in the three states. They are represented by 13 USW locals.

Contract negotiations have reached an impasse and no further talks are scheduled, Palm said. The last negotiating session was June 12.

Under the company's reorganization plan, union members, with millions of dollars in total claims against the company, are being offered only 18 cents on the dollar, he said.

''They (Wheeling-Pitt) are making tons of money while in bankrupcty,'' Palm contended. ''The union last year negotiated with the rest of the industry but they don't even want to come close.''

The USW's current contract with the steelmaker will expire 10 days after Wheeling-Pitt emerges from federal bankruptcy protection.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel reported net earnings of $35.6 million in the first quarter of 1990, down from $45.8 million in the same 1989 quarter.

Three groups of investors - Goldman Sacs, Oppenheimer & Co. and financier

Ronald LeBow - reached a compromise this year to jointly support the company's reorganization plan.

LONDON (JUNE 29) UPI - India refused Friday to bind itself to an international plan to phase out chemicals destroying the planet's natural ozone shield because of concern about receiving alternate technology.

Delegates said agreement was reached on most issues on the final day of a 10-day meeting of 75 nations and hailed as a significant breakthrough China's declaration of willingness to sign the 1987 Montreal Protocol on Ozone Depletion.

But they said the main holdout was India, which opposed the ozone protection plan with arguments of unfair treatment by the industrialized countries.

''Money is now no longer the problem,'' said David Trippier, Britain's minister of state for the environment. ''It's transfer of technology.''

A key outcome of the meeting was creation of a 15-nation committee to distribute a fund tentatively set at $160 million to help developing nations use alternatives to halons and chloroflourocarbons or CFCs, chemicals used as aerosols, refrigerants and foams.

Scientists believe the substances are destroying belts of ozone, which sit about 20 miles above Earth and block out life-damaging ultraviolet light. Studies indicate the disappearance of ozone will cause global ecological disaster, with global warming under the ''greenhouse effect.''

The 59 signatory nations of the Montreal Protocol have agreed to amend the protocol to have a global ban on CFC production by the end of the century. Even with the escalated timetable, scientists believe the ozone layer will not repair until the year 2070.

But India contends the $40 million allocated to help it end CFC production is inadequate and has said it will not sign the protocol unless it is given alternative ozone-friendly technology.

Both India and China are expected to become major producers of ozone-damaging cloroflourocarbons or CFCs, and as such their signatures on the Montreal Protocol was a goal at the London conference in order to make the ozone protection measures more effective.

Indian Minister of State for the Environment Maneka Gandhi said the South Asian nation would need about $600 million to retool its industries to use alternate technologies.

''We did not destroy the ozone layer,'' she said. ''You have done that already. Don't ask us to pay the price.''

India objects to the protocol's wording that parties will ''take every practical step to ensure that the best available technology would be transferred.''

Delegates said India was arguing in private sessions that the wording did not provide adequate guarantees and demanded a special loophole under which it could sign the pact but withdraw if the technology was not delivered.

It has also been asking for a 10-year funding timetable, far beyond the three years now envisaged, and fears the pact could oblige it to destroy its own manufacturing base and force it to buy CFC substitutes from the West.

But participants from industrialized nations said they could not make a special case for India, which now annually produces 10,000 tons of CFCs, but is scheduled in 25 years to be a 200,000-ton producer under plans to build 300 million refrigerators.

They have tried to assure India that developed nations will operate in good faith and that protecting the ozone layer is the overriding concern.

''India's capability to fulfill the obligations will depend on their getting the technology transfer and financial assistance that is indicated '' said one Western delegate. ''But there is a line in there that they can't cross.''

HOUSTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Continental Airlines has filed an application with the federal Transportation Department to fly from Newark, N.J., to Moscow, joining a growing list of U.S. carriers hoping to secure routes to Russia.

The Houston-based carrier said Thursday it also has applied for new service to Berlin and Frankfurt, Germany, and Rome and Milan, Italy, in a continuing effort to build international service from its East Coast hub. Continental also recently applied for service from Newark to Nagoya, Japan.

The applications ask for the new service to begin in 1991 and 1992.

''Departures would be timed such that they would be fed by our other cities, and certainly flights out of a city the size of Houston would be timed to go to these overseas destinations,'' said Continental spokesman Ned Walker.

The increased interest in Soviet routes came after a new U.S.-Soviet air travel agreement was signed in May. Under the agreement, six additional U.S. airlines will be allowed to fly between the two countries, and a planned new Soviet airline will be able to participate in U.S.-Soviet service.

Currently, only Pan American World Airways and the Soviet national airline Aeroflot fly U.S.-Soviet routes. Aeroflot began its first major marketing campaign in the United States last spring.

Commercial flights between the two countries now serve New York, Washington, Moscow and Leningrad.

Other U.S. carriers expressing interest in the routes include Delta Air Lines, United Airlines, Alaska Airlines, Northwest Airlines and American Airlines. None are seeking service out of Newark.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Residents of the Southwest breathed easier Friday as marginally cooler temperatures moved into the region, floods returned to Iowa and Minnesota farmers suffer from the wettest June in 99 years.

The Southwest, which has baked for days under a searing triple-digit heatwave blamed for seven deaths in California and Arizona, expected a change in weather for the weekend.

The weather service lifted its ''very hot'' prediction for the Dallas, Phoenix and Las Vegas, Nev., areas for the first time this week, although predicting temperatures of 111 in Las Vegas and 115 in Dallas.

Phoenix hit 115 Thursday and Tucson suffered under 113 degrees, but increasing cloudiness was expected to keep temperatures at lower levels Friday, the National Weather Service said.

In southern California, the thermometer began tilting downward after record mid week highs well beyond 100 and was expected to drop to 88 under hazy skies in Los Angeles.

Sizzling heat in Texas, where Laredo has recorded 45 days of 100-plus degree temperatures this year, showed no signs of easing Friday and an excessive heat advisory remained in effect for much of the northern part of the state.

The hot weather hampered efforts to quell thousands of acres of wildfires in Guadalupe Mountains National Park in west Texas and the Gila National Forest in southern New Mexico.

The military dispatched four firefighting C-130s to help battle a wildfire that destroyed at least 400 homes in tinder-dry Southern California.

The searing heat was blamed for three deaths in Los Angeles and four in the Phoenix area this week, medical authorities said.

Six people died earlier this week fighting a fire in the Tonto National Forest in central Arizona that still blazed Friday.

Strong thunderstorms hit the Plains early Friday with winds up to 73 mph, flooding and marble-sized hail.

As many as 100 families were evacuated in the Davenport, Iowa, area after an overnight 4-inch rainfall caused flooding for the second time in two weeks. Police Chief Ernest Lester said major streets were under water and he expected major traffic problems from flooding and malfunctioning street lights.

''You can't get from the north side to the south side because streets are closed. We've advised people to find alternative routes, but we expect some major traffic problems,'' he said.

The storm system raked northern Illinois, knocking down and uprooting trees up to 7 inches in diameter and downing power lines. Up to 40,000 customers were without power at the height of the storm.

The storm also hit southern Wisconsin where storms dumped 3 inches on rain on the Milwaukee area and hail on Dodgeville.

The weather service said a record 9.82 inches of rain fell Thursday night at the Minneapolis-St. Paul Airport, beating the 9 inches set in 1897. Ham radio operators said the Pecatonica River near Hollendale rose from its banks and flooded low-lying areas.

Minnesota's wettest June in 99 years has created a serious problem for farmers whose crops are drowning. Thousands of acres of soybeans were never planted, although planting normally ends by early June. The state Agricultural Statistics Service said nearly half the corn and soybeans that were planted are in fair to poor condition and half the topsoil is too wet for field work.

In North Dakota golf ball size hail was reported 50 miles north of Bismarck as a strong storm system moved through with heavy rains and winds of 40 mph.

Muggy conditions and 90-degree temperature were expected to return to the Southeast Friday, with more thunderstorms in the Carolinas and Florida.

Temperatures fell to an unseasonably cold 46 degrees in central Vermont in the early morning hours Friday while much of New England dipped into the 50s.

Mostly clear skies were reported in West Virginia, with lows of 55 to 65.

Cloudy skies were reported in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland, with lows in the mid to upper 60s.

More sunny weather with moderate temperatures, from the 60s to the 90s, was expected in northern California Friday.

The remnants of a storm front may bring a few more sprinkles to the northwest part of Oregon early Friday.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (JUNE 29) UPI - Prime Minister Ante Markovic announced proposals for privatizing state-owned industries Friday as part of the second phase of an ambitious plan to turn Yugoslavia from communism to democracy.

In a 100-minute speech to Parliament, Markovic also called for speedier political reform and warned that rising frictions between ethnic groups could undermine chances for Yugoslavia's rejuvenation and lead to conflicts and the dismemberment of the country of 23 million.

''The fanning of national passions and intolerance are the main obstacles to the construction of a democratic society,'' the communist reformer said.

In December Markovic started a five-year program of political and economic reforms designed to lead Yugoslavia out of 43 years of economically disasterous communist rule and create a democratic system that would permit integration with the rest of Europe.

In the first phase, he took aim at galloping inflation, slashing it from 64 percent per month to zero in May by freezing wages, tightening the money supply and making the Yugoslav currency, the dinar, convertible, pegging it to the West German mark.

He also proposed new laws and constitutional amendments to allow private ownership and enterprise, foreign investment, capitalist-style fiscal and monetary policies and democratic politics.

In his nationally broadcast speech Friday, Markovic announced new steps to further his plan, including proposals of privatizing state-owned industries, which he said is needed to increase productivity, competition and capital for technological improvements.

The proposals also would apply to so-called socially owned firms, which are managed by workers, have no formal owner and comprise 80 percent of Yugoslavia's businesses.

The measures, which Markovic submitted for legislative approval, would allow present and retired workers to buy limited shares in state- and socially owned enterprises.

''By selling social capital to workers, we should increase the workers' interest in firms and in their work,'' Markovic said.

He said firms that make profits will be allowed to raise wages but the raises would have to take the form of shares, and not cash.

Markovic also said the dinar would remain pegged at a 7-to-1 rate to the mark until December and urged the nation's six republics to follow the government in slashing taxes and budgets.

He urged the legislature to quickly enact amendments to the constitution that he proposed in December to legalize implementation of many of his economic proposals and political reforms.

Markovic wants to hold multi-party polls to Parliament by the end of the year, but the communist-dominated legislature has yet to approve measures to legalize political parties and free elections.

''A democratic Yugoslavia is in the interest of all our peoples and national minorities, and also in the interest of Europe,'' he said.

Resistance to Markovic's proposals has also come from the republics of Slovenia and Croatia, whose nationalist governments oppose giving federal bodies greater powers as they fear domination by Yugoslavia's 8.5 million Serbs, by far the largest ethnic group.

SAN ANTONIO (JUNE 29) UPI - The Supreme Court declined to free a television reporter jailed because he refused to turn over his notes of an interview in a murder case.

The nation's high court Thursday denied without written comment the request by San Antonio television station KMOL reporter Brian Karem for a stay of an order by state District Judge Pat Priest of San Antonio.

Priest ordered Karem to turn over his notes or serve six months in jail and pay a $500 fine for contempt of court.

Karem, after the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals declined to order a stay on Tuesday, turned himself in to Bexar County sheriff's deputies and began serving his jail sentence on Wednesday.

Karem has said turning over his notes would disclose who helped arrange a telephone interview he had in March 1989 with jailed murder suspect Henry David Hernandez.

Hernandez and his brother are charged in the slaying of police officer Gary Lee Williams, who was shot to death while making a routine traffic stop.

In the interview aired on KMOL, Hernandez reportedly admitted shooting the officer, but said he fired the shot in self-defense during a struggle.

Meanwhile, Hernandez's attorney, Mark Steves, filed a motion alleging jail officials arranged a second interview between Hernandez and Karem on Tuesday - the day before Karem surrendered to authorities.

''The sheriff's office has now caused defendant's right to counsel to be violated at least twice,'' Stevens wrote in a legal motion requesting a protective order for Hernandez.

Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland denied the second conversation was arranged. ''I don't know anything about it,'' the sheriff said.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 29) UPI - An investigation is under way by the Justice Department into possible antitrust violations by Northwest Airlines, a newspaper reported Friday.

Airline officials claim the department is asking questions about its reservation computer system to determine whether price-fixing has taken place, a story in the Minneapolis Star Tribune said. Most other major carriers also have been questioned about computer pricing.

Northwest also has been asked about price increases that occurred after a general fare hike by Dallas-based American Airlines in 1989. The department wants to know whether there was collusion among major carriers to fix higher prices.

The department is not investigating Northwest's dominance of the Twin Cities market, the newspaper said, because the mere existence of a near monopoly does not justify intervention.

The Justice Department's antitrust division objected to the merger of Twin Cities-based Northwest and Republic Airlines in 1986, on the basis it would result in fare hikes in the Twin Cities and other markets. The division's objections were overruled and the merger was approved.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 29) UPI - Erich Honecker, East Germany's deposed communist leader, has been charged with murder in connection with the deaths of East Germans killed trying to flee to the West, the East German news service ADN reported.

It was Honecker who was in charge of building the Berlin Wall in August 1961, when he was the Communist Party's security chief. He succeeded Walter Ulbricht as East German leader in 1971.

ADN reported that acting Prosecutor Guenterr Seidel's press office said the murder charge covered the deaths of people shot by border guards and those killed by mines and booby traps on the East-West border.

West Germany has estimated that 200 East Germans were killed trying to flee before the East German government opened the border last Nov. 9, a month after Honecker was forced out as president and Communist Party general secretary.

Previous attempts to try the 77-year-old hard-liner failed. A treason charge was dropped because of lack of evidence and corruption charges were dropped because of his poor health.

Honecker, who is said to have cancer, is living at a Soviet military hospital in East Germany. He was taken to the hospital when the East German government said it no longer could guarantee his safety.

Before going to the hospital he lived in the home of a Lutheran clergyman.

DETROIT (JUNE 29) UPI - Angry Canadian truck drivers set up pickets at the Ambassador Bridge and the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel early Friday, stopping most large trucks, police said.

Non-commercial traffic was not affected by the protest, which began shortly after midnight at the two border points between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, officials said. "Individuals can get across, but it is blocked for trucks," a U.S. Customs spokesman said.

The independent truckers, organized as Canadian Truckers Fighting Back, are protesting higher Canadian expenses and weak enforcement of some policies which they say prevented them from competing with U.S. carriers.

The blockade followed a meeting Wednesday between the truckers and Canadian Transportation Minister Doug Lewis, who truckers say did not meet their demands. Lewis' office previously had said progress was being made. Canadian truckers staged a similar blockage in late May in Detroit and other U.S.-Canadian border points.

Traffic was reported flowing smoothly across the Blue Water Bridge in Port Huron early Friday, despite a threat by Canadian truckers to shut down other border crossings at midnight. Bridge inspector David Gingery said there was no stoppage on the span that links Port Huron with Sarnia, Ontario.

Some U.S. trucking companies, anticipating the renewed protest, reportedly instructed their drivers to return to the United States by noon Thursday to avoid being caught at blocked crossings on the eve of holidays in both countries.

Big Three automakers on Thursday were apprehensive that a renewed blockade could dry up the pipeline of parts and components under the companies' just-in-time delivery systems. The May protest forced General Motors of Canada to close several plants in Ontario and forced Ford Motor Co. to place eight U.S. plants on half-shifts because of parts shortages.

Chrysler Corp. assembles minivans in Windsor, but a spokesman for Chrysler Canada Ltd. said Friday would be that plant's last day before shutting down for its annual July model changeover.

(JUNE 29) UPI - The U-S space program could have another major setback. Engineers found a leak in the external fuel tank on the shuttle Atlantis this morning. The leak is similar to one that grounded the Columbia last month. On the Atlantis, sensors detected high levels of hydrogen gas around a critical fuel line fitting... the same one blamed for delaying Columbia's lift-off. Space agency officials have NOT said yet whether the leak detected in the Atlantis will delay its launch, scheduled for mid-July.

Several fires in Southern California are still blazing out of control today. The worst, around Santa Barbara, had destroyed 567 homes by early this morning. The total number of homes destroyed from Santa Barbara south to San Diego was 613. Another fire, in the Tonto National Forest in Arizona, has destroyed 53 summer homes and is still out of control.

Heavy rain fell on the Midwest during the night. Four inches of rain fell on Davenport and Bettendorf, Iowa, causing flooding for the second time in two weeks. The Milwaukee area received three inches of rain. Rochester, Minnesota, got more than two inches. Winds up to 73 miles an hour hit northern Illinois. More temperatures in the 100's are forecast for the Southwest and highs in the 90's are expected to return to the Southeast today.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (JUNE 29) UPI - At least four people were killed in separatist violence in the Kashmir Valley in the past two days, one of them a district magistrate shot by masked assassins as he left his home, police said Friday.

Abdul Aziz Khan was killed Friday by two masked men moments after he stepped out of his home in Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state.

A statement calling Khan ''an Indian traitor and corrupt officer'' was issued by the Kashmir Students Liberation Front, which claimed responsibility for the killing and then retracted the claim. The front is one of several militant groups fighting for independence from India.

The gunmen shot Khan twice and ran from the scene. Neighbors rushed Khan to a hospital but he died about two hours later, authorities said.

Government employees have been a primary target of the various Moslem rebel groups fighting Indian rule they claim discriminates against them.

The Moslem Kashmiri separatist movement erupted into a popular uprising against largely Hindu central government in New Delhi in mid-January after security forces opened fire on demonstrators in Srinagar, killing at least 35 people.

Since then, more than 450 people have been killed in near-daily violence in the Kashmir Valley, home about 4 million Moslems.

Tens of thousands of troops deployed to Kashmir have failed to crush the movement.

On Friday morning, the body of a woman who was shot to death was discovered in the Miskeen Bagh area of Srinagar, police said.

In a separate incident, two Kashmiri Hindu women were shot dead Thursday night in their home in in Pulwama, about 20 miles south of Srinagar, by three men with automatic weapons, police said. The gunmen escaped and police said they have no suspects.

Also on Friday, a powerful bomb explosion around noon heavily damaged a government office in Sringar but caused no injuries, police said.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 29) UPI - The government has unveiled its vision of a post-apartheid constitution for South Africa in an apparent attempt to steal the limelight from African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

Constitutional Development Minister Gerrit Viljoen made the government proposal in a speech to a group of influential young Afrikaners Thursday, which was released Friday.

Viljoen proposed a two-chamber Parliament - one white and the other representing all other races - replace the current segregated three-chamber body of whites, Asians and mixed-race South Africans with no black representation.

Viljoen also proposed ''equal, universal suffrage,'' but gave no details.

In addition, he said the government is also seeking a bill of human rights assurances of an entrenched constitution and an independent judiciary.

Anti-apartheid activists and analysts swiftly dismissed Viljoen's proposals, saying they are unlikely to satisfy the key demand by Mandela and other opponents of white minority rule for a one-man-one-vote in a single Parliament.

''This does not deal with real black demands for democracy,'' said renegade Afrikaner political science expert Willem Kleynhans.

An African National Congress spokesman said, ''There's nothing much new here.''

There was no comment from President Frederik de Klerk on Viljoen's speech, which followed days of hints by ministry officials that the government will move to retake some of the limelight from Mandela.

Mandela is midway through a successful overseas tour to drum up support for the ANC and continued economic sanctions against South Africa aimed at ending white minority rule.

''Mandela's had an excellent reception,'' a constitutional planning official said, and de Klerk's racial reforms launched in February ''have taken a bit of a back seat, despite the fact that Mandela's freedom is a result of one of the reforms.''

''Now we want some publicity, and Viljoen's been building up to it since Monday,'' he added, echoing colleagues' remarks this week in reaction to Mandela's lavish U.S. reception.

''This is the furthest we've gone so far in laying down a concrete vision of something new,'' the official said. ''It's the beginning of a drive to convince people Gerrit Viljoen's got real ideas for the future South Africa.''

Mandela has said the ANC acknowledges the diversity of South African society, but in direct opposition to government proposals, including Viljoen's latest, rejects any form of group rights in a new constitution and wants one vote for all.

Any new constitution will replace the constitution pushed through in 1983 by de Klerk's predecessor, Pieter W. Botha, bringing in the three-chamber Parliament that replaced a whites-only system.

A group of Members of Parliament split from the ruling National Party in 1982 to form the far-right Conservative Party in protest against the three-chamber system, which they called a threat to the white minority rule entrenched by the Nationalists after they came to power in 1948.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - West-Point Pepperell Inc. may have to refinance a $750 million revolving credit agreement if Farley Inc. loses control of the company, according to a quarterly report released Friday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Farley Inc. paid $1.63 billion last year for a 95 percent stake in West Point-Pepperell. The company may be forced to relinquish control of the stock, however, because a Farley subsidiary that borrowed the money to finance the deal has missed principal and interest payments on a $688 million tender offer facility as well as interest payments on $700 million in junk bond financing.

In order to get the financing, West Point Acquisition Corp. - the Farley subsidiary - pledged as collateral the 28.1 million West Point shares Farley had acquired.

Acquisition Corp.'s lenders could theoretically foreclose on the stock if West Point continues to miss payments, and the filing confirms that ''it is uncertain as to whether Mr. Farley will continue to control a voting majority of (West Point-Pepperell's) stock.''

If Farley loses control of the West Point stock, West Point could be required by change-of-control loan covenants in a $750 million revolving credit agreement it renegotiated last year to pay off any outstanding balance.

Michael Bogacki, corporate controller for Farley Industries, said, ''I would anticipate (West Point) would go out and get another facility to repay the debt. They don't have the cash in their hands today.''

The SEC filing says the banks would likely waive the repayment covenant.

In addition, the subsidiary is currently negotiating with its lenders and has made an exchange offer to its security holders in an effort to restructure its obligations.

''The ultimate outcome of these negotiations cannot be presently determined,''the SEC filing says, ''but the subsidiary is hopeful it can acheive a satisfactory restructuring.''

West-Point Pepperell, based in West Point, Ga., manufactures bed and bath linens, industrial and clothing fabrics.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush defended Friday the honor and integrity of his son, Neil, a former director of a failed Denver thrift whose actions are under review by federal regulators.

''What dad wouldn't have full confidence in the integrity and honor of his son?'' Bush said at a morning news conference. ''This is a fine young man. I'm convinced that if he has done something wrong the system will so state.''

In January, the Office of Thrift Supervision considered action that would have banned Neil Bush from ever again serving as a thrift or bank director saying he violated conflict of interest rules on three occasions by failing to disclose relationships with business partners.

Upon further investigation, thrift regulators decided there was not enough evidence to support the stiff penalty and agreed to seek a softer cease and desist order, which would prohibit Bush from violating conflict of interest rules in the future.

Bush served as a director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association from 1985 until August 1988, shortly before his father was elected president. Silverado was taken over by government regulators in December 1988, four months after Bush stepped down as a director.

Bush, who lives in Denver and is in the oil industry there, has denied any wrongdoing while he served on Silverado's board. Rescuing the failed thrift is expected to cost taxpayers $1.6 billion.

According to a draft OTS document prepared in January, Bush did not disclose to Silverado's board that while it was considering taking an $8 million loss on a loan to Kenneth Good, a Denver real estate developer, Good was contemplating paying $3 million for controlling interest in JNB Exploration Co., an oil and gas drilling partnership managed by Bush.

The document also outlined charges that through one of his partnerships with Good, Bush was the beneficiary of a $900,000 line of credit approved by Silverado's board.

Neil Bush, testifying last month before the House Banking Committee, denied any wrongdoing and has contested the OTS actions against him. OTS Director Timothy Ryan, appointed by the president in April, said earlier this week that a decision on Neil Bush is still pending.

The uncertainty surrounding the Neil Bush investigation has prompted some members of Congress, primarily Democrats, to charge that the OTS is giving the case special treatment.

''Can any agency of the United States fairly and impartially investigate the son of the president of the United States,'' Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., said at a recent banking committee hearing.

President Bush, responding to reporters' questions, said he fully expects the system to work. ''And the system is going to work, whether it's the president's son or somebody else,'' he said.

The president told reporters that he will stay out of the investigation involving his son, adding that ''the system's got to go forward.'' He said his son ''would be the last to ask me in any way to get involved in any side or the other.''

The president also said he has discussed the Silverado situation with his son but ''only in that broad parental way.''

The president has five children, four of them sons. Neil, the middle child was described by his father as ''a good kid'' and the most sensitive of his sons.

''It's not easy for him but he'll do okay,'' Bush said.

NAIROBI, KENYA (JUNE 29) UPI - A Kenyan court Friday charged four newspaper executives with publishing material ''likely to cause fear, alarm and despondency'' to the public as part of a government crackdown on the press.

The managing director and three editors of the Standard newspaper in Nairobi were charged Friday after the paper ran a series of stories implying the government lied about a Nairobi slum-clearance operation that turned violent May 25.

Their arrest Thursday was the latest in a series of moves against both local and international press by the government of President Daniel arap Moi.

Police last week broke up press conferences called by advocates of a multi-party system, confiscating reporters' notebooks, film and tape. The government has shown increasing concern at calls for the replacement of Kenya's one-party political system with a multi-party one.

The four were arrested Thursday and appeared in court Friday, handcuffed and under heavy guard. They were specifically charged with publishing the first of their reports ''with the knowledge that the report was untrue and likely to cause fear, alarm and despondency to the public,'' which is illegal under Kenya's penal code.

The Standard executives - managing director Francis Muhindi, deputy editor Mitch Odero, Sunday editor Francis Mwaniki and production editor James Kimondo - were released on bail of about $6,500 pending trial on Sept. 24.

The newspaper reported in a series beginning June 24 that a Nairobi City Commission employee sent into the Muoroto district to evict squatters died in a fight there and was buried secretly. The government had said there were no deaths.

The Standard newspaper, established in 1902, is controlled by the British conglomerate Lonrho.

An assistant minister in charge of public security, John Keen, earlier this week warned the Kenyan press in general against irresponsible reporting, and said ''some of you are running out of control.''

''The Commissioner of Police is in charge of public security and he is entitled to vet any meeting if he feels that there are issues of state security at risk,'' Keen said Monday.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush's use of a quote from Abraham Lincoln to explain his reversal on his opposition to tax increases caused a chuckle among Democrats at the bipartisan budget summit talks Friday.

Bush told a White House news conference that the country's economic situation has changed and he has had to reassess his stand on taxes.

''I'm presented with new facts. I'm doing what Lincoln did - thinking anew

'' Bush said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the 1988 Democratic vice presidential nominee was asked what he thought of Bush's comparing his decision to abandon his ''no new taxes'' pledge to Lincoln's need to ''think anew.''

Bentsen, standing with other Democrats waiting for administration negotiators to arrive, did not respond immediately. But House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., sitting in front of Bentsen, did.

''Why don't you tell him (Bush) that you knew Abe Lincoln and that he's no Abe Lincoln,'' Rostenkowski quipped.

''I didn't say that - he said that,'' a laughing Bentsen said, pointing at Rostenkowski.

Bentsen, in the most memorable and dramatic exchange of his 1988 vice presidential campaign debate with Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, the Republican candidate, told Quayle: ''Senator, I served with Jack Kennedy, I knew Jack Kennedy, Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine. Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy.''

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, the chairman of the budget talks, noted that ''Lincoln's quote was: 'We must act anew, we must think anew, let us disenthrall.'''

Disenthrall means to free from bondage or slavery, to liberate.

Lincoln's exact words, from his second message to Congress on Dec. 1, 1862 in talking about ending slavery, were:

''The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty and we must rise with the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves and then we shall save our economy.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The pilot of a small airplane that crashed in a wooded area in South Mississippi last year, killing Rep. Larkin Smith, R-Miss., was not qualified to fly in the weather conditions he encountered a federal agency said Friday.

In its final report, the National Transportation Safety Board concluded that pilot Chuck Vierling was not ''instrument rated'' to fly into hazy conditions he encountered near New Augusta on the night of Aug. 13. 1989, with Smith aboard.

The likely cause of the accident, the NTSB said, ''was the in-flight loss of control by the non-instrument rated pilot after encountering instrument meteorogical combinations resulting in the airplane spirling into a wooded area.''

Board spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said there was no indication the pilot did anything wrong. He said the plane could have taken off in clearer conditions, ''but what happened was in the course of the flight'' it ran into haze.

Smith, 45, a freshman Republican from Gulfport, and Vierling, 58, also of Gulfport, were killed when the Cessna 177 crashed in the thickly wooded DeSoto National Forest near Janice in Perry County.

The single engine airplane disappeared from electronic contact shortly before 9:30 p.m. during a 90-minute flight from Hattiesburg to Gulfport. Smith had been in Hattiesburg to address a Little League baseball tournament.

The plane was found the next morning.

The two-page NTSB report said the flight took place ''in an area of reduced visibility due to haze, over an unpopulated area, at night.'' It said Vierling had voiced concerns regarding the hazy conditions to several people he was in contact with prior to the flight.

The report said pilots flying in the vicinity of the accident site estimated visibility to vary between 1 and 2 miles.

''It is not unheard of that you encounter ... instrument conditions,'' Lopatkiewics said. ''If it happens, it is the responsibility of the pilot to avoid those conditions.

''If you are not rated for instrument flying, you are not supposed to fly into instrument conditions,'' he added.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush vetoed legislation Friday that would have required employers to provide medical and parental leave, saying the measure is excessively rigid and ''ignores the realities of today's workplace.''

The veto was the 13th of the Bush administration, and like the previous 12 is expected to be upheld by Congress.

In a letter to Capitol Hill, Bush said, ''I want to emphasize my belief that time off for a child's birth or adoption or for family illness is an important benefit for employers to offer employees.''

''I strongly object, however, to the federal government mandating leave policies for America's employers and workforce,'' said Bush, saying the matter should be negotiated between work place and the employee.

Under the measure, employers with at least 50 workers would have to offer up to 12 weeks in one year of unpaid leave for workers to care for a newborn, adopted child or seriously ill parent, child, spouse or themselves.

During the leave, employees would receive health benefits and job protection.

The General Accounting Office has estimated the bill would affect 5 percent of all employers and 44 percent of all workers.

Bush said Washington should not tell employers what benefits to offer. He also said mandated benefits could preclude other possible options for workers.

The president, in his letter to Congress Friday, said the legislation ''ignores the realities of today's work place and the diverse needs of workers.''

''Some employees may believe that shorter paid leave is more important than the lenghty, unpaid leave,'' Bush said. ''Caring for a sick friend, aunt or brother might be just as critical to one employee as caring for a child is to another.''

The House passed the measure 237-187 and the Senate by voice vote. Neither chamber is expected to be able to muster the necessary two-thirds vote to override the veto.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, in sending the bill to Bush, had urged the president to reconsider his long-stated opposition and sign the measure, which he said ''provides modest but essential help for the working family.''

Foley and bill sponsor, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., noted a statement Bush made during the 1988 campaign.

''We need to assure,'' Bush said, ''that women don't have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child during a serious illness. That is what I mean when I talk about a gentler nation.''

Bush, in his veto message, said: ''My administration is strongly committed to policies that recognize that the relationship between work and family must be complementary, and not one that involves conflict.''

He said, ''If these policies are to meet the diverse needs of our nation, they must be carefully, flexibly, and sensitively crafted at the work place by employers and employees, not through government mandates.''

VILNIUS, LITHUANIA (JUNE 29) UPI - The Lithuanian Parliament declared a 100-day moratorium on its declaration of independence Friday, effective once negotiations begin with Moscow on full secession.

The compromise resolution, approved by a 69-35 vote after two days of emotional debate, reiterates the sovereign rights of Lithuania's government but agrees to meet Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand for a moratorium on the March 11 declaration of independence.

Soviet officials had promised they would lift an economic blockade imposed more than two months ago if Lithuania agreed to the moratorium. Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, who called for the moratorium before Friday's resolution, predicted the blockade would end Saturday.

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene said she was pleased with the moratorium proposal her Cabinet had made to Parliament two weeks ago after a breakthrough meeting with Gorbachev.

''I will be very happy when the negotiations start and even happier when they end successfully,'' Prunskiene said.

Landsbergis, in a key speech before the vote, supported the freeze on the republic's independence declaration for the first time.

He told the deputies that he and Prunskiene had drafted a compromise resolution declaring a moratorium on the independence proclamation, and he asked lawmakers to support it.

A former head of the Sajudis nationalist group that took over the Lithuanian government in Feb. 24 elections, Landsbergis cautioned that no independence freeze should take effect until President Mikhail Gorbachev's economic blockade ends and talks on secession begin.

''I would like to ask you not to attack this word (moratorium) like a red flag,'' he said. ''If Gorbachev wants this word, why can't we give it to him?''

Landsbergis and Prunskiene held a surprise 90-minute meeting with Gorbachev in Moscow Wednesday, Landsbergis's second with the Soviet leader in two days.

Lawmakers had expected to vote on the moratorium proposal Friday, but the legislature resumed discussions after a lunch break with a long list of deputies still scheduled to speak.

Landsbergis addressed the Parliament during an emotional morning debate on the moratorium, which Gorbachev has demanded as a condition for beginning negotiations and lifting the embargo he imposed April 18.

Landsbergis, who previously had expressed reservations about a moratorium, said the draft he and Prunskiene had written - the 14th variation proposed to Parliament - was acceptable.

He said his proposal would set a 100-day moratorium once the economic sanctions end and formal talks start, with the possibility of extension or cancellation.

The former music professor said the draft also specifies the moratorium would automatically cease if Parliament cannot function, an apparent safeguard against the imposition of direct presidential rule by Gorbachev.

''The real tension and crisis is not now - it is coming,'' Landsbergis told the deputies. ''It will start as we near the beginning of negotiations.''

Several dozen anti-moratorium demonstrators sang songs outside the Parliament, listened to a live broadcast of the legislative proceedings and hoisted posters urging lawmakers not to back off from the defiant act of independence.

One sign read ''Prunskiene betrayed Lithuania,'' another warned ''the Kremlin will cheat us'' and a third said, ''A moratorium would be Lithuania's Chernobyl,'' in reference to the 1986 nuclear power plant disaster.

Deputies who spoke in favor of a freeze said it would not mean a step back from independence, but was the only way to achieve negotiations with Moscow that would lead to true sovereignty.

''The act of the 11th of March is not so sacred,'' lawmaker Jurgis Jurgelis said. ''The goal is independence. We can do whatever we like with the means.''

Other legislators countered that Gorbachev appears to need the moratorium more than Lithuania and said the Kremlin should not be trusted.

In the debate Thursday, lawmakers applauded a man old enough to recall prewar Lithuania, who pleaded with the legislature not to freeze the independence proclamation.

Pranas Razmukas, 82, asked deputies to remember the Lithuanians who died in Siberian prison camps under dictator Josef Stalin after the Soviet Union's annexation of the Baltic states in 1940.

Prunskiene, however, urged lawmakers to support a moratorium, saying: ''Seeking negotiations does not mean a retreat, it means a step forward to independence.''

Landsbergis said the embargo, which includes a halt to oil and 85 percent of natural gas supplies, had caused losses of $173 million to the Lithuanian economy.

INDIANAPOLIS (JUNE 29) UPI - Officers of Lufthansa, West Germany's national airline, will visit Indianapolis and other U.S. cities in July to discuss starting a connector service to West Germany, Mayor William H. Hudnut said.

Hudnut disclosed the plan Thursday during a speech to a group of businessmen.

Hudnut said Lufthansa had talked previously with city and airport officials. He said officers with the airline indicated by telephone Wednesday that the service was setting up connector points with several airports in the United States, including Indianapolis.

If selected, Indianapolis would be able to establish direct flights to Frankfurt and Cologne in West Germany. Flights from Indianapolis International Airport now must connect with West German flights at Chicago O'Hare or the Greater Cincinnati International Airport at Covington, Ky.

The only direct international flights from Indianapolis currently are to Cancun, Mexico, and Toronto, Ontario.

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (JUNE 29) UPI - The military threw a curtain of security around the eastern provincial capital of Batticaloa Friday, ordering an indefinite curfew and carrying out house-to-house searches in a bid to wipe out pockets of resistance by Tamil rebels.

Heavily armed troops set up roadblocks around the city to bar people from entering or leaving. Military trucks with loudspeakers cruised the streets issuing orders for males between the ages of 12 and 50 to report to schools in the area, military sources said.

People arriving at the schools were paraded before hooded men who were said by security sources to be captured rebels. The detainees nodded or raised their hands to identify people linked to the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the rebel group that launched an offensive against the government June 12.

A military official said of about 5,000 men and boys investigated so far, about 60 had been identified as rebels and taken into custody. He said security forces were hunting for rebels, weapons and guerrilla hideouts in civilian areas.

The security measures in Batticaloa, which included house-to-house searches and an indefinite curfew, were part of an effort to stamp out rebel resistance in the eastern part of the country.

Fighting erupted in the island nation more than two weeks ago, when Tiger rebels launched coordinated attacks on four army camps in the east, killing at least 66 soldiers.

Since then nearly 1,000 soldiers, police, rebels and civilians have been killed in the fighting and hundreds of thousands of people have fled their homes to escape the violence.

The Tiger rebels have been fighting for an independent Tamil homeland in the north and east of the country. They say the Tamil minority, which is mostly Hindu, should have a separate homeland because of years of discrimination by the majority Sinhalese community, which is predominantly Buddhist.

Fierce fighting continued Friday in the northern Jaffna Peninsula, where about 400 soldiers and police are trapped inside a 300-year-old Dutch fort about 600 yards from downtown Jaffna city, 190 miles north of the capital.

Tiger rebels attacked the fort with rockets and mortars Friday, military sources said. Lt. Gen. Hamilton Wanasinghe said troops at the fort were engaged in destroying rebel bunkers around the camp but there were no fresh reports of casualties.

Earlier this week the army shelled rebel positions around the star-shaped fort, built by the Dutch in 1680 and surrounded by a moat. Air force jets also conducted bombing raids in the area.

The Indian government expressed ''great concern'' Thursday about the bombing, especially ''reports of large-scale loss of life, civilian suffering and hundreds of thousands of people rendered homeless.''

Foreign Ministry sources said Friday that Bernard Tillekeratne, the Sri Lankan foreign secretary, would travel to New Delhi Sunday to brief Prime Minister V.P. Singh on the fighting. The dispatch of the foreign secretary apparently came in reaction to the Indian statement.

Heavy fighting continued in other areas of the northern district. Two soldiers and 22 rebels were killed in a battle in Pandikulam village near Vavuniya, 135 miles north of Colombo, said a spokesman for the Defense Ministery Operations Headquarters. Eleven soldiers also were wounded.

Security forces in the northeast found the bodies of 14 slain policemen buried in a shallow pit, authorities said. The policemen belonged to the Uppuveli police station, about 12 miles north of Trincomalee, 115 miles northeast of Colombo.

The police had been rounded up by Tiger rebels shortly after the fighting began June 12.

''They had been shot in the head at point-blank range and later buried in a pit,'' an official said.

On Thursday, a defense official said the Sri Lankan military is recruiting 6,000 new soldiers to help crush the revolt by Tamil rebels in the north and east of the island nation.

The recruitment drive already has begun in the capital, where thousands of youths formed a mile-long line Thursday at Galle Face Green, an oceanside park near army headquarters, to try to join the military.

BRIDGEVILLE, PA (JUNE 29) UPI - A district justice has ruled it was improper for a town to cite a resident for keeping a snake and followup by giving the same snake an award during a community days celebration.

And the upshot is that Chomps the boa constrictor will not be exiled from the Allegheny County community of Bridgeville, at least not for now.

Carl Morton, 36, was cited March 22 for keeping a wild animal. The citation came after police learned from a local hospital that Morton had been bitten by a rat he bred to feed Chomps, at the time a baby of just four feet. Morton sought medical treatment after he developed blood poisoning from the wound.

A borough ordinance, which carries a $300 fine, does not allow residents to keep any animal or reptile not usually domesticated or raised in the area. But the same snake later was given an award for being the longest pet in the Bridgeville Community Days celebration.

District Justice Elaine McGraw dismissed the police citation Thursday, saying the borough was sending mixed signals. The justice said she had a problem with community leaders giving an award to a snake in a pet show at the same time that residents are not supposed to be ownning snakes.

''One minute, they're telling you you can't have a snake. The next, they're giving you a prize,'' she said.

McGraw has suggested that Morton asked the borough council to reconsider its exotic pet ordinance adopted in 1982 to reflect modern trends. The request is expected July 17.

Morton will not be issued any further citations until the council makes a decision on the status of the ordinance, Patrolman James Radermacher said.

Last night, Mandela received a warm welcome from 50-thousand people at a Tiger Stadium rally where the crowd roared ''Viva Nelson!'' In his speech, Mandela urged the audience to keep pressuring South Africa's white-minority government to dismantle apartheid. The African National Congress leader winds up his U-S tour on Sunday.

Engineers pumping rocket fuel into the space shuttle Atlantis found a leak similar to one that grounded the shuttle Columbia last month. It may be another setback for NASA's shuttle launch schedule. The leak appeared near a 17-inch-wide ''disconnect'' fitting where the shuttle's primary hydrogen fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter. NASA says that unlike Columbia, NO hydrogen gas was found in the engine compartment of Atlantis. NASA plans a news conference at Cape Canaveral, Florida, this afternoon.

THORNTOWN, IN (JUNE 29) UPI - Residents in the area of Old Indiana Amusement Park are a little restless these days - a 6-foot alligator is missing from the park and the operator's description of it as a ''mean critter'' has done little to calm any nerves.

Earl W. Gascoigne, manager of Old Indiana, said the 'gator disappeared six days ago. The park Thursday posted a $100 reward for the reptile's return.

Gascoigne said he considered the disappearance to be an alligator-napping because there was no evidence the animal had dug beneath a fence enclosure and ''alligators don't climb fences.''

''We think whoever took him knew what he was doing, otherwise we would have found an arm down there,'' said Gascoigne. ''He's a mean critter.''

The alligator was provided to Old Indiana by Wildlife Educational Services a Kokomo company that holds wildlife programs across the country.

The Kokomo company is helping the park and Boone County sheriff's officers search along nearby Sugar Creek daily for the alligator, named Adolph.

Larry Battson, keeper for Adolph, said the alligator probably would hide from people and not attack. He also believes that anyone who might have taken the reptile also likely has set him free.

''You know, a 6- or 7-foot alligator can break a man's leg with a swipe of its tail,'' he said.

(JUNE 29) UPI - A rare salamander could halt construction of a new Massachusetts prison in a region where a sheriff took over a National Guard armory last winter because of jail overcrowding. The blue-spotted salamander was discovered last week in a pool on the site of a planned 11-hundred-bed prison in Ludlow. The new jail was intended to alleviate overcrowding that prompted Springfield Sheriff Michael Ashe to take over an armory last February to house inmate overflow from his jail.

New research indicates that the cells that control hair growth may be located in a different part of the hair follicle than previously thought. Dr. Robert Lavker at the University of Pennsylvania says study results may lead to new treatments for baldness. The study found that hair growth did NOT appear to be controlled by the lower bulb of the hair follicle, which extends from the root. Lavker says he believes cells controlling growth come from the bulge portion of the follicle.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (JUNE 29) UPI - About 1,000 victims of the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster protested Friday at the home of Prime Minister V.P. Singh, charging the government has been too slow in its effort to provide relief to those injured in the world's worst industrial accident.

''The procedures laid out by the Madhya Pradesh (state) government are so slow and cumbersome that only some 42,000 of the total 600,000 Bhopal victims have received any kind of interim relief,'' a spokesman for the protesters told the Press Trust of India.

''At the current pace it will take at least two years before all the victims begin to get any form of relief,'' said Abdul Jabbar Khan, speaking for the some 1,000 protesters who gathered at Singh's home Friday.

PTI said an association of women victims of the gas disaster submitted a memorandum to the prime minister demanding the creation of a national commission with power to monitor and supervise all relief operations for those injured in the disaster.

More than 3,300 people were killed and an estimated 200,000 injured in the pre-dawn hours of Dec. 3, 1984, when 40 tons of methyl isocyanate vaporized gas spewed from the now-defunct Union Carbide plant in the Madhya Pradesh state capital of Bhopal, 400 miles south of New Delhi.

Doctors say about five people die every week from the lingering effects of the gas, and many victims are unable to work and require constant medical attention.

The Indian government announced in January it would begin paying a monthly interim relief of $11 to all gas victims for the next three years. The government hopes by the end of that period, all pending court cases arising from the disaster will have been settled.

As many as 600,000 people have claimed to be victims of the gas disaster, but pending court cases have prevented them from receiving compensation.

The government of former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi approved a settlement with Union Carbide under which the multinational paid $470 million as compensation in return for an end to all criminal and civil litigation.

Many people injured in the disaster opposed the settlement as insufficient and the new government has announced it would seek a cancellation of the agreement.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 29) UPI - Dismayed rocket engineers found a fuel leak aboard the shuttle Atlantis Friday similar to one that grounded Columbia last month, a major setback that will require a trip back to the hangar for repairs and a weeks-long launch delay.

The leak showed up around a 17-inch ''disconnect'' fitting where the shuttle's primary hydrogen fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter. A formal flight readiness review to clear Atlantis for launch was canceled as engineers spent the morning trying to pinpoint the location of the leak.

''We can't fly. We won't fly until we understand it and have it fixed,'' said William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight. ''Probably the minimum time of delay is on the order of two weeks.''

NASA has about one month to get Atlantis off the launch pad without triggering a major disruption to the space agency's launch schedule. While Lenoir said he was confident the problem can be fixed, he said a roll back the Vehicle Assembly Building for repairs was a virtual certainty.

''We have not made a decision to roll back but none of us here can imagine a scnenario that doesn't lead to that,'' he said.

Unlike the leak that grounded Columbia, no hydrogen gas was detected in Atlantis's engine compartment. The leak only showed up when supercold liquid hydrogen was flowing through the shuttle's 17-inch fuel line in the area of the disconnect fitting.

While it was not immediately clear how serious the problem was or what would be required to fix it, Lenoir said flights would not resume until the trouble is resolved.

The unusual fueling test was conducted specifically to search for leaks like the one blamed for Columbia's launch delay.

The test began shortly before 8 a.m., a day late because of weather concerns, when about 20,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen were pumped into the tank to condition the shuttle's fuel lines to the minus 423-degree temperature of the frigid propellant. Engineers then began high-speed fueling.

It was at that point during Columbia's fueling the night before its planned May 30 blastoff that hydrogen gas began spewing into the ship's engine compartment from a 17-inch-wide fuel line fitting where the main propellant line enters the belly of the orbiter.

Atlantis and its five-man, all-military crew had been expected to be cleared for launch on the morning of July 16 - one day later than planned because of the fueling test delay.

As usual with such military missions, details are classified. But sources have said liftoff is planned for around 8 a.m. and that Atlantis will be launched into a 190-mile-high orbit tipped 28.5 degrees to the equator. The mission is expected to last about four days.

But officials said if a leak like Columbia's showed up during the tanking test, Atlantis would be grounded and NASA's shuttle launch schedule would be faced with a major disruption. That appeared to be the case, although complete test results were not immediately available.

Columbia's launch last month on a 10-day astronomy mission was called off just six hours before liftoff when sensors detected explosive hydrogen gas spewing into the ship's engine room during fueling for the planned May 30 launch.

Engineers traced the leak to somewhere inside the massive 17-inch-wide disconnect fitting where the fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter. The disconnect fitting allows the tank to be jettisoned after the shuttle reaches orbit.

Columbia could not be fixed at the launch pad and NASA managers reluctantly ordered the spaceplane back to its hangar. At the same time, they decided to proceed with plans to launch Atlantis next month on its military mission.

A critical 17-inch valve assembly on the tank side of Columbia's disconnect fitting passed a series of tests over the weekend, prompting NASA managers to order the disconnect hardware aboard Columbia to be removed and replaced with a valve assembly built for the new shuttle Endeavour.

Engineers had hoped to have Columbia ready for another launch try as early as Aug. 12 but that date would appear to be in jeopardy given the apparent leak aboard Atlantis.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - Weary jurors, several of them appearing sullen and angry, Friday began their fifth day of deliberating the fate of John Vento, accused of rounding up the white mob that killed a black youth in Brooklyn last summer.

Panel members were told late Thursday by State Supreme Court Judge Thaddeus Owens to keep on working despite their assertions that they were deadlocked on some charges.

They began deliberations Friday by asking him to repeat his definition of unlawful imprisonment.

They also asked for a re-reading of testimony of three youths who were with 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins when he was attacked by the mob and shot dead in Bensonhurst last Aug. 23.

Vento is the third youth to be tried for murder in Hawkins' slaying.

''We are unable to reach a verdict on several counts,'' jury foreman Terik Dash told Owens Thursday. ''Several jurors refuse to change their opinions on these counts after much deliberation.''

Friday, it was apparent from the hostile expressions on some jurors' faces and their attitude toward other panel members that dissension had set in.

Vento, 21, is charged with murder and lesser charges for ''acting in concert'' with the gang of young men who attacked Hawkins and his friends. The four black youths had gone to the predominantly white Brooklyn neighborhood of Bensonhurst to look at a used car.

Prosecutors urged jurors to convict Vento, noting that the young man admitted to a grand jury that he helped round up the white mob.

Vento's lawyer, Gerald DiChiara, tried to prove Vento was not a racist and argued that the young man did not have murder on his mind when he joined up with Hawkins' attackers.

DiChiara also claimed Vento was the target of a political vendetta engineered by prosecutors angry that his client had reneged on a deal to testify against his friends in exchange for immunity.

In the trial of the first two men accused in the Hawkins's slaying, both juries announced in the middle of their deliberations that they were deadlocked, and both received the same reply from Owens.

Those two juries both resumed their deliberations and later convicted accused triggerman Joseph Fama of second-degree murder, while clearing the accused ringleader, Keith Mondello, of the same charges.

Both Fama and Mondello, who was found guilty of a series of lesser offenses, were sentenced to maximum prison terms.

Five other youths charged in the attack are currently awaiting trials.

SANTA BARBARA, CA (JUNE 29) UPI - A break in triple-digit temperatures and an easing of winds Friday provided the first significant victory to an army of 1,755 firefighters battling California's most destructive fire in decades.

''The weather is looking fairly good,'' said relieved county spokesman Bill Douros. ''If things continue in this vein ... we hope not to lose any more homes.''

After burning out of control since 6 p.m. Wednesday and destroying hundreds of homes, Douros said firefighters expected to be able to ''fully contain'' or stop the advance of the arson-caused flames by noon Saturday.

However, ''putting it out altogether will takes days more,'' he said.

In San Bernardino, meanwhile, an inmate-firefighter injured earlier this week fighting yet another deliberately set blaze in the town of Hemet, near Palm Springs, died late Thursday night.

Victor Ferrera was one of 17 inmates overrun by flames Wednesday in a blaze that charred 150 acres of grass and brush before being put out Thursday. One other inmate remained hospitalized Friday in critical condition.

The inferno on the outskirts of Santa Barbara was one of more than a dozen that erupted in the West this week, including a blaze in the Los Angeles County city of Glendale, where 66 homes were damaged or destroyed, and in Arizona, where 24,000 acres and 62 summer homes have been lost and six firefighters killed.

There also were fires burning in Colorado, one of 3,230 acres and another of 400 acres, and a 3,152-acre blaze in Texas.

According to the latest tally in Santa Barbara, the wildfire charred 4,000 acres and destroyed at least 465 and possibly as many as 524 structures, including 417 single-family homes, 28 apartment complexes, 15 businesses and five public buildings and a sheriff's honor ranch.

Residential losses were pegged at $190 million, with another $6.5 million in damage to other structures.

More than 40 people were injured, including a California Highway patrolman hit by a motorcycle and the pilot of a water-dropping helicopter that crashed.

Ten people remained hospitalized Friday. The most seriously injured was burned trying to rescue horses from the flames.

While the threat of more damage dropped significantly Friday, the blaze was burning back in the direction of about 40 homes in the Trout Club area about a mile from the top of San Marcos Canyon, near the fire's point of origin - about 6 miles northwest of the city limits.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (JUNE 29) UPI - President Virgilio Barco used emergency powers to impose new security measures Friday after a car bomb killed 14 people in the cocaine capital of Medellin.

One of the measures issued by the president requires heads of households to register with the government all people living in their homes. He also allowed for prison sentences to be lengthened for kidnapping and murder under certain circumstances.

Barco issued the decrees hours after the car bomb with some 330 pounds of dynamite exploded on a Medellin street Thursday. The explosion killed 14 people and injured another 32.

The bomb in central Medellin, 160 miles northwest of Bogota, was about eight blocks from where a car bomb with 1,100 pounds of dyanmite was deactivated Wednesday.

At least 16 car bombs have exploded in Colombia since an April offensive began by the warring Medellin Cartel of cocaine traffickers. The cartel declared war on the nation in August of 1989 after Barco imposed a state of siege and reinstated an extradition agreement with the United States following a string of assassinations.

Some 160 policemen also have been killed in Medellin this year by gunmen police say are paid some $4,000 per officer by the Medellin cartel.

Using his emergency powers, Barco also said police could inspect the identification documents of any person in a public place and hold them for 24 hours if they fail to present proper papers.

Anyone wishing to use bodyguards now is required to seek military or police approval. Citizens were required to immediately inform authorities of any possible crimes and help any police or government official who requests it.

Prison sentences could be increased for kidnappings and murders under certain circumstances, including involvement of government officials or their families, politicians, judges, union leaders, church officials, diplomats or journalists.

The newspaper El Tiempo reported the government also was preparing other measures to deal with the wave of terrorism.

SEATTLE (JUNE 29) UPI - A former Boeing Co. executive targeted in a defense fraud investigation reportedly is talking with federal prosecutors about a plea agreement in which additional business and government officials could be implicated.

Former Assistant Navy Secretary Melvyn R. Paisley has not been charged with any wrongdoing, although he has been identified as a target of investigators in the "Operation Ill Wind" probe by the Justice Department.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer Friday quoted an unnamed source, who said, "There are many things we think Mel could help us with - folks in corporations that have not yet been named, new officials in corporations that have been named, other people in the government, and additional consultants. This could be very valuable to the government."

The investigation has focused on bid rigging and bribery among a network of Pentagon procurement officials, defense contractors and consultants. Prosecutors have accused company employees of paying for inside Pentagon information that gave defense contractors an edge in bidding on lucrative contracts.

So far, 37 convictions have resulted from two indictments and a series of plea bargains. Large U.S. corporations, such as Unisys, McDonnell Douglas, United Technologies and Honeywell, have been implicated, as well as Navy personnel.

The Post-Intelligencer reported a source familiar with the investigation said Paisley, who was vice president of international operations at Boeing Aerospace before becoming assistant Navy secretary in 1981, has viewed evidence collected against him by the U.S. attorney's office in Alexandria Va.

The evidence included telephone conversations taped after the government began to suspect Paisley of bribing officials and passing inside information to defense contractors who were his clients after he left the Navy in 1987 and began working as a consultant.

The source told the newspaper the government received valuable cooperation from former associates. "Paisley made a lot of enemies on his way up by the high-handed way in which he dealt with people in the Navy," the newspaper quoted the source as saying.

A spokeswoman at the U.S. attorney's office in Alexandria would not confirm that the discussions are taking place. "We have nothing new on Mr. Paisley at this time; it is still on ongoing investigation," she said.

In March, defense consultant William M. Galvin, a former Paisley associate pleaded guilty to charges that he bribed Paisley while he was with the Navy to help an Israeli company, Mazlat Ltd., obtain a contract.

According to court documents, Mazlat's president deposited $50,000 in a Swiss bank account set up by Galvin six days after Paisley signed a 1986 directive ordering the Navy to buy Mazlat's control equipment for unmanned aircraft instead of similar equipment from another company.

Boeing, one of the country's largest defense contractors, has maintained it had no business dealings with Paisley after he left for the Navy post in 1981.

When Paisley left Boeing, he received a special $183,000 severance payment. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in February that Boeing had not broken any laws by making such payments to Paisley and several other executives who went into government service.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 29) UPI - The City Council, only hours before Nelson Mandela's historic City Hall visit, Friday approved a ballot measure to toughen the city's economic sanctions against the apartheid government of South Africa.

The measure would delete a City Charter requirement that contracts for $25,000 or more in goods and services be offered to the lowest competitive bidder - even if the company does business in or with South Africa and would otherwise be prohibited from contracting with the city.

It will be considered once again by the council July 24 when the legal documents for placing the proposal on the November ballot are drawn up in July.

Because of the current Charter restrictions, more than 90 percent of the city's competitively bid contracts are not affected by the city's 4-year-old anti-apartheid ordinance, which is considered one of the strongest in the nation despite the major loophole.

Councilman Nate Holden, angered by some 1,200 exemptions that have been granted by city departments and 13 by the council, called the proposal a ''dog and pony show'' and challenged the lawmakers to approve his plan to eliminate all exemptions.

The council defeated Holden's proposal, however, in a 6-7 vote.

Councilwoman Joan Milke Flores, who proposed the amendment last September, said under the current provisions only $27 million of the $281 million in contracts in fiscal year 1988-1889 were specifically restricted to firms with no business ties to South Africa.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 29) UPI - President Roh Tae-woo said Friday that South Korea will allow transportation and trade from and through North Korea and actively support economic cooperation with socialist nations to help Korean reunification.

Roh made the proposal, which offered very little detail, in a speech to 120 guests at the Blue House, the presidential mansion, on the third anniversary of his June 29, 1987, proposal of sweeping political reforms.

''Now that our relations with the Soviet Union and China are being normalized, not to speak of other socialist countries, we can be reasonably confident that major changes have begun to occur on the Korean peninsula, too,'' Roh said.

''The prolonged Cold War on the peninsula has already started to ease. I am now confident that the 1990s will finally see peaceful reunficiation materialize,'' he said. ''Accordingly, we must make preparations so that we won't be caught unaware no matter when we are faced with a movement in North Korea toward change and unification.''

He said democracy, prosperity and national unity must be the basis of peaceful reunification of the two Koreas.

''We must foster sufficient economic capabilities to ensure the well-being and prosperity of all Koreans,'' Roh said.

''Toward that end, we must transcend politics to realize inter-Korean exchanges of goods, technology and capital to meet each other's needs and further promote South-North economic cooperation,'' he said. ''The administration will, therefore, unrestrictedly allow the inflow from and through the north of aircraft, ships and other means of transport, as well as goods.''

Roh said his government will also actively encourage and support economic cooperation with the Soviet Union, China and other socialist countries ''because this will facilitate national unification and prosperity.''

South Korea will set up a special fund for this purpose, he said.

''The fund will be progressively enlarged. We will also vigorously promote joint ventures with them in third countries designed to combine the comparative advantages in production (land, capital and labor) of each of the nations involved.''

Turning to his country's economy, Roh said South Korea's per capita gross national product has reached the $5,000 level and should double by 1997 if businesses, workers and the government work together to boost exports by upgrading competitiveness of Korean industry.

In apparent reference to recent labor disputes, he said businesses and labor must maintain industrial peace by compromising if the nation is to sustain a healthy annual economic growth of 8 to 9 percent.

''Democracy will work only when every citizen fulfills his assigned duties and responsibilities,'' he said. ''We must make concerted efforts to meet the challenges of the 1990s and make it a decade of great achievement.''

Three years ago, Roh, presidential candidate of the then ruling Democratic Justice Party, proposed sweeping reforms, including a constitutional amendment to switch to a direct presidential election system, the release of political prisoners and restoration of a free press.

His proposal was accepted by President Chun Doo Hwan and a transition to democracy was set in motion. Roh was elected to a five-year presidential term in December 1987.

LONG BEACH, CA (JUNE 29) UPI - Douglas Aircraft Co. will lay off between 2,000 and 4,000 workers, most of them in Southern California, because of the recently announced plan by parent McDonnell Douglas Corp. to cut yearly costs by $700 million, a spokesman said Friday. "The final numbers are still subject to revision, but it could be as high as 4,000," said Douglas spokesman Don Hanson.

The layoff announcement is the first from any unit of St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas since the company disclosed last week its cost-cutting plans, which are designed to cut its $2.5 billion in debt and improve a dismal earnings performance.

The company's specific plans for job reductions and other cost-cutting measures should be in place by early August, spokeswoman Barbara Anderson said. McDonnell Douglas employs about 123,000 workers at its U.S. facilities and about 8,000 overseas, Anderson said.

Douglas, which employs about 50,000 workers, initiated two rounds of layoffs last month, with 4,000 regular employees and 3,000 contract employees receiving pink slips. Douglas three major aircraft production programs - the C-17 Air Force cargo jet, the MD-80 twin-jet and the MD-11 tri-jet - have been running behind schedule.

About 40,000 Douglas employees work at its huge assembly plant in Long Beach, while another 5,500 work at its Torrance plant. Douglas also has plants in Salt Lake City, Macon, Ga., Toronto and Columbus, Ohio.

TOKYO (JUNE 29) UPI - Paced by a shrinking merchandise trade imbalance, Japan's current account surplus in May decreased nearly 60 percent from a year earlier, the Finance Ministry announced Friday.

The ministry, in a preliminary report, said the surplus, covering both merchandise and service trade, totaled $1.46 billion, down by 27 percent from the previous month and by 57.5 percent from May 1989. In April, the surplus narrowed 69.6 percent from a year earlier.

The disclosure that Japan's current account surplus narrowed for a second straight month came on the heels of a long-anticipated agreement reached Thursday between U.S. and Japanese negotiators under which the countries pledged to make sweeping changes designed to cut their trade imbalance.

Japan's trade surplus last month fell to $2.62 billion, down by 35 percent from April and by 49 percent from a year ago, the ministry said. Exports sagged 1.3 percent from a year ago to $21.1 billion while imports jumped 13.9 percent to $18.49 billion. Japan's imports have posted double-digit growth almost continously since May last year.

"The basic pattern of slow exports and brisk imports has taken root, contributing to the curtailment of the Japanese surplus," said a ministry official, who declined to be named.

Notable were decreased exports from year-earlier levels of 20.8 percent in steel and 2.9 percent in electric and electronic equipment, including home appliances and computer chips, according to the official.

May marked the seventh consecutive month that steel exports have declined from the prior year, largely as a result of sluggish sales to China and the Soviet Union.

Contributing to the greater monthly imports, the ministry official said, were automobiles, which soared 83.8 percent from a year ago, as well as commercial aircraft - reflecting mostly the impact of jumbo jetliners - which surged 121.4 percent, and paintings, which advanced 143.4 percent.

For the first time in 14 months, monthly imports of crude oil were lower, decreasing four percent from a year ago. This stemmed mainly from lower crude prices, the official said.

"The effect of a weak yen on the nation's trade balance was not noticeable " the official said. Japanese trading firms reported their export contracts soared in May, largely because of the decline in the value of the Japanese yen against the U.S. dollar.

A weaker yen makes Japanese products more competitive on overseas markets but also makes Japanese imports more expensive. The yen has fallen about six percent in value since the beginning of this year.

Last month's long-term capital balance posted a $5.56 billion deficit, marginally wider than the $5.34 billion deficit recorded in April but sharply narrower than the $12.51 billion deficit of a year ago. The short-term capital account posted a $11.17 billion surplus - a turnaround from a deficit of $12.97 billion in April.

Japan's overall balance of payments, which measures all flows of funds into and out of the country, showed an $8.89 billion surplus in May, compared with an April deficit of $19.84 billion.

In a separate report, the Finance Ministry said Japan's 1989 current account surplus with the United States was $47.48 billion, down 7.5 percent from 1988. The bilateral imbalance hit a record $56.68 billion in 1987.

Japan posted a surplus of $9.88 billion with the 12-nation European Community last year, down sharply from $119.76 billion in 1988, the ministry said. France posted its first surplus with Japan in 1989, with the imbalance coming in at $1.97 billion, the ministry said. Japan also ran deficits of $1.34 billion with Italy and $3.95 billion with Britain.

Japan's 1989 surplus with Southeast Asian nations totaled $13.53 billion, while its surplus with newly industrialized nations such as Taiwan, South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore amounted to $17.15 billion, the ministry said.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (JUNE 29) UPI - Liberian rebels cut off water supplies to the capital of Monrovia and advanced to within 5 miles of the city Friday, military sources reported.

The city's water supply plant at White Plains, 10 miles from Monrovia, fell to rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia on Wednesday. In the past 12 hours, the rebels pushed to the town of Mount Barclay, 5 miles from monrovia, the sources said.

The town is the last remaining army checkpoint between the capital and rebel forces advancing from the north.

Witnesses there said there had been shooting Thursday night and that the ground was bloodstained Friday. No bodies were found, and the witnesses said they did not know who had been killed or how many because so many people had already fled.

But they said it was government troops in the town who had been shooting. One soldier said the troops had been shooting to frighten the rebels, who he said were nearby.

''We were shooting to defend ourselves,'' he said.

The town is now completely deserted except for the army checkpoint which marks the border that has become rebel-held territory. A group of about 10 government soldiers was hiding in the surrounding bush rather than manning the checkpoint itself.

Heavy fighting has continued at the Firestone rubber plantation and at the international airport at Robertsfield, 25 miles from Monrovia. A gasoline tank supplying the rubberr plantation was blown up Friday during the fighting, diplomatic sources said, and heavy fighting continued at Harbel not far from the plantation.

The sources said the airport, which has been closed for three weeks, was retaken by goernment forces Thursday after being briefly captured by rebels the previous day.

They also said rebel troops were pushing towards the capital from the port of Buchanan, 50 miles southeast of Monrovia.

The capital has remained relatively calm after army shootings Wednesday when up to 20,000 people marched through the city demanding the resignation of President Samuel Doe.

Troops opened fire on the crowd and 14 people were admitted to the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Memorial Hospital outside the city suffering from gunshot asnd bayonet wounds. One person died from bullet wounds, authorities said.

Minister of Justice William K. Godfrey issued a statement Thursday saying the march was not authorized by the government and was ''liable to be dispersed.''

A Defense Ministry statement Thursday said the soldiers had opened fire on the demonstrators because they had mistaken shots at the execution of a soldier by a firing squad for a rebel attack on the Barclay Training Center, a military barracks in downtown Monrovia.

Tension has been mounting in Monrovia, the capital of the West African nation founded by former U.S. slaves, in anticipation of a rebel attack after talks between the rebels led by Charles Taylor and Doe's government broke down in Freetown, Sierra Leone, last week.

The insurgents of the National Patriotic Front have captured the town of Fendall, 10 miles from the capital, where a campus of the University of Liberia is located.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 29) UPI - Burma, in its first crackdown on illegal timber extraction near the Thai-Burmese border, seized three secret sawmills and arrested 125 Thai and 25 Burmese workers, a government spokesman said Friday.

In another development, Burmese army troops intercepted drug smugglers in the ''Golden Triangle'' area of northern Burma, killing eight smugglers and recovering 345 pounds of opium and 13.2 pounds of heroin, officials said.

The crackdown on the illegal timber trade, carried out Sunday to Thursday, was aimed at hidden camps and saw mills in the jungles near the Burmese border town of Myawaddy, about 135 miles northeast of Rangoon, said military spokesman Col. Than Tun.

He said the 125 Thais, including 30 women, and the 25 Burmese, were clearly processing and smuggling timber in violation of Burmese law. Than Tun did not say when or how those arrested would be charged or what punishments they might face.

The crackdown came after a senior Burmese government official rejected charges by environmentalist groups that the military government was allowing Thai companies to destroy Burma's valuable tropical hardwood forests in an effort to gain sorely needed foreign exchange.

The official said a strict system of selective cutting was imposed throughout most of Burma, but admitted the government had difficulty implementing the system near the Thai border.

In Bangkok, Thai Supreme Command spokesman Gen. Naruedol Dejpradiyudh had said the Burmese had taken the Thais in for questioning about the unusually large number of workers in legally granted timber concessions near the border.

He said he believed the workers would be released after they were questioned.

Along with the sawmills, troops seized machinery including circular saws, four electric generators and 15 scaling machines. More than 4,000 window-frames, 305 logs and 9 tons of other wood were also seized.

Than Tun also said weapons were captured from the timber smugglers, includingone 60mm mortar, four rocket propelled grenade launchers, five rocket launchers, two pistols, one short gun and one single-barrel gun.

Several vehicles also were seized.

(JUNE 29) UPI - The government reports that sales of new single-family homes rose four-tenths of one percent in May, at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 532-thousand. Before adjustment, an estimated 50-thousand new homes were sold in May. The median price of a new house was 128-thousand 500 dollars last month, while the average price was 150-thousand 400 dollars.

The government of Hungary announced new price increases scheduled to take effect this summer to prevent a rise in the 160-Million-dollar budget deficit. Hungarians will have to pay 45 percent more for coal, 10 percent more for heating gas... and gasoline will go up 20 percent.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (JUNE 29) UPI - A hard-line Palestinian group led by reputed terrorist Abu Nidal Friday accused PLO chairman Yasser Arafat of inciting inter-Palestinian battles in south Lebanon refugee camps to crush Nidal's faction and please the United States.

Mansour Hamdan, spokesman for Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council, made the accusations during a news conference at FRC headquarters in the Mar Elias refugee camp in Moslem west Beirut.

''The Palestinian camps in south Lebanon are living in a very tense security situation which may lead to a destructive inter-Palestinian battle,'' he said.

Abu Nidal, accused of terrorist acts worldwide and whose real name is Sabry Al Banna, broke away from Arafat's mainstream Al Fatah movement of the Palestine Liberation Organization and founded the Fatah Revolutionary Council in 1973.

Hamdan accused Arafat of masterminding a rebellion against Abu Nidal's leadership in the refugee camp of Rashidiyeh, near the port city of Tyre, 46 miles south of Beirut. He said 300 Arafat loyalists launched a predawn attack against FRC headquarters in Rashidiyeh on June 18, killing four of Abu Nidal's followers and wounding 12 others.

The clash was seen as the first serious confrontation for control of Abu Nidal's group and Hamdan said the attack followed a series of assassinations of FRC leaders and ''suspicious attempts to incite trouble inside the camp.''

Hamdan said Arafat, in an attempt to cover up the Rashidiyeh attack, portrayed the conflict as an internal struggle between rival FRC factions.

''He brought in suspicious elements who were known for their collaboration with the Israeli enemy during the Israeli invasion in 1982 and backed them when they announced the formation of a breakaway FRC faction,'' Hamdan said.

It was not immediately possible to reach a spokesman for Arafat's group to respond to the allegations.

But a spokesman for the FRC dissidents, identified only as Sufian, announced on June 19 the formation of ''FRC-Emergency Leadership'' and said the dissidents were not trying to form a breakaway faction ''but to correct the course of the old one.''

Sufian said Abu Nidal turned the FRC into an ''assassination bureau'' and the main objective of the new group is to work with the PLO.

The split within FRC turned bloody last October when Abu Nidal reportedly had 150 of his opponents executed in Libya.

Observers fear tension will expand to other Palestinian areas, mainly the Mieh Mieh camp near the port city of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut.

Mansour said the clash at Rashidiyeh was the result of a permanent U.S.-Zionist plan aimed at ''inciting internal destructive wars and hitting all forces which stand against any U.S.-Zionist control of our country.''

He accused Arafat of submitting to U.S. conditions by striking all struggling forces pledged to fight Israel, under the cover of combatting terrorism.

The United States recently broke off talks with the PLO.

Abu Nidal maintains bases in Syrian-controlled west Beirut, eastern and northern Lebanon, but Syrian officials say their country maintains no relationship with Abu Nidal's faction after forcing it to leave Syria two years ago.

ROME, GA (JUNE 29) UPI - Model Marla Maples' father filed a $12 million suit Friday against the National Enquirer, accusing the tabloid of falsely quoting him about his daughter's fling with real estate mogul Donald Trump.

Lawyers for Stan Maples of Cohutta, Ga., filed the suit in U.S. District Court, charging two counts of invasion of privacy and one of libel.

Mr. Maples said in the lawsuit that a false headline appeared in the April 10 issue of the gossip magazine above a libelous article he never agreed to being interviewed for.

''They wanted to interview him and they were talking aobut the economics of it,'' said Dan Reinhardt, one of Maples' attorneys. ''He said, 'No i don't want to do it' and then they go and print it anyway. I think you can be responsible in damages for that.''

The Maples article was topped with the headline, ''Marla's Angry Dad Warns: Trump Mistress Close to Suicide. He Threatens to Punch out Donald For Dumping Her.''

''In the discussions, the names of the people were mentioned but he certainly never said Marla threatened suicide or that he was going to punch out Trump,'' said Reinhardt. ''I think there are several statements which we contend are libelous and we are pleading for damages in one count of the complaint.''

He said attorneys sent the tabloid a letter demanding a retraction. The lawsuit seeks $2 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive damages.

A Washington, D.C., lawyer for the Enquirer said he has not seen the lawsuit, but denied any wrongdoing by the magazine.

''We, the Enquirer, did interview him,'' said Paul Wolff. ''We got information from him and what we ran is accurate. So, we are surprised.''

Wolff said ''there is no merit'' to the claim that the magazine violated Maples' privacy rights by publishing the article after talking to him.

DETROIT (JUNE 29) UPI - The senior debt rating of Chrysler Financial Corp., Chrysler's strongest performing unit that has contributed the most to the carmaker's earnings, was lowered Friday by Fitch Investors Service to BBB-plus from A-minus.

Fitch also downgraded CFC's subordinated debt to BBB from BBB-plus but affirmed the F-2 rating of its commercial paper. It also affirmed the BBB senior debt rating of Chrysler Corp., CFC's parent company, and removed all CFC ratings from "FitchAlert," where they were placed earlier this month.

The Wall Street credit rating service said CFC, the finance and leasing arm of Chrysler, has $21 billion worth of outstanding debt. "Chrysler Financial is experiencing funding pressures," Fitch said, as a result of a commercial paper downgrade by Standard & Poors rating service and a pending review by Moody's Investors Service.

Moody's was expected to announce its ratings on CFC on Friday. A downgraded rating in senior debt and commercial paper could not only have a negative effect on CFC, but on all of Chrysler. "We've been supplying the majority of profits to Chrysler," CFC spokesman Robert Heath explained.

Fitch said CFC has "avoided a funding crisis" through conservative planning and the use of bank borrowings, and while this funding profile will be more expensive as commercial paper and long-term debt markets become less accessible, the subsidiary's operations will not be impaired.

"Chrysler Financial continues to perform well, with 1990 results benefiting from improved margins and gains on sales of asset-blocked securities," Fitch said, adding that "asset protection to creditors remains strong."

CFC, which earned a record $89 million for the first quarter of 1990, posted profits of $284 million in 1989, its sixth straight year of record results. Earnings in 1988 were $259 million.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 29) UPI - The Iranian government thanked the outside world Friday for sending huge amounts of relief aid for victims of last week's earthquake,while more big aftershocks continued to rock the stricken area.

At least 50,000 people died and three times as many were injured in the massive quake June 21.

In an emotional sermon at Friday prayers, President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said of the relief aid which poured into Iran: ''To be just, the world has responded well in this case ... It shows that Iran has the respect and acceptance of nations and people.''

Some 86 countries from Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas sent relief aid in 174 planeloads to Iran, while the nearby Soviet Union and Turkey sent in convoys of trucks carrying relief supplies.

His voice breaking with emotion at some points in his speech, Rafsanjani came down hard on those who criticized Iran's decision to accept relief from the United States.

Without mentioning the United States by name, he said: ''Knowing that there were survivors in need of help and sympathy, people mourning relatives, how could anyone say foreign aid would not be wanted. This was not a rational statement.''

He said if Iran had not accepted foreign assistance, ''the response of our enemies would have been sharper.''

Rafsanjani delivered his sermon as aftershocks continued to rock the area between the Caspian Sea and Zanjan, some 175 miles northwest of Tehran, where a massive earthquake measuring 7.7 on the Richter scale struck last week.

The state-owned Islamic Republic News Agency said a heavy tremor, measuring 5 on the Richter scale, hit the area late Thursday, and was followed in the next 80 minutes by two more shocks only slightly less intense.

At a special session of the U.N, General Assembly Thursday, Iran's U.N. ambassador Kamal Kharazi said 50,000 were estimated to have been killed in the quake, 150,000 injured and 500,000 made homeless.

The General Assembly unanimously approved an appeal for member-states and international organizations to assist Iran in recovering from the disaster.

Rafsanjani said precise numbers of the dead and injured were not immediately available, but were being compiled. Interior Minister Abdullah Noori said officials of the Central Statistics Office were working on the problem and should have the figures in seven or eight days.

The Iranian president had special words of thanks for foreign relief workers who risked their lives to go into the disaster area to help survivors.

Several relief workers, both Iranian and foreign, were killed in the aftershocks. Sources in the area said two French relief workers and one Soviet citizen were killed in the Dilaman Heights, in the Alborz range, when rubble fell on them.

One Iranian volunteer died Tuesday when a wall collapsed on him, and another was killed in a military helicopter crash, authorities said.

MIAMI (JUNE 29) UPI - Eastern Airlines withdrew $50 million from its escrow account Friday in order to meet $42 million in aircraft lease payments due Sunday and to bankroll its summer operations, a company spokesman said.

The money was withdrawn from Eastern's escrow account containing $760 million after a bankruptcy court judge in New York approved Eastern's request for more operating cash, said company spokesman Robin Matell.

Eastern, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in March 1989 after its unions launched a crippling strike, has dipped repeatedly into the escrow account to cover its operating losses.

Money in the account was raised through the sale of Eastern assets, including its Northeast shuttle operation. To date, Eastern has withdrawn $450 million from the account to finance its operations, Matell said.

"We had told the creditors that additional funds would be needed for the third quarter, and that's what these funds are for," Matell said. Matell said Eastern expects to receive another $310 million this summer from the sale of its Latin American routes to American Airlines.

American is scheduled to begin flying the first of those foreign routes Sunday. Additional routes will be transferred in July and August. The money will also be transferred in stages.

"After this withdrawal, and including the (initial) American Airlines transaction, we will have about $820 million in the escrow account, and about $80 million in the operating account," Matell said.

Meanwhile, Matell said Eastern's business has improved since April. "Our bookings have stabilized since April. We are definitely making inroads in regaining the business traveler and restoring consumer confidence. Summer bookings are good," he said. "Overall the marketing efforts have been successful in strengthening our competitive position."

However, Matell said it is too soon to gauge the impact of a nationwide television campaign featuring Eastern's court-appointed trustee, Martin Shugrue, in candid discussions with Eastern employees and customers.

Eastern launched the television campaign June 17 in 33 markets. "It is too early to break out the impact of the ad campaign itself, but we have been getting very positive reactions," Matell said.

Matell said the bulk of the $50 million will be used to pay aircraft leases. "Forty-two million is designated for annual and semi-annual aircraft lease payments due July 1," Matell said. The remaining $8 million "is earmarked to support operations through the summer."

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 29) UPI - Amtrak's Montrealer passenger train enroute to Washington derailed Friday at a junction near the Philadelphia Zoo, causing delays in local service but apparently no serious injuries to passengers.

Clifford Black, a spokesman for Amtrak in Washington, said the engine and three passenger cars of the eight-car train jumped the tracks at about 1:20 p.m. He said the train was carrying at least 94 passengers.

Black said he had no confirmation of any injuries. However, a local radio report said the only casualty was the engineer who suffered chest injuries.

The train was at a major junction known as the Zoo Interlock, behind the Philadelphia Zoo in North Philadelphia and was enroute to Philadelphia's 30th Street Station.

A spokeswoman for the regional rail service said the derailment caused delays in service to Trenton, N.J., and to the Chestnut Hill section of the city.

The train originated in Montreal and stopped in Vermont, New Haven, Conn., New York City, and Trenton before Philadelphia. It terminates in Washington after stopping in Wilmington, Del., and Baltimore.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 29) UPI - A consortium of Japanese corporations plans to announce the formation of a major media company to invest in entertainment ventures, it was reported Friday.

The company, Media International, will be based in Tokyo and start with $200 million in capital, the Los Angeles Times reported. The initial backers include NHK Enterprises, a unit of Japanese Broadcasting Corp.; Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank, the world's largest commercial bank; Sumitomo Bank and conglomerate Seibu Saison.

"We recognize this is a multimedia society," company President Takao Yoshiki told the newspaper. "This company's purpose is to make partners with European and American media giants as well as major production houses."

Media International plans to act as a partner in international broadcasting productions, major motion pictures, sporting events and news programming. The company will be formally incorporated next Thursday and is scheduled to open its doors for business by November.

The move comes at a time when Japanese companies have begun moving into the entertainment programming business, most notably through Sony Corp.'s $3.4 billion purchase of Columbia Pictures Entertainment last year. Additionally, Japanese investors have recently purchased a 10 percent stake in Carolco Pictures and made a $100 million investment last year into producer Larry Gordon's Largo Entertainment.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush rejected suggestions Friday that he violated the public trust and defended the decision to break his ''no new taxes pledge'' as ''a necessary step'' toward resolving an escalating budget crisis.

While acknowledging he has been hit with criticism from all sides, including edgy GOP lawmakers up for re-election this fall, Bush called on the public to support the move as a ''make-or-break effort at responsible government.''

Speaking at a White House news conference before departing for a Fourth of July weekend in Kennebunkport, Maine, Bush said he had to support ''tax revenue increases'' due, in large part, to a more sluggish than anticipated economy and a swelling deficit.

He also cited the savings and loan crisis, which experts now predict may cost taxpayers as much as $500 billion, as well as possible ''Draconian cuts'' in domestic services if the deficit is not reduced.

''I'm presented with new facts. I'm doing what Lincoln did - thinking anew

'' said Bush. ''Leadership is needed and that is exactly what administration officials are seeking to provide.''

Asked if he considered his reversal on taxes a betrayal of public trust, Bush said no. ''What I consider it is a necessary step to get stalled budget negotiations (with Congress) moving. ... I think we are on the right track.''

Indeed, the negotiations, which had made little progress since beginning in mid-May, seemed to profit from the president's move. Congressional and White House bargainers reported a series of new proposals on everything from delaying new Social Security benefits to slashing defense spending and attributed the movement to Bush.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said ''I applaud the president for exercising leadership in this area'' and said Bush's comments were helpful to the ongoing budget talks.''

Asked if he felt Bush's tax reversal shows a politician can make a campaign promise and get away with breaking it later, Sasser said there is ''a certain degree of political ethics that have to be adhered to in any political campaign and that you do not knowingly ... make false statements.''

Asked if Bush adhered to that ethic, Sasser said ''I think that's a judgment for the American people to make. Many of us (Democrats) felt at the time ... that it was going to be not possible to meet the fiscal needs of this country without enhanced revenues.''

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri echoed Bush's viewpoint, saying: ''What's important here is not what the (Bush) campaign said. What's important here is what we do on behalf of the American people'' to solve the deficit problem.

The president refused to discuss what kinds of taxes he would support in the budget talks, but said ''everything is on the table,'' including taxes.

Bush's pledge, ''Read my lips: no new taxes,'' was a popular centerpiece of his 1988 campaign. His Democratic foe, Michael Dukakis said at the time that a tax increase might be needed, and it cost him votes.

Bush, asked if he was worried that his reversal would harm his credibility among the American people, who have given up record high approval ratings, again said, ''No, not in the long run.''

''Because what people are interested in are jobs, economic growth,'' he said. ''People know this deficit is bad. People know we are going to have to take some action.''

The president added, ''I'm not violating or getting away from my fundamental conviction on taxes. ... But what I've said is on the table and let's see where we go.''

While many Democrats have voiced support of the president's action, a number of Republicans have expressed concern that the Bush retreat could hurt the GOP in congressional elections this fall.

Although numerous newspapers editorals have backed Bush, many front-page headlines have ripped him. ''Read my lips ... I lied,'' read the one in The New York Post on Wednesday.

Said Bush, ''Look, I knew I'd catch some flak on this decision .... the arrows have been flying .... but I've got to do what I think is right and ask the people for their support.''

The president said, ''Democrats and Republicans alike have got to face (the situation) with candor and courage.''

While the president refused to attack congressional Democrats on the budget, he added that his agreement to shift on taxes was the only way he could reach a pact with Capitol Hill.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Fourteen years after the agency first became aware of the problem, the EPA announced an agreement with industry Friday to eliminate the use of hazardous mercury compounds in water-based indoor paints.

Environmental Protection Agency officials said paint manufacturers voluntarily agreed to stop putting mercury in indoor latex paint by Aug. 20. They also will place labels on most existing mercury-containing paint by July 23, warning that it is only for outdoor use.

The agency said paints with relatively low levels of mercury - below 200 parts per million - may still be used indoors without ''unreasonable risk'' as long as rooms are thoroughly ventiliated and exposure to children minimized.

EPA officials said the public can call a toll-free EPA hotline to find out which brands of paint contain mercury.

Environmental groups praised the EPA for acting on the problem, but criticized the agency's refusal to order a recall of existing stocks. EPA officials said the relabeling effort is the quickest way to address the threat.

Mercury, long known to be toxic, is used in paint to prevent fungus growth in the can and to control mildew on outdoor surfaces. It is found in about 30 percent of interior latex paints and about the same percentage of outdoor latex paints. Mercury is not used in oil-based paints.

In addition to endangering painters, the EPA and officials with the federal Centers for Disease Control said mercury-based paints can pose a health threat for months after a room is painted due to long-term release of low-level fumes.

They said the fumes tend to settle to the floor, meaning babies probably are most at risk. In addition, as with lead-based paint, they said children can be harmed by eating chips of mercury-containing paint.

''EPA believes it is preferable that consumers use paints that do not contain mercury when painting indoor surfaces,'' said Linda Fisher, assistant EPA administrator for pesticides and toxic substances.

''If mercury-containing paints have already been used, or are currently being used, we advise that exposure be minimized, especially for children or pregnant women, and that painted rooms be thoroughly and frequently ventiliated,'' she added.

Fisher acknowledged the EPA had known about the risks of mercury-containing paint since at least 1976, when the agency banned uses of mercury in many other products.

She said the EPA administrator at that time decided to permit the continued use of mercury in paint because there were no alternative preservatives.

Fisher said preferable alternatives now are widely available and, furthermore, ''We know a lot more about mercury today than we did in 1976.''

Still, Fisher and Dr. William Roper, director of the federal Centers for Disease Control, said there is little specific data about how many Americans are threatened by mercury-containing paint and how serious the risks are.

However, Roper said a study soon to be released found homes with mercury-containing paint on interior walls had higher levels of mercury concentrations in the air than homes without such paint. In addition, Americans living in affected homes had higher mercury levels in their urine.

In moving to phase out mercury in paint, Fisher said the EPA is aware that at least one mercury substitute is formaldehyde, a cancer-causing substance. She said the agency believes the risks of mercury are more serious.

EPA officials said the voluntary agreement with industry was prompted by the poisoning of a 4-year-old boy in Michigan whose home was painted by a mercury-containing paint in 1989.

An investigation found the boy was suffering from acrodynia, a rare form of mercury poisoning that causes severe pain in arms and legs, peeling of the hands, feet and nose, profuse sweating, slight tremors, some loss of muscle control and decreased attention span.

The harmful effects of mercury were recognized decades ago in the hat industry, which used mercury in the production of felt. The association resulted in the expression ''mad as a hatter'' and was the basis for the character the Mad Hatter in Lewis Carroll's classic ''Alice in Wonderland.''

CHICAGO (JUNE 29) UPI - Soybean futures were sharply higher all day Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade, mostly in response to the Agriculture Department's acreage report.

The USDA said farmers had planted 58 million acres of soybeans, which was lower than the trade expected, and 74.5 million acres of corn, which was higher than predicted.

Professionals and commission houses dominated the buying in the soybean complex, but also were sellers. November beans reached a high of $6.51 per bushel and closed at $6.50 1/2 for a gain of 18 1/4 cents on the day.

Soybeans had underlying support on news that some forecasters were calling for hotter and drier weather in the Grain Belt by midweek.

Corn prices were narrowly mixed in choppy trading. Active selling based on the crop report kept the market on the defensive, although many traders expect the USDA to lower the acreage figure in the next report.

Liquidation pressured wheat futures in active trading. Nearby July wheat made a contract low of $3.25 1/2 as harvest activity picks up.

Country movement was light.

At the close, corn was up 3/4 to off 1/4, soybeans up 15 1/4 to 19, wheat off 4 1/2 to up 3 1/2 and oats down 1/4 to 1/2.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board's policy-making panel opens a two-day meeting Monday that could lead to lower interest rates for consumers and a boost for the economy.

The Federal Open Market Committee, chaired by Fed chairman Alan Greenspan, meets eight times a year behind closed doors to decide whether to influence rates on everything from credit cards to home mortgages.

"The economy is very sleepy," said Norman Robertson, chief economist at Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh. "A small drop in rates might keep the expansion going along." Because of the secrecy surrounding the sessions, the Fed withholds comment on the meetings for about six weeks.

Although the results of the last session, May 15, will not be released until Friday, it is clear the panel voted to tow the line and maintain higher rates to keep inflation, running at about four percent, in check. The reason: the Federal Funds rate, the interest banks charge on loans to other banks, has hovered at about 8 1/4 percent for most of the year.

When the Fed moves to influence rates, its instructs the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to either add or substract cash from the banking system, causing the rate to fluctuate. More cash means lower rates. Less cash means higher rates. So as growth sputters and coughs it appears change may be on the horizon.

The evidence before the Fed is not comforting. With the exception of a burst in exports, other sectors of the economy - retail sales, construction, and capital spending - are anemic.

"I'm sure there will be heated discussion," Robertson said. "The balance of forces is now beginning to tilt toward a move to ease (rates). "I'm sure there will be members of the committee who will hold out for no change."

In Los Angeles, Jerry Jordon, chief economist at First Interstate Bancorp, said the panel also must consider that its policy has made it harder for businesses to borrow money because there is less cash in the banking system. "It reinforces this idea that there's a credit crunch," Jordan said. "Instead this is the Fed draining bank reserves."

Robertson also noted that "the Fed has made a very uneqivocal commitment to bring down the inflation rate" and whatever happens at the meeting "it's going be a very close call."

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (JUNE 29) UPI - The Brazilian state-owned Petrobras oil company Friday announced a strike of oil and natural gas 100 miles off the coast of Sao Paulo state.

A Petrobras statement said the strike had the capacity to produce daily 1,800 barrels of oil and two million cubic feet of natural gas. Petrobras said the quality of the oil, a light crude selling for $15 a barrel on the world market, was grade 43 of the American Petroleum Institute.

Brazil produces domestically about 60 percent of its petroleum needs of one million barrels a day. Its refineries export gasoline to the United States.

PARIS (JUNE 29) UPI - The French state-owned bank Credit Lyonnais said Friday it would make available $175 million in credits to French companies that invest in Eastern Europe.

The move was welcomed by French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy, who used the occasion of the announcement to criticize the French banking establishment for what he called its timidity in investing in Eastern Europe.

"Too frequently it is pointed out to me that foreign banks, especially the West German ones, are more dynamic than our own towards the countries of the East, and are more willing to take risks," he said.

Credit Lyonnais President Jean-Yves Haberer that in the short term the available money will be used to finance French exports to Eastern Europe. In the longer run the money will be utilized to finance investments by companies created in Eastern European countries by French companies.

Haberer said Credit Lyonnais had created an affiliate, Lion-Propeco, to aid companies with their investment projects and to help them determine the best strategies to pursue.

Credit Lyonnais has been active in the Soviet Union since 1972, when it became the first Western bank allowed to operate in that country. The bank was also the first to participate in the creation of joint ventures with the Soviets.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The United States may announce within a few weeks how it will reform its system of limiting sugar imports, an Australian official said Friday, adding the Houston economic summit will be vital to securing world trade reform.

The Houston summit, a meeting of leaders of the seven major industrialized nations, will be held July 9-11. Neal Blewett, Australia's minister for trade negotiations, told reporters he is hopeful the meeting would provide an impetus for a successful conclusion for the trade talks.

Blewett spoke to reporters at the end of a round of meetings with administration and congressional leaders. He said he emphasized Australia's interest in removing agricultural trade barriers and its concerns with items in the new farm policy law being written by Congress.

Australia is concerned about proposed changes in the sugar and dairy programs, as well as U.S. export subsidies, Blewett said. He said the farm bill proposals on sugar and dairy would move the United States away from a market-oriented policy.

World trade officials ruled last year, in a challenge filed by Australia, that the U.S. system of sugar import quotas violated world trade rules. For months, U.S. officials have hinted they will replace the country-by-country quotas with a so-called tariff-rate quota. However, it has yet to be proposed officially.

"We're informed they're likely to bring it in in August," Blewett said. "We would like to see some liberalization." Earlier this week, Deputy Agriculture Secretary Jack Parnell said the administration hopes to have the new system "ready to be implemented before the start of the new (sugar) marketing year."

The United States limits sugar imports to filling U.S. demand that cannot be met by domestic production. The quotas also allow the government to guarantee growers a minimum price of 18 cents a pound.

Agricultural trade reform has become one of the thorniest issues for world trade talks, with the United States and the European Community disagreeing about the scope of reform. Australia is a leader of the Cairns Group of 14 free-trading nations that want removal of trade barriers and export subsidies.

"The Houston summit does provide an opportunity ... to get that movement going," said Blewett, who emphasized the Cairns Group and other nations believe there will be no overall agreement at the trade talks unless there is action on agriculture.

"It's not a question of derailing the round. We will not have a worthwhile outcome unless there is a satisfactory outcome in agriculture," Blewett said. The Cairns Group is scheduled to meet next week in Santiago, Chile.

MOSCOW (JUNE 29) UPI - The Communist Party leadership decided Friday to go ahead with next week's Congress during which a showdown is expected between liberal members and anti-perestroika conservatives.

The 250-member Central Commitee let stand a March decision of the party to hold the gathering starting Monday, Central Committee member Alexander Kapto told a news conference.

Boris Yeltsin, a maverick member of the Communist Party and recently elected Russian republic president, said Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev came under strong criticism for the report he delivered.

''There were remarks about the report and very serious ones at that, but all debates still lie ahead,'' Yelstin, a member of the Central Commitee, told the ''Vremya'' TV news program.

Kapto said the 4,683-delegate Communist Party Congress will last 10 days and end with the election of a new Central Commitee and Politburo in the time-honored pattern of past congresses held every five years.

Because of the rifts in the once-monolithic party, Gorbachev will have to battle to be re-elected as party chief.

''The question of a postponement was not raised in any form,'' Kapto said of the decision to proceed with the meeting and face the risk of the first split in the Soviet Communist Party since it came to power in October 1917.

Kapto stresed that all further decisions on the Congress' proceedings would be made by the delegates, including final election of the party leadership and whether to cut the Congress short or perhaps suspend it before completion and resume a second session in the fall.

Much of the debate at the Central Committee meeting Friday dealt with the title of the report Gorbachev presented Friday and will deliver to the Congress, Kapto said.

The revised report title, which Kapto said was approved unanimously Friday drops a reference to Gorbachev's ''perestroika'' drive for economic and political restructuing.

The March title was ''The Course of Perestroika and the Party's Tasks. The Report of the Central Committee,'' while the document now reads ''Political report of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union to the 28th Party Congress and the Party's Tasks.''

Kapto did not analyze the title change, but it appeared to be a softening by the vital Central Commitee of its endorsement of reforms such as the increasing transfer of power from the party to Gorbachev's strengthened executive presidency at the national level and to republican parliaments at the local level.

Once the effective ruling clique of the country, the party's Politburo has met sporadically in the past three months since Gorbachev became executive president and established his 16-person presidential council.

The Democratic Platform, a group of radicals representing a miniscule percentage of the party, has threatened a walkout at the Congress if it does not get a proper hearing on its demands that the party change its name, renounce Communism and end its control of the KGB and the army.

Although the party's draft manifesto, published Wednesday, goes a long way toward satisfying the radicals' demands by abandoning Marxist-Leninist ideology and allowing different platforms, the same document might incite the conservatives to demand a purge of the extreme reformists.

For Gorbachev, who is also general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party the Congress may finally force a final showdown with conservatives led by Politburo member Yegor Ligachev, who says perestroika has brought the country only chaos.

Behind the debate lies the very fate of the Communist Party, which for 72 years has been not a party in the Western sense of the word. For starters, it was the only party allowed from 1921 until Gorbachev pushed through a multiparty system in February.

Instead of a political party, it has been a body of members that controlled every aspect of society - the army, the KGB, the press and the entire centralized economy through a priveleged class known as the ''nomenklatura'' of about 65,000 elite cadres.

In the newly open atmosphere fostered by Gorbachev, party leaders have berated each other personally on television shows and in newspaper interviews.

Veteran Communists have called the newly selected head of the Russian republican Communist Party, Ivan Polozkov, an ''odious'' choice because he closed all cooperative businesses in the Krasnodar region he rules.

More than any development, the selection of Polozkov last week to head the Russian republic's new party branch crystallized the differences between the reformers urging democratic change and the anti-perestroika conservatives pushing a return to strict law and order.

Kapto said a political estimation of the Russian Communist Party will be given at the Soviet party's forthcoming Congress.

(JUNE 29) UPI - African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela ended his visit to Detroit today, urging Americans to pressure South Africa to end apartheid. At a news conference today, Mandela described his U-S tour as being ''successful beyond our wildest dreams.'' Earlier today, he donned a Detroit Pistons jacket and cap and took a half-hour walk along the riverfront, stopping once to sign an autograph.

Farmers in Poland occupying the Agriculture Ministry took the deputy prime minister as a symbolic hostage after failing to cut a deal with a parliamentary delegation. The government had threatened to send in police unless the 700 farmers abandoned the building. Striking farmers from throughout Poland occupied the ministry in Warsaw, demanding higher government prices for their products.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Fourteen years after the agency first became aware of the problem, the EPA announced an agreement with industry Friday to eliminate the use of hazardous mercury compounds in water-based indoor paints.

Environmental Protection Agency officials said paint manufacturers voluntarily agreed to stop putting mercury in indoor latex paint by Aug. 20. They also will place labels on most existing mercury-containing paint by July 23, warning that it is only for outdoor use.

The agency said paints with relatively low levels of mercury - below 200 parts per million - may still be used indoors without "unreasonable risk" as long as rooms are thoroughly ventiliated and exposure to children minimized. EPA officials said the public can call a toll-free EPA hotline to find out which brands of paint contain mercury.

Environmental groups praised the EPA for acting on the problem, but criticized the agency's refusal to order a recall of existing stocks. EPA officials said the relabeling effort is the quickest way to address the threat.

Mercury, long known to be toxic, is used in paint to prevent fungus growth in the can and to control mildew on outdoor surfaces. It is found in about 30 percent of interior latex paints and about the same percentage of outdoor latex paints. Mercury is not used in oil-based paints.

In addition to endangering painters, the EPA and officials with the federal Centers for Disease Control said mercury-based paints can pose a health threat for months after a room is painted due to long-term release of low-level fumes.

They said the fumes tend to settle to the floor, meaning babies probably are most at risk. In addition, as with lead-based paint, they said children can be harmed by eating chips of mercury-containing paint.

"EPA believes it is preferable that consumers use paints that do not contain mercury when painting indoor surfaces," said Linda Fisher, assistant EPA administrator for pesticides and toxic substances.

"If mercury-containing paints have already been used, or are currently being used, we advise that exposure be minimized, especially for children or pregnant women, and that painted rooms be thoroughly and frequently ventilated," she added.

Fisher acknowledged the EPA had known about the risks of mercury-containing paint since at least 1976, when the agency banned uses of mercury in many other products.

She said the EPA administrator at that time decided to permit the continued use of mercury in paint because there were no alternative preservatives.

Fisher said preferable alternatives now are widely available and, furthermore, "We know a lot more about mercury today than we did in 1976." Still, Fisher and Dr. William Roper, director of the federal Centers for Disease Control, said there is little specific data about how many Americans are threatened by mercury-containing paint and how serious the risks are.

However, Roper said a study soon to be released found homes with mercury-containing paint on interior walls had higher levels of mercury concentrations in the air than homes without such paint. In addition, Americans living in affected homes had higher mercury levels in their urine.

In moving to phase out mercury in paint, Fisher said the EPA is aware that at least one mercury substitute is formaldehyde, a cancer-causing substance. She said the agency believes the risks of mercury are more serious.

EPA officials said the voluntary agreement with industry was prompted by the poisoning of a 4-year-old boy in Michigan whose home was painted by a mercury-containing paint in 1989.

An investigation found the boy was suffering from acrodynia, a rare form of mercury poisoning that causes severe pain in arms and legs, peeling of the hands, feet and nose, profuse sweating, slight tremors, some loss of muscle control and decreased attention span.

The harmful effects of mercury were recognized decades ago in the hat industry, which used mercury in the production of felt. The association resulted in the expression "mad as a hatter" and was the basis for the character the Mad Hatter in Lewis Carroll's classic "Alice in Wonderland."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush said Friday he intends to nominate Joyce Elaine Tucker, director of the Illinois Department of Human Rights, as a member of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

If confirmed by the Senate, Tucker would complete the remainder of the term of Clarence Thomas, which expires July 1, 1991.

Bush also announced that he intends to nominate Joe Whitley of Dunwoody, Ga., as U.S. attorney for the northern district of Georgia, and Anthony Bennett of Shoreview, Minn., as U.S. marshal for Minnesota.

For the past month, Tucker, 39, has served as interim U.S. attorney for the northern district of Georgia. Bennett, 50, has been a police officer in St. Paul, Minn., since 1964.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (JUNE 29) UPI - Human rights groups, less than week after talks with rebels on military reductions ended without agreement, accused the armed forces Friday of forcing teenagers under 18 into military service.

''We have noticed a strong recruitment of youths that the army is carrying out across the entire country, which we consider unnecessary when they are talking about the demilitarization of society and of peace,'' Miguel Montenegro of the independent human rights commission told United Press International.

''We think it necessary to stop the recruitment. The armed forces should put a stop to that measure and begin demilitarizing society.''

Montenegro said the commission received complaints Thursday of violent, forced recruitment of teenage boys between 14 and 16 years old in the northwest provinces of Cabanas and Cuscatlan.

A military spokesman said the army had no knowledge of forced recruitments but defended the recruitment drives.

''It is not outside of the law, it does not violate human rights,'' he said.

''Each of the barracks has the autonomy to recruit when it needs personnel in its ranks. The constitution itself determines this.''

The recruitment drive comes less than a week after government representatives and rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, wound up a second round of peace talks, failing to reach agreement on proposed reductions in the armed forces.

The rebels have demanded reductions and reforms within the country's security forces as a condition for agreeing to a cease-fire in the 10-year-old civil war and have threatened to launch a major offensive if the U.N.-mediated talks fail.

The human rights commission has also condemned FMLN recruitment drives.

The Armed Forces Press Committee said rebels have forcibly recruited 30 boys and girls in the past two weeks in the eastern part of the country.

The FMLN denied the charges on their clandestine Radio Venceremos.

Military commanders in areas surrounding the capital confirmed they have been recruiting new members in the past two days.

''We received orders to recruit 40 youths, who have already been assigned to the Belloso Battalion,'' said a civil defense officer in Ciudad Delgado located on the northern fringe of San Salvador.

In Soyapango, an officer who identified himself as Sgt. Leiva confirmed that the 1st Brigade and the radiocommunications detachment have recruited new members from around the capital.

The Permanent Committee for National Debate, which includes members from about 70 different social organizations, called on President Alfredo Critiani's government to suspend the forced recruitments immediately.

The Salvadoran Armed Forces have an estimated 55,000 members divided into six infantry brigades, five specialized battalions, the air force, the navy, an artillery brigade, a mounted brigade and three security organizations under the command of the Defense Ministry.

The 55,000 members do not include civilian security forces, which are also armed and paid by the Defense Ministry.

WARSAW, Poland (JUNE 29) UPI - Riot police broke into the barred entrances of the Polish Agriculture Ministry Friday night and worked to clear the building of hundreds of farmers in the third day of a sit-in strike to protest low prices for their crops.

It was the first show of force by the Solidarity-led government since it came to power in August 1989.

About 200 uniformed police and the dreaded ZOMO riot troops broke open the metal grates leading into the ministry grounds and entered the courtyard.

Farmers had barricaded the doors from inside with tables and furniture, while several hundred milled uneasily in the lobby. The police then broke in and began hauling away the strikers.

Earlier, the farmers were holding a top Cabinet member as a symbolic hostage. It was not immediately known whether the minister was released.

The majority of farmers - most of them middle-aged or older and with dirt under their fingernails - went peacefully, escorted outside by the police. A few put up a vigorous defense, many of them weeping openly.

At the other main entrance, men in plainclothes used tools to jimmy open the huge wooden doors, and then cleared the entryway of a barricade of furniture erected by the protesters.

Among those pushed out of the building were 10 members of Parliament and two senators, waving their identification cards to police.

The government had issued an ultimatum several hours earlier warning that it was prepared to use force unless the farmers left the building.

The farmers are seeking minimum price guarantees for milk, meat and other products.

Shortly before the police attack, Rural Solidarity threw its support to the farmers, presenting the Solidarity-led government with one of its most severe crises since taking power last August.

''(Rural) Solidarity is with this protest,'' said Zigmund Chortmanowicz, deputy chairman of Rural Solidarity who joined the hundreds of striking farmers in the building earlier in the day. ''Weve been demanding talks with the government for months now.

''If the government does not start negotiations by July 3, we will announce a general strike,'' he said, ''but I hope we will not have to have a strike.''

The support announced by the farmers' branch of Solidarity was seen as a major blow to Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, whose government imposed a tough austerity program Jan. 1 that has resulted in a 30 percent drop in the standard of living.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was due to show up at the ministry following his return from a two-day trip to Vienna.

One strike committee official, asked if they were waiting for Walesa's assistance, said, ''We would gladly accept it.''

Walesa, who holds no government post, successfully negotiated an end to a railway workers' strike last month which resulted in wage hikes despite the government's fears the action would have a domino effect through the rest of the hard-pressed workers' groups.

As police tightened their cordon around the building in late afternoon, the farmers announced they were holding Deputy Prime Minister Czeslaw Janicki as a symbolic hostage hostage until July 3.

''Don't let Janicki out of the building until Tuesday,'' Wrona said. ''We'll stay with Janicki until Tuesday.''

In Jelenia Gora province in Western Poland, farmers struck to support the Warsaw protests. One strike committee leader said nearly a dozen busloads of farmers from northern and southern Poland were headed for the capital.

''These farmers are harmless,'' Chortmanowiez said. ''If the cops break in (to the ministry), they are the ones who will do the damage.''

''The situation now is hopeless because they cannot sell their produce and if they can, they cannot make any profit,'' he said. ''In another one or two weeks we will have a harvest, and we are unsure if the crops will be bought by the enterprises.''

The farmers' revolt coincided with a government announcement of higher prices for gas, electricity, coal, heating and payments for use of radio and television, scheduled to go into effect Sunday.

The hikes will affect not only millions of farmers but also other workers dissatisfied with tough austerity measures adopted by Mazowiecki. Wages of Poland's workers have been frozen since the start of the year with prices of goods rising 140 percent.

The strict economic policy has slowed inflation, which went from a three-digit figure to about 10 percent, but has caused unemployment to rise to 500,000 workers in the country of 38 million people.

SAN PEDRO SULA, HONDURAS (JUNE 29) UPI - Texaco Inc. refinery employees in Honduras halted fuel sales Friday in support of striking banana plantation workers who walked off the job demanding higher wages and respect for contracts.

Roberto Saldivar, president of the union at the Texaco refinery, a U.S. subsidiary, said the strike would be implemented in stages, starting with the sales department and later including production areas.

More than 9,000 workers of the Tela Railroad Co., a U.S.-owned banana production concern, went on strike Monday demanding a 60 percent wage increase and the reinstatement of fired colleagues. According to company estimates, the banana workers earn on average $7 a day.

A general strike called for Thursday by the Union Federation for Workers in Northern Honduras, which groups some 50,000 workers in 52 unions, was only partially heeded.

The solidarity strike was mainly carried out by workers in the textiles and milk processing industries in San Pedro Sula, Honduras' second-largest city some 100 miles (160 km) northwest of the capital Tegucigalpa.

A union leader at the refinery who asked not to be identified said that there could be a fuel shortage within two days if the sales department continues to strike.

President Rafael Callejas said his government has no intention of declaring the banana workers strike illegal, as requested by the country's businessmen.

"It's easy to say the strike is illegal, the complex part is what it implies, which means the destruction of the legal status of unions. Therefore my position at this time is dialogue," Callejas said.

"We are not testing strength and this is not a confrontation," added Callejas, who on Wednesday sent a team of government mediators to help settle the Tela Railroad Co. strike. Negotiations continued bogged down Friday.

Education workers union boss Amilcar Tome Salgado said his members would also join in the strike next week if the banana plantation dispute is not resolved.

The Tela Railroad Co. is the largest exporter of fruit in Honduras, where the sale of bananas earns the country $300 million a year in foreign exchange.

"In one week of paralyzing exports the company loses between $2.5 million and $3 million for the 600,000 boxes of bananas that are not shipped," said Tela Railroad Co. spokesman Eduardo Aragon.

Higher taxes and a 50 percent devaluation of the Lempira has caused consumer prices to rise in Honduras under Callejas's economic austerity measures, and the strikes threaten to deliver a serious blow to country's economy, the poorest in Central America.

ALBANY, NY (JUNE 29) UPI - ChemLawn Services Corp., the nation's largest lawn care company, bowed Friday to New York state's demand to stop advertising its pesticide-treated grass as safe enough for a baby to eat.

Under an agreement approved in state Supreme Court, ChemLawn agreed to stop advertising in New York its lawn applications are safe, non-toxic or harmless.

One ChemLawn ad states, ''A child would have to ingest almost 10 cupfuls of treated lawn clippings to equal the toxicity of one baby aspirin.''

Although the agreement applies only in New York, state Attorney General Robert Abrams urged other states to take similar action against ChemLawn and other lawn care companies.

''The promise of a picture-perfect green lawn must be balanced with one indisputable fact - pesticide exposure poses a potential risk to all living things,'' Abrams said.

Abrams sued the company in 1988. The agreement settles that suit by barring the company from advertising its service as safe, non-toxic or harmless and from equating Environmental Protection Agency registration of pesticides with safety in its ads. Abrams said EPA's own regulations demonstrate registration is no guarantee of safety.

The company also agreed to pay the state $100,000 to defray its cost of bringing the lawsuit.

A ChemLawn statement said the language in dispute was used in brochures published between 1985 and 1987 and translated technical terms into language consumers could understand.

ChemLawn denied the brochures were inaccurate or misleading.

The company has since drawn up new advertising guidelines for when a product's toxicity is discussed. ChemLawn will define the methods by which toxicity is established and discuss in layman's terms what those definitions mean.

It said it may use the phrases ''environmentally friendly,'' ''ozone friendly'' or ''environmentally safe'' only within the context of definitions established by appropriate federal agencies.

A wholly owned subsidiary of Ecolab Inc. of St. Paul, Minn., ChemLawn is North America's largest professional lawn care service, with offices in 46 states and two Canadian provinces.

Abrams said his battle against ChemLawn was also a battle with the federal government. He said both the Federal Trade Commission and EPA had failed to act against ChemLawn or other companies that make deceptive pesticide safety claims.

This is the second time this week Abrams has used the pressure of New York law to force companies into safety actions after the federal government refused.

On Monday, the Fisher-Price toy company agreed to place stickers on its ''Little People'' packages, warning the tiny plastic figures can choke children who put them in their mouths.

The toys have caused at least five deaths and one case of severe brain damage, Abrams said.

He acted against the toy company after the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission denied his petition to tighten commission regulations over such toys.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The Securities and Exchange Commission and West Germany are negotiating an agreement to cooperate in the enforcement of their respective securities laws, SEC officials said Friday.

The move comes as U.S. investors are increasingly looking to German stocks as a means of gaining access to investment opportunities stemming from economic development in Western and Eastern Europe, particularly in East Germany.

While the SEC views the effort as part of its overall effort to create enforcement agreements with many countries, West Germany represents the last major financial market with which the SEC does not have a cooperative agreement.

The talks were initiated in mid-June, when SEC Chairman Richard Breeden traveled to Eastern and Western Europe to meet with securities officials. During the same trip, Breeden concluded an agreement with Hungary in which the SEC will help securities regulators there develop the recently reopened Hungarian stock market.

While in West Germany, Breeden concentrated on developing an agreement for information sharing that will likely parallel SEC agreements with other countries.

French securities officials and the SEC, for example, have agreed to take testimony for one another and provide each other access to information in official files. Such arrangements, however, will only have a limited effect in deterring violations of U.S. securities laws in Europe.

The reason is that stocks in Europe, including those of American companies sold on foreign exchanges, are traded in bearer form, which means the names of stock buyers and sellers are not recorded.

"If you are manipulating shares of an American company on the Frankfurt stock exchange, it will still be difficult to track," said John Abbink, vice president of Deutsche Bank Capital Corp. in Manhattan.

"What this agreement will do is, if the SEC can establish probable cause (that manipulation is occurring) ... they'll be able to get into your bank account and watch your records, which they couldn't do before," he added.

Despite the obstacles, the SEC must step up its overseas enforcement and surveillance activities, as more Americans are investing in overseas stocks and mutual funds.

In the first five months of 1990, Americans invested $3.8 billion in mutual funds that dealt exclusively in foreign stocks, compated to $658 million in the same period last year, according to the Investment Company Institute in Washington, D.C.

Deutsche Bank was able to raise $700 million in the United States for two mutual funds that invest exclusively in German stocks between February and June of this year.

BEIR AL ABED, LEBANON (JUNE 29) UPI - Pro-Iranian Moslem fundamentalists chanting ''Down with America'' demonstrated in densely populated areas south of Beirut Friday as a leader of a militant fundamentalist group urged Arabs to maintain hard-line anti-Western policies.

Some 3,000 Lebanese, Iranians and followers of Hezbollah, a group believed to be holding 16 Western hostages, marched through the streets of Beir al Abed denouncing the United States and Saudi Arabia while commemorating the 1987 killing of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims by Saudi police at the Moslem holy shrine of Mecca.

Observers said that the demonstration was mobilized with a ferocious anti-U.S. spirit. They said it appeared Hezbollah was trying to show Iranian hard-liners are still in control of Hezbollah and that Iran and its allies are not softening their policies toward the West despite significant Western relief contributions after last week's earthquake.

Brandishing large colored pictures of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini protesters in Beir al Abed chanted ''Down with America'' and ''Death to the Saudi rulers.''

Hezbollah's secretary-general, Sheikh Sobhi Al Tofeili, joined the procession and told the crowd Arab countries must maintain a hard line against the West, which he said was waging an open-ended war against Moslems worldwide.

He also railed against Saudi Arabia for limiting the number of pilgrims each Arab country is allowed to send to the Moslem holy shrine.

''We will have to liberate Mecca ... The pilgrims now are performing the pigrimage with an American-Jewish fashion,'' Tofeili said.

He said Iran is as hard line as it was during Khomeini's rule.

''Many people had thought that the world would change its treatment of Iran after the passing of Khomeini, but they have maintained a hostile attitude,'' said Tofeili.

A leader of the demonstration also shouted ''Don't forget that the shooting of the Airbus plane bloodied the heart of Ayatollah Khomeini,'' referring to the U.S. downing of a passenger plane in the Gulf in the summer of 1988. Tehran had charged that the plane was intentionally shot down by a U.S. warship, but Washington said the plane was hit accidentally.

Hezbollah, which emerged in the wake of the 1982 Israeli invasion of the country, has waged an anti-Western campaign since 1984.

The group was widely believed as the mastermind of the bombings of the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut April 18, 1983, in which 63 people were killed the U.S. Marine headquarters south of Beirut Oct. 23, 1983, in which 241 troops were killed and the embassy annex in east Beirut that left 23 dead Sept. 20, 1984.

There are six American nationals among 16 foreigners held in Lebanon.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - A Republican budget negotiator, responding to a new Democratic plan to cut defense spending $16 billion next year, made a lower counter-proposal Friday to cut the Pentagon by about $9 billion.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., a participant in the bipartisan budget talks between the White House and Congress, told reporters his plan also called for saving about $156 billion in Pentagon spending over five years.

No action was taken by negotiators on any defense proposal.

Domenici said his plan was more in line with the fiscal year 1991 defense cut advocated by Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga. Nunn, perhaps the Congress's most respected defense expert, has called for Pentagon spending reductions next year of about $8 billion to $10 billion.

Shortly after Domenici offered his proposal, negotiators adjourned for the July 4 congressional recess. They are scheduled to meet again July 10 and have expressed hopes they can reach agreement on a $50 billion or larger deficit reduction package before Congress begins its month-long summer recess Aug. 5.

''The hard part is yet to come,'' House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri told reporters after the talks ended Friday. ''Now we get down to the brass tacks of knitting the deal together.''

On Thursday, most Democratic budget negotiators jointly proposed cutting defense spending by $16 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 and by about $276 billion over five years.

They said such a large cut was justified by rapid - and apparently permanent - democratic changes in Eastern Europe, the reduction in the Soviet military threat and the rapidly rising U.S. budget deficit.

House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta said the Democratic defense plan would involve ''a dramatic scale-back'' in the ''star wars'' missile defense system

The Bush administration and the Congressional Budget Office have both estimated the deficit would be about $160 billion next year, not counting the $50 billion cost of the savings and loan bailout.

Domenici said the proposed Democratic defense spending cut ''is way too Draconian and could not be achieved.''

The administration's most recent Pentagon spending proposal, offered two weeks ago to help get the stalled budget talks moving, called for a cut of $5.9 billion in defense spending below the amount needed next year to keep pace with inflation.

That's nearly double the $3.2 billion defense spending cut President Bush first proposed for fiscal 1991 in the budget he submitted to Congress in January.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney two weeks ago said a 25 percent reduction in U.S. military forces would produce a 10 percent dollar savings. But the House Armed Services Committee disagreed, saying a 25 percent force reduction could produce an 18 percent to 27 percent dollar savings.

Sponsors said the Democratic defense proposal would result in a dollar savings of about 27 percent.

Negotiators said there was no discussion of taxes Friday, despite Bush's comments at a news conference defending his decision to reverse his 1988 ''read my lips - no new taxes'' campaign pledge.

(JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush says he thinks Americans will support his call for new taxes because they ''want to see jobs and economic growth.'' Bush made the comment today at a White House news conference where reporters questioned his reversal of his 1988 campaign pledge of ''NO new taxes.'' The president said the budget deficit is so serious that it requires ''tough decisions'' to solve it. He added that his call for new taxes has revived stalled budget talks with Congress.

President Bush used his veto power to send back to Congress a bill requiring employers to provide workers with medical and parental leave. Bush says he vetoed the bill because it ''ignores the realities of today's work place.'' In a letter to Capitol Hill, Bush explained that he objects to ''the federal government mandating leave policies for America's employers and work force.''

The East German news service says former communist leader Erich Honecker is charged with murder in the deaths of East Germans killed trying to flee to the West. The acting prosecutor's office says the charge covers the deaths of people shot by border guards and killed by mines and booby traps prior to the opening of the Berlin Wall last November. Honecker was forced out of office about one month before the Wall was opened.

Economists see little good news in the latest report on sales of new single-family homes. Revised government figures show that sales rose by four-tenths of one percent last month, in the first gain since last November. But chief economist Martin Regalia of the National Council of Savings Institutions says ''nothing is looking better in this report,'' which he called ''pretty dismal.'' Another economists says the housing market is ''quite sluggish.''

(JUNE 29) UPI - Jurors asked for a re-reading of the judge's charge on racketeering counts in the trial of Imelda Marcos and Adnan Khashoggi. It's the second day of deliberations for the jury in the three-month-old trial. The ex-Philippines first lady is accused of plotting to divert 200-Million dollars stolen from Manila into New York real estate and art. Khashoggi is accused of trying to help Marcos hide the purchase of four Manhattan high-rise buildings.

South Africa unveiled its proposal for a new, post-apartheid constitution today, but anti-apartheid activists AREN'T impressed. The plan calls for a two-chamber parliament- one white and the other representing all races. ''Equal, universal suffrage'' also is proposed, but NO details were given. The plan is NOT likely to satisfy African National Congress demands for a one-man, one-vote system in a single Parliament. One A-N-C official says there's ''nothing much new'' in the government proposal.

NORMAL, IL (JUNE 29) UPI - The Diamond-Star Motors automobile assembly plant in central Illinois will close next week for the annual weeklong changeover for new models, a company spokeswoman said Friday.

The factory employs an estimated 2,500 "associates" on the assembly line and another 500 in the offices, DSM public relations associate Chris Ziehmann said, adding she did not know how many workers will be off the job during the changeover July 2-9.

Diamond-Star, a joint venture of Chrysler Corp. and Mitsubishi Motors Corp., has produced 60,465 Eagle Talon, Plymouth Laser and Mitsubishi Eclipse sports coupes since January, Ziehmann said.

When the plant resumes production, the Mitsubishi Mirage and Eagle Summit four-door compact sedans will be added to the production schedules. Those models are currently imported from Japan.

DSM plans to build 2,500 sedans and 36,530 coupes in the third quarter, Ziehmann added.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 29) UPI - Fueled by anger over the abortion rights issue, an unprecedented number of women are running for political office this year - including three gubernatorial candidates - the president of the National Organization of Women said Friday.

''It's like a revolution,'' NOW President Molly Yard said at a news conference on the opening day of NOW's national convention in San Francisco, where California gubernatorial candidate Dianne Feinstein was a key speaker.

Yard said that while the women's movement has been devastated by recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions restricting rights to an abortion, the rulings have also sparked a revolt among women, who have been joining NOW in record numbers.

''I find the actions of the Supreme Court justices to indicate they are either totally ignorant of what it's like to be a minor and pregnant or totally lacking in any caring for our young sisters,'' said Yard, referring to a court decision this week requiring parental notification before a minor can have an abortion.

Gubernatorial candidates appearing at the convention were Feinstein, a Democrat and former San Francisco mayor who is opposed by Sen. Pete Wilson; Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy, a Democrat; and Oregon Secretary of State Barbara Roberts, a Democrat.

Also attending were Pennsylvania Auditor General Barbara Hafer, a Republican U.S. Senate candidate; Josie Health, a Democratic Boulder, Colo., County commissioner running for the U.S. Senate and Harvey Gantt, an architect challenging Republican Jesse Helms for his U.S. Senate seat in North Carolina.

Yard called the candidates ''all champions of women's rights, especially abortion rights.

''The 1990s will be the decade of women in politics, as these candidate inspire others to dare to run, to fight for the equality and freedom of all Americans and protect the right to reproductive choice,'' said Yard.

Yard criticized the vetoing of a parental leave bill by President Bush that would have allowed some 12 weeks of unpaid paternity and maternity leave, as well as short medical leave if children are sick, to people who work for about 5 percent of the nation's biggest companies.

''It's one more time President Bush says we don't count,'' said Yard, adding that during his campaign Bush stressed that nobody should lose their job because of having to stay home with a sick child.

''He talks about family values and then vetoes this bill. There's a sick hypocrisy here,'' she said.

Yard called it the best of times and the worst of times for the feminist movement.

''With the Bush administration, we're losing our rights as females in this country,'' she said. ''But this is also acting as a catalyst to pull us into the political process.''

She said the November elections will see more women being elected to Congress and to state and local offices, building up a power base that will lead to the Equal Rights Amendment being adopted as part of the U.S. Constitution by the end of this decade.

''This fight won't stop in November but will continue into 1992 and beyond '' she said.

LONDON (JUNE 29) UPI - Some of Britain's biggest names in rock 'n' roll will take the stage Saturday for a massive concert to raise money for a cause that is close to their hearts - children's music therapy.

Paul McCartney, Phil Collins, Pink Floyd, Tears for Fears, Elton John, Mark Knopfler and others will perform before about 120,000 people for a sold-out, nine-hour, open-air concert at Knebworth Park, 30 miles north of London.

They are seeking to raise more than $10.2 million, half of which will go to the Nordoff-Robbins Music Therapy Center in London, a charity dedicated to helping handicapped children express themselves with music.

The remainder will go to the British Record Industry Trust School for the Performing Arts and Technology.

Dr. Clive Robbins, one of the center's founders, said he was ''overwhelmed because (the concert is) coming at exactly the right time. We've outgrown the old center and we need to expand.''

The center now treats about 75 children a week in an old North London warehouse. Money from the concert will enable it to take in ''well over 100 children a week,'' Robbins said.

''Music therapy can do a great deal to enrich children's life's. They become more confident, more flexible,'' he said.

Concert promoter Andrew Miller said it was the children's charity that sparked such an overwhelming response among the British artists and paved the way for their participation in the marathon concert, which will be broadcast to 65 countries.

''We managed to touch the hearts of the music industry,'' Miller said.

''The notion of music's healing qualities has always been easy for musicians to come to terms with, so we had no problem getting such high caliber artists to perform for us,'' said Miller, chairman of the charity for 15 years.

Therapists at the Nordoff-Robbins center use musical instruments to help reach children whose physical, mental and emotional problems have made them withdrawn from everyday life, he said.

The music stimulates their imaginations, improves their communication skills and builds confidence, Miller said. Therapy also helps physically handicapped children to move limbs and enhances coordination.

Some of the children who are unable to speak learn to communicate by banging on drums, tapping piano keys and playing other instruments, Miller said.

Robbins founded the now worldwide program with the late composer and pianist Paul Nordoff after the pair began research on the subject in 1959 in England. They also published a book, ''Therapy in Music for Handicapped Children.''

The first Nordoff-Robbins center in the United States is expected to be ''in full operation'' at New York University in September. There is another center in Sydney, Australia and two in Scandinavia, Miller said.

The Nordoff-Robbins Music Therapy Center relies entirely on contributions in its drive to help disabled children. Miller said he has always found generous benefactors in the music industry.

''The Who gave us 1 million pounds from their recent tour,'' he said. ''It was unbelievably generous.''

Eric Clapton was moved in a similiar way after watching a television program on music therapy several years ago.

''They showed a little girl, an autistic girl who could not respond to anything, she was completely out of control,'' Clapton said in a statement issued through a publicist. ''They showed her at different stages of treatment using music.

''The effect it had on her was extraordinary - from being completely depressed and despondent to being a responsive and smiling child, reacting to something where she had never reacted to anything before,'' the renowned guitarist said. ''It had a very profound effect on me and I wrote out a huge check and sent it off.''

Miller said money raised by the Knebworth concert will go toward the Nordoff-Robbins center's drive to raise $17 million for a new larger center, which is expected to open by the end of the year. In addition to taking in more children, the charity will be able to train more therapists.

All the artists in the concert but one (Tears for Fears) are recipients of the Silver Clef Award, given by the Nordoff-Robbins Music Therapy Charity each year for outstanding service to the British music industry.

''Every artist that's received the award has been terribly generous,'' Miller said.

ALBUQUERQUE, NM (JUNE 29) UPI - A patient was accidentally injected with the blood of another patient with AIDS apparently because both men had the same last name, officials said Friday.

VA Medical Center infectious diseases chief Dr. Darwin Palmer called the accident ''an absolute tragedy'' and said the hospital staff is devastated.

He said the patient received enough contaminated blood to become infected with AIDS.

Palmer said both patients are men but he would not disclose their names, ages or illnesses.

He said the mistake apparently was the result of the two men having the same name and undergoing the same procedure on the same day.

The two underwent an Indium white blood cell scan, which involves removing the white blood cells, treating them with a radioactive tracer then reinjecting them into the body to follow them to an infectious site.

Palmer said the white blood cells of the AIDS patient were injected Wednesday into the other man and the mistake was found almost immediately.

He said the man is undergoing intense anti-viral therapy with the hope of preventing the AIDS virus from taking hold.

Medical staff are also contacting other hospitals to discuss possible treatments.

Palmer said the hospital is investigating the error to make sure it never happens again.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The farm price index dropped 1.3 percent during June due to lower prices for hogs, beef cattle and soybeans, the Agriculture Department said Friday, although corn, eggs and milk prices increased.

The farm price index is the government's measurement of prices paid to farmers for their livestock and crops. With a June measurement of 152, the index was 2.7 percent higher than June 1989. The June decline ended two months of increases in the index.

"Cattle, calf, hog and lamb prices were lower than a month earlier but eggs and milk were higher," the report said. "Wheat, oilseeds and barley were lower while corn and sorghum increased in price from May."

Hog prices, which reached their second-highest level on record in May, were down $1 in June for an average of $60.20 per 100 pounds, the government said. The price still was $15.10 above the June 1989 level. Beef cattle prices dropped 20 cents during June to average $74.20 per 100 pounds, but were $6.60 higher than one year earlier.

Milk prices were up ten cents from May to average $13.60 per 100 pounds. Eggs sold for an average of 62.7 cents a dozen in June, compared to 60.2 cents in May. Broiler prices, which averaged 35.2 cents a pound in May, dipped to 34.1 cents a pound in June.

Soybean prices averged $5.75 per bushel, a decrease of 21 cents from May. Wheat was down 25 cents to average $3.15 a bushel. Corn prices were up seven cents a bushel for an average of $2.69 and sorghum prices were up 15 cents to $4.19 per 100 pounds. The farm index stood at 151 in March and climbed to 154 in May.

(JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush insists he has NOT really abandoned his opposition to new taxes. But he told a White House news conference today that the savings-and-loan scandal and other factors have made the budget deficit so big that serious action is necessary. Bush said this week that new taxes might be needed to address the problem.

President Bush issued the 13th veto of his administration today. He vetoed legislation that would have required employers to provide medical and parental leave for workers. The president said such leaves are an ''important benefit,'' but said he ''strongly'' objects to the federal government mandating them.

President Bush says he has good reason to disagree with U-S allies who want to give aid to the Soviet Union at next week's NATO summit. Before leaving the White House for a holiday weekend, Bush said today that it's hard to give money to Moscow while it's aiding Cuba and spending 18 percent of its gross national product on the military.

South African black leader Nelson Mandela hasn't finished his U-S tour, but already he calls it successful beyond his wildest dreams. At a Detroit news conference this morning, Mandela claimed success in pushing for U-S sanctions against South Africa and seeking resources for the African National Congress.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis predicts that Moscow's economic blockade will end tomorrow, now that the republic declared a moratorium on its independence declaration. WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND (JUNE 29) UPI - Jennifer Capriati, 14, advanced to the fourth round of Wimbledon Friday by showing the steely nerves of a champion. Now she has to play one.

The No. 12 seed from Florida trailed 3-0 in the third set against veteran Robin White, then won the final six games for a 7-5, 6-7 (1-7), 6-3 victory. Her next opponent is defending champion Steffi Graf, the top-ranked women's player, whom Capriati has never faced.

''I really can't wait,'' said Capriati, who joined the pro tour in March. ''I've always wanted to play her. It would be great to play on Centre Court.''

The pairing, a highlight of this year's tournament, is set for Monday.

''I'll get impatient because I want to play so bad,'' Capriati said. ''But I'll wait.''

Graf said she had not thought about playing Capriati.

''But now that it's happened, I will enjoy it,'' she said. ''... I saw her play a little bit today and she really was playing well from the baseline.''

The West German, looking for her third consecutive Wimbledon title, has dropped just 10 games in three matches. Friday's 6-0, 6-4 victory over Claudia Kohde-Kilsch was her longest match of the tournament - 58 minutes.

Capriati, a semifinalist at the French Open, squandered two match points against White at 5-4 in the second set. In the third, she fell behind 3-0 but White tired during her 13-deuce service game, the last game she won. Capriati won the next five games without letting White get to deuce.

In the final game, Capriati missed forehand service returns on two more match-point opportunities. After a brief talk with herself about wasted chances, she drilled a backhand service-return winner.

'''You're not going to do this again,''' she recalled thinking. ''And I didn't.''

In the men's draw, defending champion Boris Becker was tested by American Dan Goldie but finished with a 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 victory in a confrontation of serve-and-volley strategies.

''It was a very good grass-court match,'' Becker said.

But the three-time champion was not always pleased with his play, often chastising himself between points for unforced errors. He did lift his play at the right moment. In the final game, Becker broke with a service return to his opponent's feet, and on match point he ripped a forehand passing shot down the line.

Becker will also be in an interesting match Monday, when he meets former champion Pat Cash.

The Australian, who has been plagued by injuries since winning Wimbledon in 1987, is ranked No. 124 and needed a wild-card invitation to enter the tournament. On Friday, Cash's volleying was exceptional in his 6-1, 6-1, 6-4 elimination of clay-court specialist Juan Aquilera.

''My game has improved ... about 3,000 percent since the start of the week '' Cash said. ''In the first two sets, I played just about as well as I can play.''

''Pat is very good on grass,'' said Becker. ''He's in good form. ... It's going to be a difficult match. It's going to be an exciting match for the spectators.''

For the fourth straight year, Jonas Svensson's Wimbledon journey ended in the third round. The 10th seed allowed American David Wheaton to rally from a two-set deficit and capture a 2-6, 6-7 (9-11), 6-1, 6-0, 6-4 victory.

In other third-round matches involving seed, No. 3 Monica Seles triumphed 6-3, 6-3 over Australia's Anne Minter; No. 5 Zina Garrison eliminated Andrea Leand of the United States 6-0, 6-3; No. 10 Helena Sukova downed Alexia Dechaume of France 6-4, 6-3; and No. 13 Jana Novotna stopped Australia's Jo-Anne Faull 6-2, 6-1.

Seles, 16, has won 35 consecutive matches. She gained the French Open crown with her steady baseline game, but said the fast grass of Wimbledon forces her to go for winners rather than keeping the ball in play.

''Here I have to go more for my shots and not be as defensive as on the clay courts,'' she said. ''If I give the ball back (in Paris), I can get away with it. But here it's impossible. The serves are unbelievably fast on the grass courts. I'm not as sure if I will hold on my serve. I have to work much harder than, say, a big server.''

On the men's side, No. 7 Brad Gilbert dispatched Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands 6-1, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2, and French semifinalist Goran Ivanisevic triumphed 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 over Derrick Rostagno, who upset three-time champion John McEnroe in the opening round.

BOSTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The Bank of Boston Corp. adopted an anti-takeover plan Friday, the same day the state legislature passed a law allowing holding companies from outside New England to acquire institutions in the state.

The company, which opposed the legislation, said the timing was coincidental. But a spokesman, Wayne Taylor, said, ''We recognized there certainly was going to be some curiosity as to the timing.''

Bank of Boston, the region's biggest banking company, also said it knew of no plan for a hostile takeover.

The measure will grant stockholders of record on July 12 the right to buy additional shares at a ''substantial discount'' if any person or group acquires 15 percent of Bank of Boston stock. The acquiring group would be excluded from exercising the rights.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Fleet/Norstar Financial Group Inc. of Providence, R.I., the region's No. 2 banking company, said it lobbied in favor of the bill Bank of Boston opposed and for a special provision that restored Fleet to the status of other New England banks.

That renewed status allows it to buy a Bay State bank immediately. Under the compromise terms of the Massachusetts bill, banks from outside the region have to wait until July 1992 before they can buy a bank that did not want to be acquired.

Fleet lost its New England standing in 1988 when it acquired five New York state banks. However, the Fleet spokesman, Robert Lougee, said Fleet had been singled out by special legislation after its New York acquisition and ''what we have been trying to do is get back to where we were before.''

''We've said for ten years we had aspirations of extending our banking franchise in the Northeast. The last time I checked, Massaschusetts was in the Northeast,'' Lougee said.

However, he declined to say what banks might be a target of a Fleet acquisition.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - Growing expectations of a decline in U.S. interest rates and a wider belief that Japan is moving towards an upward move in its own rate structure depressed the dollar Friday in New York trading.

Currency traders said the foreign exchange market was focused intently on the interest rate picture around the world at a time when several key countries appear to be going into transitional phases.

That was in part a response by investors to uncertainty about the launch over the weekend of German economic and monetary union, an unprecedented experiment which could affect the deutsche mark and interest rates.

U.S. rates, too, were up in the air after President Bush said increased tax revenues were the only answer to a budget deficit that is swelling to mammoth proportions as the savings and loan bailout cost rises.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.6605 West German marks, down from 1.6725 marks Thursday, and at 152.15 Japanese yen, down from 153.10 at the previous close.

"The market is fixated on interest rates right now," said corporate adviser Terri Reid of Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago. Uncertainty has pushed funds into currencies of countries with high interest rates, like Britain and Canada, Reid said.

Carmine Rotondo, manager of New York corporate trading for Security Pacific International Bank, said Bush's comments Friday that the nation was at a "make-or-break" point on the budget "bracketed" investor concerns.

Lower U.S. interest rates are bearish for the dollar because global investors then seek higher-yielding investments in other currencies.

Other dollar rates: 1.4145 Swiss francs, down from 1.42; 5.58 French francs, down from 5.6150; and 1,219 Italian lire, off from 1,227. The pound rose to $1.7485 from $1.7380.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly higher against the main currencies, with trading sluggish on foreign exchange markets.

Both the dollar and the deutsche mark held their ground ahead of Sunday's German monetary union as dealers said no one wanted to hold any major positions in the units over the weekend.

"We are simply waiting to see what the mood is going to be next week, when we effectively will have monetary union," Klaus Elsner of Deutsche Bank said.

The dollar closed slightly lower in Frankfurt at 1.6650 marks against 1.6660 Thursday but rose in Zurich to 1.4170 Swiss francs against 1.4115.

In London, the pound climbed after Leon Brittan, European Commissioner for financial matters, said the United Kingdom will become a full member of the European Monetary System within a short period.

Rumors circulated that the government would announce its entry into the EMSexchange-rate mechanism this weekend. The pound closed at $1.7450 against $1.7400.

One trader said the dollar fell on Bush's allusion to a budget deal with Congress, which could bring lower interest rates.

The dollar rose slightly in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively, 5.61 French francs against 5.6005, 34.25 Belgian francs against 34.24 and 1,226 lire against 1,225.75.

Earlier in Tokyo, expectations of a narrowed gap between U.S. and Japanese interest rates pushed the dollar down 1.57 yen to close at 152.85 yen, against 154.42 yen after the previous session.

In Zurich, gold closed higher at $352.50 an ounce against $350 Thursday. In London, gold climbed to $352.75 an ounce compared with $352.25.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $351.50 an ounce, up from $350.25 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $352.10 an ounce, up from $351.40.

Silver closed higher in Zurich at $4.85 an ounce against $4.80, but the metal was unchanged in London at $4.84 an ounce.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.845 an ounce, up from $4.815. The Comex settled silver at $4.813 an ounce, up from $4.794.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL. (JUNE 29) UPI - Scientists expressed cautious optimism Friday that despite a seriously flawed optical system, the Hubble Space Telescope can still produce valuable data about the birth and fate of the universe.

In a special position paper written by members of the Hubble Science Working Group and the space telescope users committee, scientists agreed the $1.5 billion project ''has clearly suffered a major setback due to telescope optics that are well below specification.''

Even so, they wrote, ''we are convinced that the long-term prospects for completion of the science program are highly encouraging'' and that Hubble ''still has the potential to produce many key discoveries in the near future.''

The Hubble Space Telescope, the most expensive satellite ever built, was launched from the shuttle Discovery April 25. Engineers announced Wednesday that one of Hubble's supposedly near-perfect mirrors was incorrectly shaped, preventing the telescope from bringing starlight into sharp focus.

The telescope's 94.5-inch primary mirror and a smaller relay mirror were ground and polished by what is now Hughes Danbury Optical Systems Inc. of Danbury, Conn.

For some reason, the curvature of one of the mirrors is off by about 2 microns, or about 4 percent the thickness of a human hair. The result was spherical aberration, which causes light striking different parts of the main mirror to come to a focus at more than one point.

That causes blurry images and in Hubble's case, the best possible focus is still seven times worse than called for in NASA's original specifications for the optical system.

Such aberration can be counteracted by putting special lenses into cameras and other instruments to bring the light to a focus at one point much like glasses can correct vision problems on Earth.

The instruments aboard Hubble that are most affected by the focusing problem are two high-tech cameras that were to have taken long-awaited pictures of stars and galaxies at the edge of the universe. Now, they are virtually useless, although good photos of especially bright targets are still possible.

A new Wide Field/Planetary Camera currently is under development for installation in 1993 during a shuttle repair mission. The camera will be modified to compensate for Hubble's optical defects.

''It appears highly probable that the full imaging capabilities of HST can be restored by straight-forward modifications to the second-generation scientific instruments,'' the position paper said.

''In comparison to the huge investment already made in HST, the effort involved in correcting the optical aberrations is fairly small.''

Hubble also is equipped with two light-splitting spectrographs and a high-tech light meter that are not as seriously affected by focusing problems.

Until replacement cameras can be installed, Hubble will concentrate on less-than-spectacular spectrographic studies that are impossible from ground-based observatories.

''HST right now has capabilities that vastly exceed ground-based observatories,'' the position paper said. ''Most important are spectroscopy, photometry and imaging at ultraviolet wavelengths, none of which are possible at all from the ground.

''High resolution visible-light imaging on bright objects will also be possible, achieving to some degree the original fine details expected in HST pictures.''

Over the telescope's planned 15-year lifetime, officials said, at least 90 percent of the observatory's scientific goals should be met despite its optical defects.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Lawmakers blasted NASA Friday for failing to detect crippling flaws in $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope before launch, saying it casts doubt on NASA's ability to handle future high-tech projects like the mission to Mars.

''What does this mean for the rest of the things you want to do? Are we going to keep ending up with techno turkeys?,'' said Sen. Barbara Mikulski D-Md., head of the Senate appropriations subcommittee that funds NASA programs. ''I think this has seriously hurt the credibility of NASA when they've had so much time and enough money to get it right.''

''You want to go more into space, you want to go to Mars. What would we do if we had sent astronauts out and the life-support failed? Say 'Oh, no! We forgot to send you lunch - and oxygen','' Mikulski said.

Appearing at a Senate hearing, Lennard Fisk, NASA's associate administrator for space science and applications, said he could neither confirm nor deny reports that NASA decided against using top-secret military testing equipment that may have detected debilitating errors in the telescope's vital mirrors prior to launch.

The New York Times quoted industry experts as saying the military system, routinely used to test mirrors on spy satellites, probably would have picked up the problem. The Wall Street Journal also quoted Robert Brown, Hubble's chief scientist from 1983 to 1985, as saying ground-based tests costing a few hundred thousand dollars ''could have caught the problem.'' Brown said he did not know why NASA did not perform such tests.

Fisk once again refused to speculate on how one of the telescope's two light-gathering mirrors ended up ground into the wrong shape. The error - which threw the mirror's curve off less than one-twentieth of the width of a strand of human hair - has prevented Hubble from bringing starlight to a sharp focus and delayed, probably for several years under the best circumstances, long-awaited pictures of stars at the edge of the universe.

''I am extremely concerned by the fact that after spending almost $2 billion over a 12-year period, we only now find out that this type of mistake could occur and NASA did not test the two mirrors in conjunction with each other as they are normally used,'' Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., head of the Senate Subcommittee on Science, Technology and Space.

Fisk said such a trial was ''judged not to have a good cost-benefit ratio.'' He offered no cost estimate of such testing, but said the procedure would have been ''very elaborate'' because it must be performed under weightless conditions.

The mirrors were ground about 1980 by a contractor, now known as Hughes

Danbury Optical Systems Inc. of Danbury, Conn. Gore noted that was a period in which NASA had slashed its quality control staff by 70 percent - and a period in which the defective rocket booster that caused the Jan. 28 1986, explosion of the shuttle Challenger was produced and the Atlantis and Columbia shuttles, which are now plagued by fuel leaks, were designed.

''Since the mistakes that were made in the Hubble were made at roughly the same time as the mistakes leading to the Challenger tragedy were made, is it possible that NASA's decision to eliminate 70 percent of its quality control personnel was the common denominator in both problems?,'' Gore asked.

Fisk said he did not know what role quality assurance efforts played in Hubble's problems, but said that issue would be among those studied by a independent review committee investigating the mistake.

Gore asked Fisk if, given the shuttle leaks and the problems with Hubble, NASA is ready to undertake complex, long-lasting missions like the moon-Mars initiative proposed by President Bush.

''We know what we are doing,'' said Fisk, emphasizing management of the space agency has changed radically since the early '80s.

''Anytime you press technology as far as NASA is willing to press it, occasionally you fall short. We don't deliberately fall short. We do our very best not to fall short,'' he said.

About 40 percent of the scientific projects NASA planned to conduct during Hubble's first several years will probably be delayed due to the faulty mirror.But NASA officials said they think Hubble will achieve at least 90 percent of its scientific goals over its planned 15-year lifetime once new instruments, equipped with lenses to compensate for the mirror flaws, are installed by a shuttle mission in about three years.

Hubble project scientist Edward Weiler said Hughes Danbury, formerly Perkin-Elmer Corp., won the contract to grind and polish Hubble's mirrors by coming up with the best proposal to meet requirements set by the space agency.

''We didn't tell them what the prescription was,'' Weiler said. ''They determined what the prescription should be. But there are many checkers in the system and somewhere the system failed. We don't know whether it was software, we don't know whether it was hardware.

''This all happened eight to 10 years ago and it's going to be a real detective job for our independent team to go out and dig up the facts,'' said Weiler, who expects a report from the panel in a couple months.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 29) UPI - Nintendo of America won a preliminary injunction in federal court Friday barring Lewis Galoob Toys from marketing its ''Game Genie'' based on Nintendo charges of copyright infringement.

Steven Klein, Galoob executive vice president, said the firm will file an emergency appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

South San Francisco-based Galoob had been preparing to market the game in July.

The Game Genie is a device designed to attach to popular Nintendo video games, such as ''Super Mario Brothers'' and ''Double Dragon,'' allowing players to customize the games so that characters become invincible with infinite lives and able to change game levels on demand.

Characters fight through worlds full of varied combatants, including turtles, toadstools and dragons. Nintendo argues the games would become boring andunmarketable if Game Genie allowed players to defeat all foes at each playing.

Nintendo accused Galoob in a June 1 lawsuit of creating a derivative version of Nintendo video games in violation of the copyright laws.

U.S. District Judge Robert Schnacke said, ''Although the matter is not entirely black and white, Nintendo will prevail.''

''The (Galoob) device can solely and only be termed a derivative work,'' he said.

''The right to make changes in the game clearly belongs to Nintendo,'' Schnacke said.

Schnacke also refused to stay the injunction against Galoob while it pursues an appeal.

Withholding the Galoob product from the market would have far less harm to Galoob than allowing the toy company to intrude on the Nintendo market, he said.

William Trautman, Nintendo attorney said the Galoob Game Genie attachment eliminates the fun, challenge and excitement from the Nintendo games.

He said Nintendo games are designed for 300 hours of play to reach the end while the Game Genie could reduce that to four hours.

Gary Reback, Galoob attorney unsuccessfully argued that the Game Genie was ''simply a tool'' that permits the game user to make adaptations to the Nintendo program.

Klein said, ''The choice should be up to the consumer... if they have gotten to the seventh world, they should be allowed to start again at world seven.''

Redmond, Wash.-based Nintendo is the largest video game maker in the country, controlling about 80 percent of the market.

The total retail market for games and machines is $5.1 billion a year.

Galoob Toys, of South San Francisco, had revenues of $227.6 million in 1989.

IPSWICH, MA (JUNE 29) UPI - Proceeds from a new edition of Washington Irving's biography of the prophet Mohammed will benefit victims of last week's devastating earthquake in Iran, the book's publisher said Friday.

Charles Getchell, publisher and editor of The Ipswich Press, said a sell-out of the first print run of ''Washington Irving's Life of Mohammed'' could generate up to $35,000 for the U.S. Committee for UNICEF, which is helping provide emergency supplies to the Iranian Red Crescent Society.

At least 50,000 people died and three times as many were injured in the massive June 21 quake northwest of Tehran. Some 500,000 were left homeless.

''The story seemed to get worse and worse,'' said Getchell, 61. ''The book is linked with that part of the world, and of course it's also on Islam.''

Irving researched his book - first published in 1849 as ''Mahomet and His Successors'' - while serving as a U.S. diplomat in Spain.

''If anyone wants to extract some irony from the fact that American interest in reading a fair-minded account of the life of the prophet Mohammed will be producing funds to aid the Iranian people, he is welcome to it,'' Getchell said. ''Irony is always a useful commodity in the publishing business.''

Earlier this week, author Salman Rushdie - who was forced into hiding after Iran's late spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini put a bounty on his head - donated more than $8,000 to an earthquake relief fund.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Friday it approved the sale of the Gibraltar Federal Savings and Loan Association, one of the biggest thrifts to be seized by the government, to Security Pacific Corp.

The price of the sale was not disclosed.

The Fed said Gibraltar, of Simi Valley, Calif., has assets of $5.3 billion while Los Angeles-based Security Pacific, parent of Security Pacific National Bank, has assets of $74.4 billion.

On Wednesday, Security Pacific said it won the bidding for most of the assets of Gibraltar, including its 83 branches in California, but had not completed a final agreement with the Resolution Trust Corp., the agency charged with selling assets of failed thrifts.

''Security Pacific and all of its bank subsidiaries currently meet all applicable capital standards and, upon consummation of the proposed transactions, will continue to meet all applicable capital standards,'' the Fed said.

In addition, the Fed also said Friday it approved the sale of a Gibraltar Savings unit in Bellevue, Wash., which has assets of $548 million, to Security Pacific.

According to industry sources, about a dozen banks and thrifts considered bids for Gibraltar, but many were believed to have dropped out because the savings institution was continuing to hemorrhage money.

Security Pacific, which operates 560 branches in California, outbid an offer from Great Western Financial Corp., a large California-based thrift. Analysts had estimated that the winning bid was in the $150 million range.

The 83 California branches will give Security Security Pacifc National Bank increased market penetration in areas of the state where the bank was weak, said analyst Tony Howard of Crowell Weedon & Co.

Federal banking regulators seized Gibraltar in March 1989, saying it was being run in an unsafe and unsound manner, even though it was technically solvent.

The regulators said the thrift was essentially bankrupt because some of its assets were being carried at values well above their actual market value.

Gibraltar lost more than $250 million in 1987 and 1988, lost another $500 million last year, stemming from a combination of rising interest rates and the collapse of many of its large real estate loans.

The RTC has already sold Gibraltar's biggest problem asset - the Hyatt Grand Champions resort in Indian Wells, Calif. - for $65 million in March to Maruko Inc., a Japanese real estate firm.

NORTH KINGSTOWN, RI (JUNE 29) UPI - Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co. said Friday it bought part of a West German metrology company for $11 million cash and $6 million more in deferred payments.

Brown & Sharpe acquired the industrial metrology technology division of Wild Leitz GmbH from Leica PLC. The division designs and manufactures precision measuring equipment.

''For several years, Brown & Sharpe has sought to align itself with strategic partners which would complement its metrology businesses, both geographically and technically,'' said Brown & Sharpe President Donald A. Roach. ''We believe this acquisition to be a major step in this direction.''

Brown & Sharpe will pay $11 million at the close of the deal and then make payments of $3 million on both March 31, 1991, and March 31, 1992. The company will also assume about $4 million in liabilities.

Brown & Sharpe did not buy an estimated $10 million in trade accounts receivable, meaning it will provide necesary working capital for the industrial metrology division.

Brown & Sharpe also entered a lease agreement for the division's factory with the option to purchase. The cost of the option and an additional planned building are estimated at $6 million, according to Brown & Sharpe.

Industrial metrology had net earnings of $1.8 million on sales of $228.1 million in 1989.

''The business is widely recognized as manufacturing the world's highest-accuracy coordinate measuring machines for laboratory and shop-floor applications, while Brown & Sharpe produces lower cost machines for production applications,'' Roach said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The attorney for Mayor Marion Barry Friday began dissecting the FBI videotape of the mayor smoking crack cocaine in a downtown hotel, claiming Barry was entrapped after he came to the room seeking sex, not drugs.

During sometimes stinging cross-examination of former model Rasheeda Moore defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy got Moore to acknowledge that Barry apparently ''didn't have drugs on his mind,'' when he met her at the Vista International Hotel Jan. 18.

Mundy pointed to transcripts of telephone calls in which Barry said he did not want to enter the hotel room at all, but would prefer to meet Moore elsewhere.

Barry also said he wanted to ''make love'' with Moore, but never mentioned drugs.

The 90-minute videotape, showed to the jury Thursday, shows Barry smoking crack from a pipe, but also shows Moore and Barry embracing and kissing on the hotel bed.

Moore said Barry brought up the subject of drugs when he asked ''Have you been good lately?'' and inquired whether another woman with Moore - actually an undercover FBI agent - would ''mess around.''

Mundy said those statements were inquiries about sex, not drugs.

''I know he wasn't thinking of promiscuous sex,'' Moore said.

''How do you know?'' Mundy asked.

''I just know,'' said Moore, who testified Wednesday she and Barry were lovers for two years, a relationship that ended in 1988.

Mundy claimed Moore, not Barry, first brought up the subject of drugs when she mentioned ''tooting,'' a term for snorting cocaine.

''It is obvious that the mayor didn't have drugs on his mind, isn't it?'' Mundy asked at one point.

''That is correct,'' replied Moore, who testified Wednesday she and Barry used cocaine more than 100 times together in recent years.

Mundy, using transcripts from the videotape, pointed to a segment where Moore asked Barry: ''So, you want to do something?'' and Barry responded, ''No, not tonight.''

''He's saying no to drugs,'' said Mundy, trying to make a legal case for an entrapment defense at Barry's drug and perjury trial.

''Is there anything you can point to where he asked you for drugs?'' Mundy asked.

''No, I cannot,'' responded Moore.

After court Friday, an upbeat Barry held a rare impromptu news conference, calling it the ''160th day of Marion Barry being free of any ... drug of any kind.''

He said the trial is ''not just about some alleged criminal act on the part of Marion Barry. It's a larger issue than that.'' He would not elaborate.

Moore testified she was in the hotel room ''for a purpose,'' but said she did not ''persuade or coerce Mr. Barry in any way that night.''

''I was not out to get Mr. Barry,'' she said.

Mundy implied later that Moore may have been angry at Barry for a relationship he allegedly had with a woman named Maria McCarthy.

Moore is heard on the videotape shouting ''Maria, Maria'' just before federal agents burst into the room.

Asked what she meant, Moore said: ''I have no idea. I wish I could figure out why I said it.''

Mundy told reporters later the comment was her way of telling Barry, ''I told you I'd get you for Maria.''

''Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned,'' said Mundy.

Cross examination of Moore was scheduled to continue Monday.

Moore initially denied she invited the mayor to the room, but changed her testimony after Mundy played a tape of a telephone conversation in which Moore told Barry she had just ordered room service and wanted Barry to meet her there.

''Weren't you trying to get him upstairs,'' Mundy asked.

''Yes,'' said Moore.

Barry, 54, is charged with three felony counts of perjury and 11 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and conspiracy. If convicted of all charges he would face a maximum 26 years in prison and $1.85 million in fines.

A silent courtroom watched Thursday as the tape was played for the first time, showing Barry and Moore lounging around the hotel room talking before Moore bought crack from the undercover FBI agent.

In the most gripping part of the tape, Barry picked up the crack pipe and asked how it worked, adding ''I never done it before.'' But when he received no directions, he lit the drug and inhaled.

After smoking the crack and preparing to leave, Barry is swarmed over by FBI agents who burst through a side door.

''That was a good setup, wasn't it?'' Barry said. ''I don't have anything. I didn't do anything. I shouldn't have come up here. I'll be damned. How'd I get tricked into this stuff?''

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 29) UPI - Author Irving Wallace, who provided the world with a legacy of best-sellers and a family of other successful writers, died Friday of pancreatic cancer. He was 74.

Wallace died at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center at 12:48 p.m. with his wife and children at his side, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said.

The author had entered the hospital June 26 and remained in serious condition until his death.

The Saturday Review magazine in 1987 named Wallace one of the five most widely read authors in the world, with sales of his 33 books topping 194 million copies. The number of people who had read his books in all forms, the world over, was placed at 970 million.

Born in Chicago, on March 19, 1916, Wallace's family moved to Kenosha, Wis., one year later where the young man earned a reputation as a a fierce debater. The National Forensic League ranked him one of America's ten best young public speakers in 1933.

Since 1956, Wallace refused all offers for public speaking engagements, preferring to have his thoughts expressed in a series of best-selling books.

Wallace did not enjoy immediate acceptance as a writer. Although he sold his first short story at the age of 15, his writings did not enjoy wide popularity until 1955, when ''The Chapman Report,'' his fifth book, became an international best seller. From that time on, every novel written by Wallace reached the top section of the sales charts.

Among those best-sellers were ''The Prize,'' ''The Man,'' ''The Plot,''

''The Word,'' ''The Three Sirens,'' ''The Seven Minutes,'' ''The R Document,'' ''The Pigeon Project'' and ''The Second Lady.''

Wallace authored more than 500 stories and articles. They appeared in such magazines as ''Esquire,'' ''Cosmopolitan,'' ''The Saturday Evening Post,'' ''Collier's'' and ''Reader's Digest.'' It was estimated his novels alone sold 130 million copies.

Even World War II failed to stop the flow from Wallace's pen, or typewriter. He spent almost four years as a writer in the Army air force's First Motion Picture Unit. He was one of the writers on the ''Why We Fight'' documentaries for the Signal Corps Photographic Center.

Hollywood beckoned Wallace after the war ended and he spent 10 years in the movie capital writing screenplays.

In 1958, he quit scenario writing ''forever,'' he said, to deovote his time to novels. Since 1959, the motion picture rights to 10 of his books have been acquired by film studios, although Wallace refused to adapt any of them for the screen himself.

Wallace used an easy-flowing style of writing with plots and sub-plots that were ideal for motion pictures. Among the actors appearing in movie versions of Wallace novels were Edward G. Robinson, Jane Fonda, James Earl Jones and David Janssen.

On June 3, 1941, Wallace married Sylvia Kahn, thus establishing a family responsibile for selling tens of millions of books.

On her own, Sylvia Wallace has written two books, ''The Fountains'' and ''Empress.'' In collaboration with her husband, she contributed to ''The Book of Lists No. 2'' and ''The Intimate Sex Lives of Famous People.''

Their son David, born in 1948, writes under his grandfather's original surname, Wallechinsky, and is the author of 12 books, including collaborations with his father on ''The People's Almanac'' and ''The People's Almanac 2.''

Wallace's daughter Amy, born in 1955, has published eight books, including collaborations with her father on ''The Book of Lists.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - The stock market closed out the first half of 1990 with a bounce back from last week's sharp drop sparked by bargain hunting and new confidence that a plan can be found to cut the budget deficit.

The Dow Jones industrial average, rising 1.98 Friday to close at 2880.69 jumped 23.51 points, or 0.8 percent, on the week.

Among broad market indexes, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 2.59 to 358.02 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.24 points to close the week at 195.47.

Advances led declines 1,025-844 among the 2,174 issues traded this week. Big Board volume totaled 702,897,090 shares, compared with 717,051,020 a week earlier and 810,849,200 a year ago.

The market began the week on a down note. On Monday, fears about interest rates cut short the market's attempt to rebound from the plunge of the Friday before.

Rates rose sharply in the bond market Monday as players prepared themselves for a wave of auctions this week. The 4-year note auction went especially well, however, and helped bonds rebound later in the week.

An unexpected statement from President Bush about the budget deficit also helped bonds rebound from Monday's weakness.

After a two-hour breakfast meeting with Republican and Democratic leaders, Bush reversed his long-standing opposition to tax increases, saying ''it is clear to me'' that the need to reduce the deficit requires ''tax revenue increases'' and cuts in domestic spending.

In the early going, Treasury bonds rallied on the news and stocks followed since a lower deficit likely means less government borrowing and more room for interest rates to fall. Some analysts also say a deficit-reduction plan might prompt the Federal Reserve to cut short-term interest rates.

But the absence of details about what types of ''tax revenue increases'' Bush would accept proved the market's undoing and prices closed lower. Bonds closed higher but off their highs.

Wednesday brought a gloomy earnings forecast from AT&T, which said it expected second-quarter earnings lower than profits in the year-ago period. The company did not specify what its earnings would be and blamed the downturn on weak domestic product sales in some of its businesses.

Caterpillar's stock was punished Monday and Tuesday after making a similar projection that profits for 1990 were expected to be substantially lower than the $497 million the company earned in 1989.

The selloff in AT&T did not spread through the rest of the market and prices closed higher, as they did Thursday and Friday, when end-of-quarter ''window-dressing'' buying boosted prices.

''I think the week should be noted more for the beginning of a recovery from a corrective phase in spite of earnings disappointments in specific stocks,'' said Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co.

''Some of the week's gain is because prices had come down. It's buying from people who had been waiting for lower prices,'' he said.

Jarrett also said Bush's comments early Friday that economic growth was ''sluggish'' and that a plan to cut the budget deficit would help the economy and interest rates showed what he said earlier in the week ''was not a slip of the tongue.

''This is a real wild card for the bond market,'' Jarrett went on. ''They hadn't factored in a budget compromise. It could be very positive as it begins to unfold. It would give rates a boost - and be a real turbocharger for equities.''

Other analysts, meanwhile, were not so enthusiastic.

''So far, it's all conversation,'' said Alfred Goldman, market strategist at A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis. ''I think we'll soon get back to the cold reality of politics as usual about cutting the deficit.

''So far Bush has said all the right things and the Democrats have said the right things, but if you look at 30 years of history it won't be 'let's-roll-up-our-sleeves-and-work-for-the-good-of-the-nation' time,'' predicted Goldman.

On the trading floor this week, AT&T was the most active issue, driven down 3 5/8 to 38 1/2 on the expected downturn in quarterly earnings.

Philip Morris followed, up 1 3/4 to 46 1/2. Caterpillar was third, sinking 10 7/8 to 52 5/8 - also the victim of an earnings-related selloff.

Among the other blue chips, IBM added 1 1/4 to 117 1/2 and American Express, which paid its dividend Friday, rose 1/4 to 30 3/4. Boeing gained 1 1/8 to 58 1/2, but General Motors lost 3/8 to 47 5/8.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index added 1.92 to close Friday at 361.21. Advances led declines 413-404 among the 1,005 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 62,944,955 shares, compared with 62,423,780 traded a week earlier and 59,728,290 traded in the same week a year ago.

Fruit of the Loom led the Amex actives, up 5/8 to 12 1/2.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 2.96 to end the week at 462.29.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - The bond market gained again Friday to close out the week on a note of optimism following President Bush's about-face on taxes, which could lead to a Washington budget-deficit deal and lower interest rates.

Bush's carefully-worded statement that ''higher tax revenues'' would be needed to counter a budget swollen by the astronomical costs of the savings and loan bailout was seen as a turning point in the deficit debate.

His utterance of the ''T-word,'' and implicit acceptance of some of the onus of raising taxes, was essential to convince Democrats that his proposal for a bilateral deficit pact was not an election-year ambush.

Reducing the deficit means reducing the government's demand for financing of its spendthrift ways, which means looser capital markets, which economists say should translate into lower long-term market interest rates.

That prospect set off bond-buying, because if interest rates decline, prices of bonds will move in the opposite direction.

''It's largely optimism ... that the (budget) summit committee may come up with something almost meaningful this time,'' said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI-McGraw Hill, a financial analysis firm in Lexington, Mass.

At close of trading Friday, the benchmark 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 of 2020, traded at 103 24/32 to yield 8.40 percent, compared with 102 29/32 and 8.48 percent the week before. That translated into a respectable gain for the week of 7/8 point, or $8.75 per $1,000 face value.

''The implications for the bond market of this thing are quite profound,'' said William Melton, chief economist for IDS Financial Services of Minneapolis, Minn., referring to the envisioned deficit deal.

''This is the first time anybody has really talked about anything that would produce big (reduction) numbers,'' he said.

He said a fossil fuels excise tax and elimination of a tax code ''bubble'' that has meant tax savings for upper-income citizens - two options under discussion - could bring $200 billion in new revenues over five years.

Melton said reduction of the federal deficit on such a scale could mean much lower long-term market interest rates.

There was also some market anticipation that the Federal Reserve could decide Monday, when its policy-making Federal Open Market Committee meets, to bring down short-term rates to stimulate the economy.

This may reflect wishful thinking, though, because most analysts say economic indicators have been too mixed to expect Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, known for biding his time, to rush to ease credit now.

That is why U.S. jobs data for June, to be released next Friday, could prove critical in deciding the Fed's next move.

''The feeling now is that they probably will ease, but that will depend on the employment report on Friday,'' said Latta of DRI/McGraw Hill.

Another development in the week which lifted bond prices was an announcement by the Resolution Funding Corp., the federal savings and loan bailout finance agency, that it would sell 30-year bonds.

Refcorp offerings earlier this year of 40-year bonds got a lukewarm response from the market, which had trouble digesting them.

Ten-year Treasury notes closed at 103 01/32 to yield 8.41 percent, compared with 102 14/32 and 8.50 percent a week earlier. Five-year notes ended at 100 18/32 to yield 8.35 percent, against 100 05/32 and 8.45 percent.

Three-year Treasury notes closed at 100 27/32 to yield 8.28 percent, compared with 100 17/32 and 8.41 percent a week before. Two-year notes were at 100 09/32 to yield 8.22 percent, against 100 07/32 and 8.37 percent.

Six-month Treasury bills were discounted at a rate of 7.60 percent to yield 8.01 percent, against 7.63 percent and 8.04 percent. Three month T-bills ended at a 7.73 percent discount to yield 7.99 percent, compared with last week's discount of 7.75 percent and yield of 8.01 percent.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.'s index of long-term Treasury bonds gained 9.39 points in the week, or 0.72 percent, ending at 1,300.84.

The Federal funds rate finished at 8 percent, 1/4 point under the perceived Federal Reserve target rate of 8 1/4 percent. The key rate, which underlies most other U.S. rates, is indirectly controlled by the Fed.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - Amerada Hess Corp. announced Friday an agreement to purchase Placer Cego Petroleum Holdings Ltd. and its Canadian oil and natural gas fields for $260 million through a company jointly owned by a Hess subsidiary and another firm.

Hess said in a statement that a Canadian company, jointly owned by its Amerada Minerals Corp. of Canada Ltd. subsidiary and by Poco Petroleums Ltd., reached the purchase agreement with Placer Dome Inc., parent of Placer Cego.

The purchase covers proven and probable reserves of about 237 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 9 million barrels of crude oil and natural gas liquids as well as 250,000 acres of undeveloped land in British Columbia and Alberta, the statement said.

Hess said Amerada Minerals will acquire most of the exploration acreage and about 80 percent of the producing properties, while Poco will keep the ownership of Placer Cego and the balance of the producing properties.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - A federal appeals court Friday reversed the convictions of former congressman Robert Garcia and his wife in the Wedtech scandal, clearing the way for a new trial.

The Garcias were convicted last year of conspiracy and extortion and acquitted of bribery and gratuity charges in connection with his congressional activities on behalf of Wedtech, a South Bronx defense contractor that became enmeshed in a corruption case stretching to the nation's capital.

The case resulted in three-year prison sentences for the Bronx Democrat Garcia, 57, and his wife, Jane Lee, 48.

A request for a new trial was denied by the trial judge, and the Garcias appealed.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Friday said the conviction should be overturned because the extortion count was improperly presented to the jury, making the basis for conviction ''ambiguous'' in the court's opinion.

The court said the charges were based on two theories: extortion by wrongful use of fear and extortion by using an official office to pressure individuals into making financial payments. In examining trial records, however, the appeals court could not determine under which theory the jury convicted the Garcias.

''Therefore, for our purposes, we must assume the jury could have found the Garcias guilty of extortion under either (of two theories) presented by the government,'' it said. ''Consequently, if there was insufficient evidence for one of the theories, the verdict is ambiguous and a new trial must be granted.''

A Wedtech officer, Mario Moreno, testified he met with the Garcias in 1984 and Garcia suggested his wife be hired as a public relations officer, paid through an intermediary, and that the congressman be kept informed of the firm's activities.

Friday's decision said the government claimed Garcia made the suggestion knowing ''Wedtech's economic life depended on continued political influence,'' and argued it was ''an implicit threat.''

The court, however, said, ''This is not the mindset of economic extortion; rather it is the thinking of a shrewd, unethical businessman who senses and seeks to capitalize on a moneymaking opportunity.''

When asked during the trial why he approved payment to Garcia, Moreno said otherwise the congressman would not continue to support the firm.

Moreno later added, ''I felt that if we were not to satisfy those payments we were not going to receive any activity beneficial to us regarding those ... contracts.''

The court said that despite ''Garcia's disgraceful request for money'' from Wedtech, the company ''was not risking the loss of anything to which it was legally entitled'' by not making the payments.

''Garcia was in effect offering to sell his congressional power, but he was not using that power as a way to intimidate Wedtech. By paying the Garcias, Wedtech was purchasing an advocate, not buying off a thug,'' the court said.

When the husband and wife were sentenced in January, it was the last sentence imposed in the unwieldy corruption case that started with a small minority-owned machine shop in economically devastated South Bronx and stretched to Washington, D.C.

The machine shop grew into a multimillion-dollar defense contractor by bribing influential officials and taking advantage of contracts designed for minority-owned businesses.

The scandal ruined the career of several other Bronx politicians, including former Rep. Mario Biaggi, who resigned in August 1988 after his conviction.

Biaggi's Wedtech conviction was upheld Friday.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The embattled National Endowment for the Arts announced grants Friday to 14 performance artists totalling $104,000, but one prominent artist criticized for her semi-nude performances was refused money.

In a two-page statement announcing the grants, NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer said, ''We are excited about the potential of these artists.''

Noting that the type of art is relatively new, Frohnmayer said ''we must make our decisions carefully to ensure that what is funded represents the very best art of its kind.''

Left off the list, however, was New York performance artist Karen Finley, who has been a frequent target of conservative art critics for her semi-nude performances.

She was among 18 people recommended for a grant by an NEA panel made up of other artists, but the committee that has final say on who gets money struck her and three others from the list without public explanation.

''I am being punished because I am a morally concerned artist,'' Finley said Friday. ''Today begins an era of American history where our nation does not take strength from its cultural diversity but rather weakens itself by not allowing that cultural diversity a right to speak.''

People for the American Way, a 290,000-member group that promotes free expression, said other controversial artists also were denied grants, including Holly Hughes of New York and John Flec of Los Angeles.

''Frohnmayer's 'artistic' decision has the smell of politics all over it '' the group said in a statement. ''It couldn't be plainer that these grants were rejected as a sop to the Far Right. In the end, the chairman's going to find that his action today only encourages the Far Right to lengthen its hit list.''

The NEA has been under fire for the past year, stemming largely from the agency's backing of a Robert Mapplethorpe photography exhibit, which included homoerotic subjects, and an exhibit that included a photograph by Andres Serrano of a crucifix submerged in a bottle of urine.

Conservative groups, which have viewed these and a handful of other NEA-funded works as obscene, have exerted growing pressure on Congress to restrict the NEA's grant-making powers or even ax the agency.

While the NEA maintains a policy of not commenting on artists who do not receive grants, it was widely reported Friday that Frohnmayer told a private group of art professionals in Seattle that it was unlikely Finley would get any grant money.

Quoting people present at the meeting, The New York Times and The Washington Post reported that Frohnmayer said decisions on art funding have to be made in the context of ''political realities.''

In his statement announcing the grants, Frohnmayer said that ''endowment grants go only to projects which meet high standards of professional and artistic quality'' in keeping with the endowment's charter to ''encourage public understanding and appreciation of the arts.''

The controversy over federal funding of art erupted last year when Congress attached restrictions on ''obscene'' art to the NEA's 1990 appropration, causing some artists to refuse backing from the agency as a protest against censorship.

A stream of well-known performers and artists has appeared before several congressional hearings claiming any content restrictions in the fund granting process would not only amount to censorship but would guarantee mediocrity in the arts.

The issue has not yet come up for a floor vote this year in either the House or the Senate and the administration has recently backed off its strong support for a five-year authorization of the NEA without restrictions.

Rep. Dana Rohrabacker, R-Calif., a frequent critic of the NEA, said Friday that when an NEA funding authorization bill comes to the House floor sometime in July, he will propose an amendment with ''very common sense standards'' for art funding that will be ''significant, yet enforceable.''

If his amendment is rejected, Rohrabacher said, he believes there are enough votes in Congress to ''de-fund the NEA altogether.''

The 14 artists receiving the Theater Program Fellowships for Solo Performance Theater Artists and Mimes grants include:

1. Eric Bass, Putney, Vt. - $11,250.

2. Lenora Champagne, New York City - $6,500.

3. Clara Crockett, New York City - $5,000.

4. Fred Curchack, Dallas - $5,000.

5. Richard Elovich, New York City - $5,000.

6. Roman Paska, New York City - $8,000.

7. Sara Ransom, Taos, N.M. - $5,000.

8. Rachel Rosenthal, Los Angeles - $11,250.

9. Beatrice Roth, New York City - $10,250.

10. Ernesto Sanchez, Bolinas, Calif. - $5,000.

11. Daniel Stein, Milwaukee, Wis. - $6,500.

12. Nina Wise, San Raphael, Calif. - $8,500.

13. Kedric Wolfe, New York City - $6,500.

(JUNE 29) UPI - A bad day for the nation's space program... President Bush fields questions about his tax position reversal... the first fatality in California's wildfire... and a royal wedding in Japan. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

Lawmakers came down hard on NASA today for sending into space a costly telescope that doesn't work.

At a Senate hearing in Washington, members of Congress grilled NASA officials over failure to detect crucial flaws in the one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope.

Democratic Senator Barbara Mikulski of Maryland asked if NASA would keep producing what she called ''techno turkeys.'' Mikulski heads the Senate appropriations sub-committee that funds NASA programs.

She said the telescope failure- in her words- ''has seriously hurt the credibility of NASA when they've had so much time and enough money to get it right.''

Tennessee Democratic Senator Albert Gore noted that the telescope's faulty mirrors were ground in about 1980... when NASA had slashed its quality control staff by 70 percent. That's the same period when engineers designed the defective rocket booster that blew up the shuttle Challenger.

NASA associate administrator Lennard Fisk said the agency is still ready for long-range projects such as a proposed manned mission to Mars. He emphasized that NASA management has changed radically since the early '80's.

A major setback for NASA's shuttle program.

Officials at Cape Canaveral put next month's launch of the shuttle Atlantis on hold indefinitely after engineers found a fuel line leak similar to the one that delayed Columbia's launch last month.

NASA says shuttles WON'T be launched until the problem is explored and fixed. Officials say the minimum time of delay for Atlantis probably is two weeks.

Atlantis was scheduled for a military flight in mid-July.

Today's move effectively grounds NASA's shuttle fleet, with Columbia already out of action.

The news comes at a particularly bad time, with NASA already reeling from reports that the one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope's mirrors are flawed.

COLUMBUS, IND (JUNE 29) UPI - Arvin Industries Inc. said Friday it bought engine-manifold and exhaust-tube maker Tubauto, S.A., from Vallourec Group of Paris.

Tubauto, with sales of about $20 million, makes exhaust components for Renault, Peugeot and other carmakers. Its plant in Joigny, about 80 miles southeast of Paris, employs more than 200 people.

L.K. Evans, Arvin president, said Tubauto's plant adds to Arvin's ability to serve European car assembly plants through its European subsidiary, Cheswick International.

(JUNE 29) UPI - President Bush today defended his retreat from his ''NO new taxes'' pledge, saying the decision is a ''necessary step'' toward resolving the budget crisis.

Bush earlier this week said new taxes might be needed to combat the escalating budget deficit. Today, he told a White House news conference that ''new facts'' about the budget deficit and a sluggish economy prompted him to support what he calls ''tax revenue increases.''

He said it's a ''necessary step'' to get stalled budget talks going again with Congress, and he pointed out that there have been moves in the talks.

Reporters asked Bush if he considered his reversal on the tax issue a betrayal of public trust, but he said he did NOT. He also says he does NOT think it will harm his credibility.

The ''read my lips... NO new taxes'' pledge was a centerpiece of the Bush campaign in 1988. His Democratic opponent, Michael Dukakis , said at the time that a tax hike might be needed, and it cost him votes.

President Bush today vetoed a bill to give workers guaranteed unpaid medical and parental leave.

Under the measure, employers with at least 50 workers would have to offer as much as 12 weeks in one year of unpaid leave. The leave would allow workers to care for a newborn or adopted child... or a seriously ill parent, child, spouse or themselves.

The General Accounting Office has estimated that the bill would affect five percent of all businesses and almost half of all workers.

Bush said Washington should NOT tell employers what benefits to offer. He also said mandated benefits could preclude other options for workers.

House Speaker Thomas Foley noted a statement the president made during the 1988 campaign. In Bush's words- a ''gentler nation'' needs to assure ''that women don't have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child.''

Congress is NOT expected to over-ride the veto. That would give Bush 13 straight undefeated vetoes since taking office.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - Sundstrand Corp. announced Friday in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it amassed a 14.99 percent stake in Milton Roy Co. for the purpose of ''acquiring a significant investment'' in the St. Petersburg, Fla., company.

Sundstrand paid $15.6 million for 796,000 shares of Milton Roy stock, $4 million of which was taken from working capital. The remaining funds came from previously negotiated revolving-credit agreements.

Sundstrand, based in Rockford, Ill., made the purchases on the New York Stock Exchane between May 18 and last Wednesday, paying from $17.25 a share to as much as $24. The price of Milton Roy stock closed off 12.5 cents to $22.875 a share in trading Friday on the NYSE.

Officials from Sundstrand and Milton Roy met Friday to discuss Sundstrand's interest in a friendly acquisition of Milton Roy, but they refused to comment on the outcome of the meeting.

A Sundstrand spokesman said the company purposely restricted its total stake to under 15 percent of Milton Roy's outstanding stock, since larger purchases must be reported to the Federal Trade Commission under Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust laws.

Although Sundstrand said it may purchase more Milton Roy stock, it also said it would limit its total stake to no more than 19.9 percent for the time being.

The spokesman said Sundstrand's pump-manufacturing business was ''compatible'' with Milton Roy's business - manufacturing instruments and systems for metering, analyzing, controlling and testing liquids and gases.

Sundstrand and its subsidiaries are involved in the design and manufacture of components for the aerospace and industrial markets, including electrical power-generating equipment and gas turbine engines.

Although New York investor Mario Gabelli also announced Friday he had sold approximately 100,000 shares of Milton Roy stock, an attorney for Gabelli said the sale was not connected to the Sundstrand purchase.

(JUNE 29) UPI - The first fatality in southern California's Santa Barbara wildfire was reported today.

Authorities say Andrea Gurka was found dead in a creek bed behind her home in the San Marcos Pass Road area. She apparently died while trying to flee her home when it was overrun by flames Wednesday night.

The report comes as a drop in temperatures and lower winds gave firefighters their first victory against the blaze.

The fire on the outskirts of Santa Barbara was declared 50 percent contained, and firefighters hope to have it fully contained by tomorrow. But officials say it will take several more days to put it out completely.

The fire was deliberately set and has been burning out of control since Wednesday evening. The flames have charred four-thousand acres and damaged or destroyed at least 465 structures.

Federal officials say President Bush is expected to sign a declaration of emergency for the region.

The Santa Barbara fire is one of more than a dozen that erupted in the West this week, including a blaze in Glendale, California... and fires in Arizona. Fires also burned in Colorado and Texas.

Black South African leader Nelson Mandela wrapped up his visit to Detroit today with a 10-minute news conference before leaving for Los Angeles.

The African National Congress leader said his U-S tour has been ''successful beyond our wildest dreams,'' and he again urged Americans to keep up the pressure on South Africa to dismantle apartheid .

Earlier today, Mandela put on a blue Detroit Pistons jacket and cap and took a half-hour walk along the Detroit Riverfront, stopping at one point to sign an autograph.

The highlight of the day-and-a-half visit came last night at a sold-out rally in Tiger Stadium. A crowd of nearly 50-thousand people welcomed Mandela and his wife Winnie by shouting- ''Viva Nelson!'' and ''Viva Winnie!''

Los Angeles is the next-to-last city in Mandela's U-S tour. From there, he heads for Oakland.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - Moody's Investors Service Inc. lowered its rating Friday on the senior debt of Chrysler Corp. and Chrysler Financial Corp., and downgraded the financial subsidiary's commercial paper as well.

Like Standard & Poor's Corp., which downgraded Chrysler debt along with that of Ford Motor Co. earlier this month, Moody's cited expectations of weaker profits and cash flow at a time of heavy capital demands.

Moody's lowered Chrysler Corp. and Chrysler Financial Corp. senior debt to Baa3 from Baa2. The financial subsidiary's commercial paper rating was lowered to Prime-3 from Prime-2, Moody's announced.

About $22.28 billion of Chrysler debt was affected in the downgrade, Moody's said. At the same time, the agency confirmed the Baa3 rating of Chrysler Financial Corp. preferred stock.

''Given the intensely competitive environment in the car and the critical minivan and Jeep niches,'' Moody's said, ''Chrysler faces significant challenges to its market share and operating margins going forward.''

''Chrysler's vulnerability is heightened by its geographic and product concentrations and its somewhat weak financial position relative to that of its major peers,'' Moody's said.

But it said cost-cutting efforts and the sale of noncore assets could provide ''a buffer against a prolonged earnings drought.'' Chrysler also may be able to broaden its markets through ''certain strategic alliances '' Moody's said, apparently referring to Japanese joint ventures.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Lithuania's Parliament has voted to freeze its declaration of independence to allow negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The Parliament in Vilnius today declared a 100-day moratorium on the three-month-old declaration. The freeze takes effect once talks begin with Moscow on full secession.

The resolution was a compromise approved by a 69-35 vote after two days of emotional debate.

It re-states the sovereign rights of Lithuania's government, but agrees to meet Soviet President Gorbachev's demand for a moratorium. Soviet officials promised they would lift an economic blockade in return for the moratorium.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis predicts that the blockade will end tomorrow. He had called for the moratorium in a key speech before the vote.

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene also says she is pleased with the moratorium proposal her Cabinet had made to Parliament.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - The International Monetary Fund will increase to 9.65 percent from 9.30 percent the interest it charges on its loans, a fund official said Friday.

The hike, which will apply to about $30 billion in outstanding loans, will become effective July 1. It aims at providing the fund with additional resources to bail out countries with overdue loan repayments.

As part of a ''burden-sharing'' arrangement between the industrial nations and the developing countries reached in April, the rate of interest the IMF pays to countries that lend it money will also be reduced, to approximately 7.3 percent.

The current ''rate of remuneration'' paid to lenders is a nominal 9.10 percent, an IMF official explained. Under an older burden-sharing arrangement, it is reduced by 90 basis points, and should be further shaved by 110 basis points under the April compromise.

Yet, the April compromise also provides that the rate can not fall below a certain level that currently would be 7.30 percent, the official said.

Approximately 10 countries have overdue obligations of $4 billion to the IMF and can no longer borrow resources from the multilateral organization. If they chose to accept drastic economic reform programs, they can receive financial support from the IMF to pay their overdue debts and have their borrowing rights restored.

The IMF provides short- and medium-term loans to countries with shortfalls in their balance of payments, and longer-term loans to countries undergoing market-oriented economic reforms.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 29) UPI - With help from the United States, Honduras paid its overdue debts to the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank Friday and will be restored to full borrowing rights, the organizations said.

Honduras paid $36 million to the IMF and $152.6 million to the World Bank.

The United States headed a group of donor nations which, under what is called a ''shadow program'' of financial support, helped Honduras pay the multilateral organizations and had its borrowing rights restored.

Neither the World Bank nor the IMF refinance their loans.

World Bank President Barber Conable lauded the Central American country for its ''resolve'' in implementing an effective economic adjustment program and commended the efforts of the bilateral donors that lent their support.

Honduras was declared ineligible to obtain IMF loans in November 1989. The World Bank suspended the country's borrowing rights at the beginning of 1989.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - Statoil, Norway's state-owned oil company, Friday said it had increased its fleet of tankers by nearly a quarter with the lease of five more vessels for $340 million.

Statoil said that the additional tankers are needed to meet the growing trade in North Sea crude oil over the next few years.

''Statoil is chartering five additional ships because of the increasing availability of crude oil from the Norwegian North Sea over the next few years,'' the company said in a statement.

With these vessels, Statoil's fleet will comprise 28 tankers, 22 of which will have ''whole or partial double sides and double bottoms,'' the statement said.

Of the five chartered ships, two are double-hulled, two have double-bottoms and one has a partial double bottom, Statoil said.

Double-clad vessels are said to provide greater protection against oil spills, which have been particularly worrisome in the United States since the March 1989 Alaska oil spill of the Exxon Valdez.

''With these timecharters, Statoil becomes one of the few oil companies in the world with such a high percentage of environmentally sound vessels,'' said Kristoffer Maroe, general manager of Statoil North America Inc.

NEW YORK (JUNE 29) UPI - A federal appeals court Friday upheld the conviction of former congressman Mario Biaggi in the Wedtech scandal, two days after he was paroled from a halfway house in connection with an unrelated conviction.

Biaggi, 72, appealed his eight-year prison sentence and $242,000 fine following the conviction on charges he extorted millions of dollars in stock in exchange for his influence to win lucrative defense contracts in the Wedtech matter.

Wedtech was a South Bronx defense contractor that became enmeshed in a corruption case stretching to the nation's capital. The scandal ruined the careers of several other politicians.

The 2nd U.S. District Court of Appeals, ruling on Biaggi's appeal, said Friday it was satisfied prosecutors did not improperly characterize ''lawful political contributions and legal fees as bribes and extortion payments'' to the jury.

''This case demonstrates how blurred the line can become in practice when a company that requires political assistance and legal services in dealing with governmental bureaucracies makes payments to officeholders and lawyers associated with them,'' the three-member panel said.

Biaggi, once a highly decorated city police officer, resigned his Bronx congressional seat in August 1988 to press his appeals, but still received 36,000 votes in that year's general election.

Biaggi was sentenced in November 1987 to 30 months in prison and fined $500,000 for accepting illegal gratuities from former Brooklyn Democratic boss Meade Esposito.

The U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that conviction the same week Biaggi was convicted in the Wedtech case.

He spent 11 months in the minimum-security Federal Correctional Institution in Fort Worth, Texas, in the Esposito case before being transferred to a halfway house in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of the borough of Brooklyn.

He was released on parole Wednesday, said Jimmy Powell, duty officer at the Bureau of Prisons in Washington, D.C.

In a sobbing last-ditch appeal before he went to jail in the Esposito case Biaggi told a judge he was proud of his unblemished 50-year record and wanted to stay with his seriously ill wife.

But the judge refused Biaggi's request, noting that the conviction was based on evidence the congressman had accepted free trips to Florida with his girlfriend.

Bronx congressman Robert Garcia and his wife, Jane Lee, were convicted last year of conspiracy and extortion in the Wedtech case. In a separate ruling Friday, the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the convictions, clearing the way for a new trial.

The unwieldy case started with a small minority-owned machine shop in economically devastated South Bronx and stretched to Washington, D.C.

The machine shop grew into a multimillion-dollar defense contractor by bribing influential officials and taking advantage of contracts designed for minority-owned businesses.

Thousands of pro-Iranian Moslem fundamentalists in Lebanon shouted ''Down with America'' today as they marched south of Beirut. Some three-thousand Lebanese, Iranians and followers of Hezbollah ... a group believed to be holding 16 Western hostages... also denounced U-S-supported Saudi Arabia. The march commemorated the 1987 killing of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims by Saudi police at the Moslem holy shrine of Mecca.

The village manager of a Chicago suburb is estimating damage from high winds this morning at a cool 10-Million dollars. A microburst packing 58 mile-an-hour winds damaged 39 buildings in an industrial park and 10 homes in the village of Streamwood. Powerful thunderstorms raked north and central Illinois, causing at least a dozen injuries and widespread power outages. The storms dumped as much as seven inches of rain.

(JUNE 29) UPI - The lawyer for Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry began putting together the defense in Barry's drug and perjury trial today in cross-examining the government's star witness, Rasheeda Moore. R-Kenneth Moore suggested Barry's conversation with Moore was about sex- and NOT drugs- when the two met at a Washington hotel last January. Barry was arrested after being videotaped in an F-B-I sting. Cross-examination of Moore will continue Monday.

The Parliament of Lithuania today reluctantly decided to freeze the republic's declaration of independence from the Soviet Union. The moratorium goes into effect when secession talks begin with Moscow. Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis predicts the three-month-old Soviet economic blockade of Lithuania will end tomorrow.

Democrats are preparing their strategy for the fall election campaigns. Two high-level Democratic groups are meeting in Portland, Oregon, where they've pinpointed ''fiscal mismanagement'' as the prime campaign issue. They're preparing to rake President Bush and the Republicans over the coals for the savings-and-loan crisis, the rising deficit and the president's reneging on his ''NO new taxes'' campaign pledge.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Israel reportedly has given grants of 20-thousand dollars each to the families of seven Gaza Strip Arabs shot in May by an Israeli gunman dressed as a soldier. A respected Hebrew daily reported today that this is the first time the government has given money to the families of victims of Israeli violence. Security sources maintained the payment is NOT compensation and sets NO precedent for victims of Israeli violence.

Scientists today said the beleaguered Hubble Space Telescope will make key discoveries in space despite its present problems. Members of the Hubble Science Working Group and the space telescope users committee today issued a special position paper from Cape Canaveral on the telescope's faulty optics. The scientists say the telescope still has capabilities that vastly exceed ground-based observatories.

South Korean President Roh Tae-woo says South Korea will allow transportation and trade from and to North Korea. The trade is meant to help lead to Korean re-unification. Roh made the proposal in Seoul on the third anniversary of his 1987 proposal for sweeping political reforms. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has accepted the invitation of President Mikhail Gorbachev to visit the Soviet Union in mid-July. (JUNE 29) UPI - Fuel leak virtually grounds shuttle fleet... Mandela says American support will help end apartheid quicker... defense for Washington's Mayor Barry charges entrapment... and Lithuania suspends independence. U-P-I has it all, next:

The fuel leak which grounded the shuttle Columbia last month appears to be contagious. NASA today indefinitely postponed the launch of the shuttle Atlantis because of a similar fuel leak found today.

A NASA official says the flight of the Atlantis will be probably be delayed about two weeks while engineers try to pinpoint the leak. That could delay one of two planned shuttle missions until after a high-priority October flight to put a European-built solar probe into space.

The delay could hardly have come at a worse time, with senators howling today about NASA's failure to detect a major defect in the Hubble Space Telescope before it was lifted into space.

At a Senate hearing in Washington, lawmakers questioned NASA's reliability to handle future high-tech projects. Maryland Democrat Barbara Mikulski said if NASA goes through with a proposed mission to Mars the agency would forget to give astronauts lunch and oxygen.

But the group of scientists using the Hubble are more optimistic. They issued a statement today saying the BILLION-and-one-half-dollar telescope ''still has the potential to produce many key discoveries in the near future.''

Nelson Mandela is on the West Coast, making the final two stops of his rigorous eight-city trip across the nation.

15-thousand people greeted him today at the steps of the Los Angeles City Hall. And an even larger crowd is expected tonight at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

At City Hall this afternoon, Mandela thanked the crowd for its support and said... ''The finest tribute we can pay'' for the warm reception across the nation is- in his words- ''to intensify the anti-apartheid struggle on all fronts.''

He said... ''Victory is in sight'' in the battle for equality in South Africa.

Mandela is scheduled to travel to Oakland in the morning. While he appeared visibly weary on his arrival in Los Angeles, trip organizers deny that Mandela is exhausted and might cancel his final stop in Oakland.

(JUNE 29) UPI - Confronted with a videotape showing Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry apparently smoking crack cocaine, Barry's lawyer today began composing his defense.... arguing his client was entrapped by lust.

Defense lawyer R-Kenneth Mundy cross-examined Rasheeda Moore, the mayor's alleged former lover and the woman who drew him into an F-B-I drug sting at a Washington hotel last January.

He argued that Barry ''didN'T have drugs on his mind'' when he went to meet Moore that night. Mundy got Moore to conceding that point, and also got her to admit that she was the one who suggested they meet at the hotel.

Mundy and Moore also had a long exchange over whether a slangy conversation between Barry and Moore on the videotape referred to the two sharing sex or drugs.

But while the cross-examination was to continue next week, Mundy has NOT yet attempted to refute Moore's testimony that she and Barry were regular drug users over the course of their relationship. And he could NOT refute the videotape, which again made the rounds of T-V news programs today.

Lithuania's president is predicting an end to the Soviet economic blockade following today's freeze on the Baltic republic's declaration of independence.

An 11th-hour speech by President Vytautas Landsbergis helped sway the Parliament in Vilnius to approve a 100-day suspension of the declaration.

The deputies approved the suspension 69-35, with about 20 ethnic Lithuanian deputies leaving the hall to try to prevent the vote.

Moscow had demanded the moratorium on independence before ended a cut-off of oil and natural gas to the rebellious republic. Landsbergis predicts the blockade will end tomorrow.

But the freeze woN'T begin until the Soviet Union enters secession talks.

Landsbergis said his two meetings with Soviet President Gorbachev this week convinced him a moratorium would advance the cause of independence.

The former music professor flew to Tallinn immediately after the vote, to meet with the president of Estonia, where the parliament has approved a more moderate declaration of independence.

(JUNE 29) UPI - A Republican budget negotiator today called for more money for the Pentagon than Democrats propose.

Senator Pete Domenici of New Mexico proposes cutting defense spending by about nine-BILLION dollars. That's almost half the size of the 16-BILLION-dollar cut Democrats want to make.

Domenici told reporters in Washington his plan also calls for saving about 156-BILLION in Pentagon spending over five years.

NO action has been taken by negotiators on any defense proposal.

Domenici says his plan is more in line with the fiscal year 1991 defense cut advocated by Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn. Nunn is a Democrat and perhaps the Congress's most respected defense expert.

Negotiators adjourned for the July 4th congressional recess, and are scheduled to meet again July 10.

They hope to reach agreement on at least 50-BILLION dollars in overall budget cuts before Congress begins its month-long summer recess in August.

Liberia's capital, Monrovia, is deserted as troops loyal to President Samuel Doe prepare to make their last stand against advancing rebel forces.

The rebels began their siege today... cutting off water supplies to the capital as they closed to within five miles of the city. The National Patriotic Front has already captured the town of Fendall, 10 miles from the capital, and the Monrovian airport is also said to be in rebel hands after heavy fighting.

When government troops fired on 20-thousand protesters marching to demand Doe's resignation on Wednesday, that apparently was the last straw for most Monrovians. Those who hadN'T fled already, did, leaving the capital to the military.

Liberia is a country in west Africa founded by former U-S slaves. Its civil war intensified when peace talks broke down last week in Sierra Leone.

HONOLULU (JUNE 30) BUSINESS WIRE - As part of a shift of focus toward its stronger Pacific Island markets, Hawaiian Airlines will on July 4 suspend flight operations into and out of Auckland, New Zealand. The airline's last flight to Auckland will depart Honolulu as scheduled July 2, returning from Auckland July 4.

Hawaiian has served Auckland since January of 1988, more recently via Rarotonga in the Cook Islands. The airline will retain its Rarotonga service and has made reaccommodation arrangements with other airlines serving Auckland to provide service for passengers holding tickets on Hawaiian Airlines flights scheduled after July 4.

In addition to traditionally seasonal passenger traffic, low consumer demand on the route has limited the operation's profitability. Hawaiian will consider resuming Auckland service should market conditions improve. For the present, the company will devote itself to strengthening and developing its other Pacific routes.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (JUNE 30) UPI - A Salvadoran colonel has denied he told an American military adviser that another colonel had confessed to having ordered the brutal murder of six Jesuit priests last November, the Supreme Court said Friday.

U.S. Army Maj. Erick Buckland, an American adviser to the Salvadoran military, had testified that Col. Carlos Armando Aviles told him Dec. 20 that Col. Guillermo Alfredo Benavides confessed to investigators in the Jesuit murder case, "I did it. What can you do to help me." Col. Benavides three lower ranking officers, and five soldiers have been charged with murder in the case.

But sources close to the investigation say there might not be enough evidence to convict Benavides, who was commanding officer at the military academy from which the mission to kill the Jesuits was launched Nov. 16.

"The colonel (Aviles) denied ever having told the major (Buckland) about Benavides' alleged involvement in the conspiracy," the Supreme Court said in a statement.

If Buckland's story is true, military officers investigating the killings of the six Jesuits have concealed the evidence from the judge hearing the case. Two lieutenants accused in the case told investigators they participated in the assassinations and were ordered by Benavides to kill the priests and leave no witnesses. The confessions, however, are inadmissable as evidence against Benavides because under Salvadoran law co-defendents cannot testify against each other.

The Jesuits' housekeeper and her teenage daughter were also slain as they cowered arm-in-arm in a back room at the priests' residence on the University of Central America campus.

A U.S. congressional task force that looked into the Jesuit investigation, concluded that "the American major is telling the truth." The murders, and skepticism about the Salvadoran government's ability to punish officers who allegedly gave orders to commit them, have provided impetus to a move in Congress to cut U.S. military aid to El Salvador.

On Thursday, the lower House of Congress approved an appropriations bill that would hold back half of El Salvador's military aid in 1991. The bill must still confront the Senate and the White House. This year U.S. military aid to El Salvador will total $85 million.

Other issues advocated on the first day were expanded child care and retention of legalized abortion.

President Bush Friday dismissed charges that he violated public trust by backing off his campaign pledge NOT to raise taxes. Bush acknowledged that he is being criticized on all sides, but he said that a sluggish economy and the savings and loan crisis left him with NO option but to seek revenue enhancements.

(JUNE 30) UPI - In New York, imprisoned former Congressman Robert Garcia is expected to move for his immediate release after a federal appeals court Friday reversed his conspiracy and extortion convictions in a lower court. Garcia and his wife each received three-year sentences for their roles in the Wedtech scandal. The appeals court Friday drew a distinction between what it termed was Garcia's unethical capitalistic behavior and what federal prosecutors termed extortion.

While portions of the United States experienced triple-digit temperatures Friday, portions of Illinois and New York were pummeled by triple-digit winds. The national Weather Service says a microburst packing winds of 140 miles an hour roared through Streamwood, Illinois... damaging more than four-dozen buildings. Hurricane-force winds also smacked sections of upstate New York, downing trees and power lines.

Great Western Bank of California had a busy day Friday... outbidding competing financial institutions to purchase two failed thrifts from the Resolution Trust Corporation. Great Western, the nation's second-largest thrift, assumed Miami-based CenTrust's five-point-two-BILLION dollars in deposits with an 86-Million-dollar bid. Great Western also dished out three-pointMillion dollars for the failed Gibraltar Savings' 700-Million dollars in deposits.

An international conference on ozone depletion ended on a positive note Friday in London. Delegates from the world's two most populous nations- India and China- agreed to recommend that their countries sign the so-called Montreal Protocol. The pact calls for the phasing out of ozone-depleting chloro-fluorocarbons by the year 2000. Environmentalists say stricter efforts are needed to protect the ozone layer.

(JUNE 30) UPI - It looks as political reform has made its way to the African nation of Zambia. President Kenneth Kaunda called Friday for a national referendum on whether the country should expand to a multi-party democracy. Kaunda's announcement came two days after bloody civil unrest came to an end. The scheduled referendum date is October 17th. Kaunda has ruled Zambia since it became independent of Britain in 1964.

Central American economic ministers voiced support Friday for President Bush's proposal for a Western hemisphere free trade zone. Guatemala's economic minister said all of his cohorts saw merit in Bush's free trade zone plan as well as other suggestions he made to alleviate the region's crushing foreign debt. However, the head of an international economic study group said Bush's plan must be studied closely before possible acceptance.

(JUNE 30) UPI - Dave Stewart determined Toronto had to hit his best pitch if the Blue Jays were to ruin his no-hitter. They never did.

"If they were going to beat me in the late innings, they were going to have to beat me with my No. 1, my fastball," Stewart said after leading Oakland to a 5-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays for the first no-hitter of his career. "I had a real crisp fastball, good movement and I thought my location was good," Stewart said.

Stewart, the winningest pitcher in the majors since 1987, pitched the fifth no-hitter in Oakland history and the first since Mike Warren did it against Chicago Sept. 29, 1983.

Stewart walked three and struck out 12. His no-hitter was the fourth in the major leagues this year, and the third in the American League this month. The fifth came about three hours later, when Fernando Valenzuela pitched one for the Los Angeles Dodgers against St. Louis.

Before taking the mound, Valenzuela watched on television as Stewart, 33, fooled Toronto hitters with his forkball and fastball. He faced just 29 batters, throwing 115 pitches - 81 strikes and 34 balls.

Stewart's catcher Terry Steinbach said he feared Manny Lee might break up the no-hitter leading off the ninth. "He's a free hitter, the type of hitter you worry about," Steinbach said after catching his first no-hit game.

"I've seen him hit balls at the shoulders and the knees, fastballs and off-speed pitches. If we were going to lose it, I didn't want to lose it on a dink shot to the outfield. I'd rather lose it on a whoosh over the fence."

After striking out Lee and Wilson in the ninth, he walked Junior Felix. He then got Tony Fernandez to fly to center to end the game.

With the final out, Stewart pumped his right fist into the air and was hugged by first baseman Mark McGwire.

The sellout SkyDome crowd of 49,817 gave the visiting pitcher a rousing ovation as his teammates congratulated him.

"I never thought about pitching a no-hitter," he said. "I've had people mention it to me any number of times. I always said, 'Heck, I'll probably be the the last guy to throw a no-hitter.'"

The A's scored two runs in the third off Toronto starter John Cerutti, 4-6 on Dave Henderson's homer following a walk to Rickey Henderson.

UNITED NATIONS (JUNE 30) UPI - President-elect Alberto Fujimori of Peru says he has "strong feelings" for Japan and his visit there next week would be to seek support for his country's ailing economy.

Fujimori Friday held talks with executives of the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the Inter-American Development Bank at U.N.

headquarters in New York in an effort to break Peru's economic isolation.

The meeting was arranged by his fellow countryman, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who attended the meeting and hosted the parties a working luncheon in his 38th floor office.

"I have strong feelings," Fujimori told reporters when asked about the weeklong visit to Japan beginning Sunday. He is a descendant of Japanese immigrants and the first to win the presidency of a country.

Fujimori won a runoff election June 10 with a strong support from the left and rural areas, soundly defeating the well-known author Mario Vargas Llosa. He will be inaugurated July 28, on his 52nd birthday.

"I have slanted eyes, but I am 100 percent Peruvian," he said. He said he will take advantage of his visit to seek "support and cooperation ... and a flowing contribution from the Japanese people."

He said his discussions with World Bank Chairman Barber Conable, IMF Director-General Michel Camdessus and the Inter-American Development Bank President Enrique Iglesias was a first step to reintegrate Peru in the international financial system.

Peru is in a "critical situation and lives in a hostile environment" because of its economic difficulties, a $20 billion external debt and a guerrilla war with Maoist rebels of the "Shining Path," Fujimori said. But he said he did not compromise Peru's relations with banking institutions by bowing to pressure for reforms.

The outgoing government of President Alan Garcia decided in 1985 to limit debt payments to ten percent of export income. Garcia's unpopular decision was a virtual default on Peru's foreign debt. International lenders stopped loans to Peru and the IMF was considering to expel Peru from its organization.

Perez de Cuellar, who had worked out an emergency aid plan to help Bolivia has promised to look into Peru's economic difficulties. The Bolivian plan involved most of U.N. agencies to channel international financial and technical aid to the ailing Latin American nation.

Fujimori has requested a similar U.N. plan to revive the Peruvian economy. He said a U.N. ad hoc committee will assist Peru in economic and financial matters to ensure that the country could obtain new loans from banking institutions.

He defended his economic policies based on "honesty, technology, and hard work" without offering clear solutions to the country's high inflation, unemployment, and lack of foreign investment.

He said 60 percent of the Peruvian population do not participate in the national economy and 200,000 farming families make an illegal living by planting coca leaves.

Fujimori said his talks with the international banks will help restore Peru's credibility, regain foreign investment and overcome its fiscal deficit. Fujimori arrived in New York Thursday on his first trip overseas since winning the presidency. He met representatives of about 100,000 Peruvians living in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut who supported his candidacy.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (JUNE 30) UPI - Dismayed NASA managers have effectively grounded the shuttle fleet because of another fuel leak, this one aboard Atlantis, that will require a second-straight trip back to the hangar for repairs and another major launch delay.

With NASA already reeling from news that the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope's mirrors are flawed, officials canceled Atlantis's flight readiness review Friday while engineers scrambled to pinpoint the source of a crippling fuel leak like one that grounded the shuttle Columbia last month.

"We can't fly. We won't fly until we understand it and have it fixed," said William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight. "Probably the minimum time of delay (for Atlantis) is on the order of two weeks."

A statement released late Friday said until the cause of the leak is determined, work to ready Atlantis for launch "has been suspended" and that the shuttle will be returned to the Vehicle Assembly Building and removed from its external tank after engineers determine exactly what is wrong.

Columbia's launch last month on a ten-day astronomy mission was called off just six hours before liftoff when sensors detected explosive hydrogen gas spewing into the ship's engine room during fueling for a planned May 30 launch.

The leak later was traced to the area of a 17-inch "disconnect" fitting where the shuttle's primary hydrogen feed line enters the belly of the orbiter. Problems with the giant umbilical cannot be fixed at the launch pad and as a result, Columbia was hauled back to its hangar for repairs.

NASA managers, meanwhile, had proceeded with plans to launch Atlantis around July 16 on a secret military mission, but playing it safe, they ordered a special fueling test to make sure the spaceplane did not suffer from any leaks like the one that sidelined Columbia.

Early Friday, engineers pumped supercold liquid hydrogen rocket fuel into Atlantis's fuel tank and almost immediately, sensors detected hydrogen gas around the 17-inch disconnect fitting, indicating some sort of generic problem, either with the hardware or with NASA's shuttle assembly procedure.

Atlantis's flight was put on hold indefinitely and with Columbia already out of action because of a similar problem, NASA's shuttle fleet was effectively grounded.

"I would hesitate to use the word 'ground,' but there's no question, we won't fly until we understand it and have it fixed and have tested and verified it and are ready," Lenoir said.

The setback could not have come at a worse time for NASA, which is struggling to keep the decks clear for a high-priority October flight by the shuttle Discovery to ferry a European-build solar probe into space.

While Lenoir held out hope of launching both Atlantis and Columbia before then, NASA could be forced to delay one mission past the October flight, assuming the leak problem can be resolved.

NASA has about one month to get Atlantis off the launch pad before triggering a major disruption in the launch schedule. While Lenoir said he was confident the problem can be fixed, he said a roll back the Vehicle Assembly Building for repairs was a virtual certainty.

"While we anticipate rolling back, it's not clear whether that's very soon or whether we may be troubleshooting for weeks," he said. "We may find that Columbia's ready and they pass each other." In that case, Columbia would be launched ahead of Atlantis.

The 17-inch disconnect assembly, built by Parker Hannifin of Irvine, Calif., is critical to the shuttle's operation, allowing rocket fuel to flow into the shuttle's three main engines during launch. Once the shuttle reaches orbit, giant valves swing closed so the tank can be safely jettisoned.

Atlantis's fueling test began shortly before 8 a.m., a day late because of weather concerns, when about 20,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen were pumped into the tank to condition the shuttle's fuel lines to the minus 423-degree temperature of the frigid propellant. Engineers then began high-speed fueling.

It was at that point during Columbia's fueling the night before its planned blastoff that hydrogen gas leaked into the ship's engine compartment from the 17-inch-wide fuel line fitting.

Atlantis's leak showed up about the same time. But unlike the leak that grounded Columbia, no hydrogen gas was detected in Atlantis's engine compartment and launch director Robert Sieck said the leak rate appeared to be somewhat smaller.

(JUNE 30) UPI - He's older now, takes his time up on the mound, occasionally wiping steam and sweat from prescription glasses. But Friday night Fernando Valenzuela's well-worn left arm sprung to life as the veteran pitcher paced himself to his first career no-hitter.

"He pitches with his heart every time out there," Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda said following the Dodgers' 6-0 blitz of the St. Louis Carndinals in Los Angeles. "Everyone knows he doesn't throw as hard as he used to. But he pitches with heart. We'll all proud of him."

Prior to his start, Valenzuela watched former teammate Dave Stewart pitch a no-hitter and joked about duplicating the feat. "I told my teammates, 'You watch a no-hitter on TV, now you can watch a live one,"' Valenzuela said. "But I never thought I'd do it."

The double no-hitter marked the first time since 1898 the big leagues had two complete-game no-hitters on the same day. Stewart pitched Oakland to a 5-0 victory over the Blue Jays in Toronto.

Valenzuela, a 29-year-old Mexican whose career was in jeopardy because of a tired shoulder two summers ago, mixed up the inside fastball with his masterful changeup. He retired 17 straight batters after left fielder Kirk Gibson dropped Pedro Guerrero's fly for an error with two outs in the first.

Former teammate Guerreo grounded into a 1-4-3 double play to end the game. "The guy pitched good enough to throw a no-hitter," Guerrero said, "but we've been swinging the bat horribly. With the team we have and the speed we have we don't even think of getting no hit."

The no-hitter was the fifth in the major leagues this year, and the first in the National League since 1988. Valenzuela, who got ten flyball outs, has eight two-hitters but no one-hitters.

With outs in the eight, Cardinals pinch hitter Craig Wilson hit a drive toward the gap in left center but center fielder Stan Javier ran it down on the warning track. "I had a good jump on it," Javier said. "As soon as I felt it was going to stay in the park I felt I had a good chance to catch it."

The no-hitter was the Dodgers' first since left-hander Jerry Reuss accomplished the feat at San Francisco June 27, 1980. Bill Singer threw the last for the team at Dodger Stadium, doing it against Philadelphia July 20, 1970.

"This was big," Valenzuela said. "The last two years I've had injuries with my shoulder, and this game will help a lot. I hope I can stay healthy and help the team. It's great."

-- AROUND THE NL --

In other NL games, New York defeated Cincinnati 4-2, San Francisco stomped Pittsburgh 7-3, Atlanta beat Montreal 4-2, Philadelphia blanked Houston 2-0 and Chicago edged San Diego 3-2.

Mets 4, Reds 2

At New York, Mackey Sasser homered and drove in three runs, helping the York Mets equal a franchise record with their 11th straight victory and move percentage points ahead of Pittsburgh into first in the NL East. Bob Ojeda, 4-3, scattered 10 hits in 8 1-3 innings. Jeff Innis got the final out for his first major league save. Darryl Strawberry hit his 17th home run and ran his hitting streak to a career-high 18 games. Reds starter Rick Mahler 2-3, allowed six hits over five innings.

Giants 7, Pirates 3

At San Francisco, Will Clark broke out of a 7-for-35 slump with a home run two singles and three RBI to lift the Giants. Trevor Wilson, 4-0, gave up three runs on six hits over seven innings for the victory and Jeff Brantley pitched 1 1-3 innings for his 10th save. Neal Heaton, 10-3, was knocked out in the third inning.

Braves 4, Expos 2

At Montreal, Tom Glavine allowed five hits over eight innings and Dave Justice had two RBI to help the Braves win their third straight. Glavine, 4-5, walked three and struck out five before giving way to Joe Hesketh, who worked the ninth for his fourth save. Dennis Martinez, 5-6, took the loss.

Phillies 2, Astros 0

At Philadelphia, Pat Combs pitched a six-hitter and Lenny Dykstra hit a solo home run to help the Phillies to break a six-game losing streak. Combs, 4-6, walked two and struck out six in his first shutout of the season. Houston tied a team record with its 13th straight road loss as Bill Gullickson fell to 5-6.

Cubs 3, Padres 2

At San Diego, Doug Dascenzo tripled home the tying run and scored on Dwight Smith's single to cap the Cubs' ninth-inning game-winning rally off Greg Harris, 4-2. Reliever Bill Long, 3-0, earned the victory and Paul Assenmacher earned his third save.

WARSAW, POLAND (JUNE 30) UPI - A Solidarity senator has attacked Solidarity founder Lech Walesa for destabilizing Poland, urging him not to run for the presidency of the nation.

The stern criticism came on the eve of Walesa's meeting Saturday with the Civic Committee - a group of more than 200 intellectuals split between backers of Walesa and Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

Andrzej Szczypiorski, a well-known writer and senator, credited Walesa in a letter carried Friday by the official news agency PAP with promoting political change in Poland. But it added, "only a stupid person could think that only you alone liberated the country from the totalitarian oppression."

The criticism of Walesa, the most vitriolic ever by the Solidarity activist, blamed the union leader for too much boasting and attributing all the changes that occurred in Poland to himself.

It came on the day police broke into the Ministry of Agriculture Friday and used violence to push out about 100 farmers who occupied the building, demanding the government raise prices for their agricultural commodities. "When I listen to all your statements, it turns out that we all owe to Walesa," said Szczypiorski. "It is funny and irritating."

After recalling Walesa's glorious past as the leader of the 1980 strike that led to the rise of Solidarity, the senator said that now with his attacks on Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize winner became "a factor destabilizing the state."

Turning to Walesa's desire to become president, Szczypiorski said the union leader lacks qualities to hold such a top position. "You can become president but I will consider it as harmful to Poland," said the senator. "You are capricious as if you were a beautiful lady and secondly you hate knowledge and competence of other people."

"You have an illusion that you know better and take decisions quicker," said Szczypiorski in reasoning why Walesa should not be president. "Thirdly, you don't have any program, apart from repeating populist trite phrases," he said.

"In the next years to come you should not think about Belveder," he said of the palace where the president has his office. "You should sit down and learn and it is never too late to do it." Walesa is an electrician by profession and until 1988 he used to work in the Gdansk shipyard repairing battery-driven carts.

Walesa returned from Vienna Friday when police broke into the barred entrances of the Polish Agriculture Ministry Friday and cleared the building of more than 100 farmers in the third day of a sit-in to protest low prices for their products.

It was the first use of force by the Solidarity-led government of Mazowiecki since it came to power in autumn 1989. Farmers said they would retaliate by calling a general strike.

After negotiating with leaders of the protest, police escorted the farmers - some of them weeping openly - out of the building, using minimum force in most cases. They then secured the doors and established a protective cordon around the building.

Among those pushed out were ten members of Parliament and two senators, waving their identification cards to police. It was the worst crisis yet for the Mazowiecki administration, which on Jan. 1 imposed a tough austerity program that halted triple-digit inflation but has resulted in a 30 percent drop in the standard of living.

LUSAKA, ZAMBIA (JUNE 30) UPI - An army lieutenant was arrested Saturday after single-handedly seizing the national radio station and announcing a bogus military coup in riot-torn Zambia, a U.S. diplomat said.

Paramilitary troops fired into the air to break up crowds of people who took to the streets of the capital following announcement of the arrest of the renegade soldier who had announced the would-be coup for three hours, the official said.

Charles Bell, public affairs counsellor at the U.S. Embassy in Lusaka, said President Kenneth Kaunda and other government officials were safe. "Secretary General Grey Zulu of the ruling United National Independence Party came on the radio and said there was no coup," Bell said.

"Grey Zulu said there was only one solider who had no support and that all leaders of the country are safe," the official said. "President Kaunda will continue with his schedule as planned," Bell said.

But because "there is a bit of an uneasy calm," the 300 U.S. citizens in the capital were being advised to remain in their homes "for the next few hours," the diplomat said. He said the crowds dispersed by gunfire into the air were reportedly not hostile toward the troops.

The disgruntled soldier was identified as Lt. Mwambe Luchimbe of the army signal corps. His taped broadcast, aired at 15 minute intervals for three hours, said the military had taken over the country because of rioting over recent hikes in food prices.

Zambia was wracked by three days of rioting earlier in the week over the price increases, leaving up to 30 dead, 200 injured and 550 detained. Kaunda had called Friday for a national referendum on a multi-party democracy that could end his 26-year rule.

Kaunda, dealing with his most serious leadership challenge ever, said during a visit to the northern copper-producing region Friday that Zambians will decide Oct. 17 whether to discard the one-party system introduced in 1972 and increasingly criticized for corruption and incompetence.

His decision came after almost three days of the country's most bitter civil unrest, which ended Wednesday night and left up to 30 dead, 200 injured and 550 detained.

The president, who took office on independence from Britain in 1964, had vowed "Zambia will not allow itself to be ruled by thuggery." But officials said the referendum date was an effort by Kaunda to appease the anti-government rioters and allow a "natural" end to the violence.

Earlier Friday, police evicted University of Zambia students and closed the campus following protests. More than 1,000 students were forced out of their campus rooms.

"We were rounded up at around 4 a.m. this morning and ordered out with our luggage. We were told to sit out in the cold and wait for transport home," one said.

Gathered on the lawns in front of the university, several students chanted "Kaunda resign" and one held a placard reading: "Kaunda, child killer." Police confirmed the campus was sealed off and said the rest of Lusaka was quiet. The conflict was sparked early Monday by a clash between students and riot police.

Students, quickly joined by sympathetic residents, flooded the capital and sporadically rampaged through the streets, looted, and fought running battles with police in protest against a doubling in price of the staple cornmeal as part of economic austerity measures and undemocratic government rule.

Sympathizers joined students in battling the police and the conflict spread north, where during Zambia's last major civil unrest in 1986, security forces shot dead 15 people protesting food-price increases in the nation's copper region.

Students accused Kaunda of balking on introducing a multi-party democracy and breaking promises to feed all the people. Police cracked down on the protesters after Kaunda insisted he would not abandon plans to stabilize the tottering economy, and enforced two days of dusk-to-dawn curfews and rounded up ringleaders.

Newspapers reported 23 deaths but unofficial sources put the figure at up to 30. Hospitals, makeshift aid stations, and support workers said most of the 200 injured were discharged by Friday.

Kaunda has blamed "enemies of Zambia for inciting people in many places," and officials have repeatedly called the turmoil the most serious threat the 66-year-old president has faced.

Many of Zambia's ten million citizens are starving as the copper-based economy struggles against decades of economic mismanagement and socialist experiments to introduce a free-market agriculture-based system.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 30) UPI - In a sign the Cold War may be waning on the Korean Peninsula, South Korea is proposing free trade and traffic with the communist North as the foes prepare for talks for the first time in nearly six months.

Officials of the two Koreas are scheduled to get together Tuesday at the truce village of Panmunjom, 35 miles north of Seoul, to resume talks aimed at a South-North meeting of prime ministersto discuss major political and military issues.

It will be the first contact between the two sides since January when North Korea unilaterally broke off all channels of dialogue protesting a routine annual military exercise involving American and South Korean forces.

The Tuesday meeting is likely to be followed by resumed contacts through other channels - talks for a full inter-Korea parliamentary conference, economic cooperation, and exchanges of home visitors.

South Korea, encouraged by reforms in Eastern Europe and the rapid move toward unification of East and West Germany, said it hopes for similar movement in one of the last bastions of the Cold War.

President Roh Tae-woo said Friday his government will allow open trade and transport between the Koreas and will actively support economic cooperation with socialist nations helping to promote Korean reunification.

Taking advantage of the third anniversary of his June 29, 1987, "Declaration of Political Reforms," Roh made a new call for expanded cooperation and exchanges between South and North Korea.

Roh, who met Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in San Francisco on June 4 in the first top-level contact between South Korea and the Soviet Union, noted that relations between Moscow and Beijing are being normalized and positive changes are occurring on the Korean peninsula.

Roh said "the prolonged Cold War on the (Korean Peninsula) has already started to ease. I am confident that the 1990s will finally see peaceful reunification (of the two Koreas) materialize." He said South Korea must be strong economically to achieve reunification.

"It is evident that the real motive force behind the ongoing process of German unification is the economic clout of West Germany. Accordingly, We must foster sufficient economic capabilities to ensure the well-being and prosperity of all Koreans," he said.

"Toward that end, we must transcend politics to realize inter-Korean exchanges of goods, technology and capital to meet each other's needs ...

"The Administration will, therefore, unrestrictedly allow the inflow from and through the North of aircraft, ships and other means of transport, as well as goods."

Roh said his government will also actively encourage and support economic cooperation with the Soviet Union, China and others in the communist bloc and set up an economic cooperation fund "to promote common prosperity with socialist countries including North Korea."

"The fund will be progressively enlarged. We will also vigorously promote joint ventures with them in third countries designed to combine the comparative advantages in production (land, capital and labor) of each of the nations involved," he said. The details and scale of such a cooperative fund will be formulated in the coming months, he said.

Roh, following his talks with Gorbachev, has repeatedly said he will step up efforts for improved relations with North Korea. He said such efforts must be made without embarrassing North Korean rulers.

Roh believes North Korea will eventually accept expanded economic cooperation and exchanges with the South. The reopening dialogue between the South and the North may shed some light on how soon rapprochement may be achieved, which still remains an open question.

BEIJING (JUNE 30) UPI - Torrential rains and flooding have killed 108 people in southwest Yunnan province, the semi-official China News Service reported Saturday. From June 18-22, heavy rains drenched 98 Yunnan counties, damaging 74,128 acres of farmland and destroying more than 1,000 houses, CNS said.

The flooding left 108 people dead, submerged an entire herd of livestock and damaged an additional 50,000 buildings. Local governments organized emergency rescue teams across Yunnan, which borders Laos, Vietnam and Burma to the south.

The report said provincial authorities called an urgent meeting to discuss flood prevention measures and rescue work. The death toll in Yunnan province brings the number of people killed in recent floods and storms during south China's annual rainy season to at least 384.

Heavy rainfall and floods in rural Hunan province killed 254 people in June and left nearly 75,000 homeless. In south Fujian province, typhoon Ophelia left 22 people dead and 20 missing between June 20-25.

EAST BERlIN (JUNE 30) UPI - East Germans crowded shops Saturday, eager to spend their remaining surplus east marks before midnight when they become worthless and are replaced by the western deutsche mark.

East Berlin's Alexander Platz, the city's main downtown square, was a hive of activity as people emptied pockets of loose change and went on a spending spree in the final hours before East and West Germany were to unite their monetary systems.

East Germans would be able to change their east marks at a favorable 1 on 1 rate for deutsche marks after midnight, but limits were set on the amount of cash that could be converted and many East Germans found themselves with surplus funds.

Romanian gypsies and other merchants pedaled goods of every description in the square and street musicians performed for the shoppers, lending the shopping spree a festive air.

At the nearby Zentrum department store, shoppers thronged the clothing departments buying East German-made garments at vastly reduced prices. "This is the last day for clearing old stocks," said Bettina Wagner, 29, an East Berlin boutique manager. "We are being run off our feet. From Sunday onwards our shelves will be stocked with an entirely new range of mostly western-made fashions."

After midnight, East Germany becomes a "capitalist society" after 40 years of drab socialist uniformity. For some East German businesses, the switch to capitalism will allow them to compete in western markets and sell coveted western goods.

But the change will spell hard times for other East German businesses that are ill-equipped to compete with western manufacturers. Economists say many East German businesses will be forced to close and estimate unemployment in the country of 16 million could reach one million by the fall.

Midnight will also see the end to government subsidies for basic commodities. At some gas stations Saturday, cars lined up around the block as consumers hurried to fill their tanks with relatively cheap fuel.

Despite the potential pitfalls, most East Germans seemed to view the future with guarded optimism. Annette and Roger Wien, who live with their two sons in an apartment in the working class East Berlin neighborhood of Prenzlauer Berg, have only a small bank account to switch into deutsche marks. "We've never managed to save much," said Annette Wien.

While her husband's job at the nearby cultural center seems safe, Annette Wien's employment at a small garment factory is tenuous. She fears the factory will close once an influx of western goods hits East German stores. "I shall try and find a new job if that happens but it won't be easy," she said.

Although the couple voted for the Democratic Socialist Party, the successor to the Communist Party, in East Germany's first free elections in March, both want German unity as quickly as possible. "It's the only way of breaking clear of the insecurity now paralyzing the country," said Roger Wien.

East Germans are expected to besiege banks when they open at 9 a.m. Sunday. At the Alexander Platz, the Deutsche Bank is opening its doors at midnight to deal with customers wanting to immediately obtain the hard western currency. "We are opening that early because so many customers have pleaded with us to do so," said a bank spokesman.

The 25 billion deutsche marks needed to finance the currency union have been dispatched to East Germany in armed convoys and stored in safes in the cellar of the former Communist Party building in Berlin.

Also after midnight, travel will be unrestricted between both halves of the once-divided Berlin as well as the whole of the East-West German border. For the first time since before the Berlin Wall was built in 1961, an underground train service will begin operating between East and West Berlin.

East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere said in a television address to the nation Saturday the union with West Germany offers East Germany "a chance like no other in Eastern Europe" and urged East Germans to make the most of the opportunity. "We must not fold our hands in our laps and wait on events," he said. "Let us make an adventurous start."

De Maiziere said the Communist Party left behind a mountain of problems after 40 years of rule. But he said western firms, including some from the United States, France, and Britain, are willing to invest in the country.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 30) UPI - President Corazon Aquino's spokesman said Saturday that Washington's decision to pull its Peace Corps volunteers from the Philippines could be a "negotiating stance" in upcoming talks on the future of U.S. military bases in the country.

Washington announced last week it was withdrawing all 261 Peace Corps volunteers from the Philippines because communist guerrillas had threatened to kill U.S. citizens. State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the Philippines government was consulted before the decision.

But Phillipines officials called the decision unilateral and military officials said they did not know if the guerrillas had specifically targeted the Peace Corps, which has operated in the country for 29 years.

"With reference to the forthcoming U.S. military facilities negotiations, the pullout of the (volunteers) could be interpreted as a ... negotiating stance that unfortunately may only reinforce an obstacle course instead of disarming and charming embedded objections, to which the Filipino psyche more readily responds," said Aquino's press spokesman, Tomas Gomez. He described the pullout as a "hasty unilateral decision."

Gomez said the United States "disregarded" a Philippine offer to help maintain security for Peace Corps volunteers and refused "to share the alleged intelligence reports on which the decision was based."

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos and other military officials have said they were not consulted on the evacuation of the volunteers. They said the rebel threats were issued against U.S. nationals in general.

Last month, two U.S. airmen were killed outside the U.S. Clark Air Base, bringing to ten the number of Americans killed in politically motivated violence in recent years.

The 19,000-strong communist New People's Army, which has been waging a 21-year-old insurgency, claimed responsibility for the murders and vowed to kill more Americans unless the U.S. bases are dismantled.

Manila and Washington are to hold the second round of talks in August to determine whether the facilities will remain beyond September 16, 1991, when a treaty covering their existance expires. The Philippines is the site of Clark, the Subic Bay Naval complex and four smaller U.S. military installations.

Some 1,000 Filipinos, meanwhile, rallied at a downtown square Saturday to demand the facilities remain, saying they provide employment to thousands of workers and pump millions of dollars into the cash-strapped economy.

PARIS (JUNE 30) UPI - The French National Assembly approved Saturday an anti-racism bill that prohibits anyone convicted of racial discrimination from running for public office for five years.

The law, introduced by the French Communist Party following a rash of anti-Semitic and racist acts this spring, was opposed by conservatives and the sole deputy from the extreme right-wing National Front Party.

A series of attacks in May on Jewish and Catholic cemeteries, including the desecration of 34 graves at the Jewish cemetery in Carpentras in southern France, led to a national period of soul searching.

Yet despite the outrage caused by the anti-Semitic violence and the mass demonstrations organized to protest the acts, the National Front has continued to grow in strength and numbers, according to political analysts.

Opponents of the anti-racism bill argued that existing laws were sufficient to punish racist and xenophobic acts and charged that the new law will limit freedom of the press.

But Attorney General Pierre Arpaillange said the exclusion from running for office for those convicted of racist acts does not apply to journalists or directors of newspapers.

The law, approved 308-265, also requires the French human rights commission to make a public annual report on the fight against racism. It also guarantees anti-racist groups the right to reply to anti-Semitic, xenophobic, or racist attacks.

French political analysts said the law was aimed specifically at the National Front headed by Jean-Marie Le Pen. Although the party has only one member in the National Assembly, it has been successful in electing many members to local and regional offices.

Le Pen himself was convicted Thursday of racial defamation for anti-Semitic comments made in a magazine interview last August. Last May 1 the extreme right-wing leader was ordered to pay a symbolic franc for saying that the Nazi gas chambers were "a detail of World War II.

Both convictions were possible because earlier this year the European Parliament voted to lift Le Pen's parliamentary immunity. But because both cases took place before approval of the new law, the convictions will not prevent him from running in upcoming elections.

WARSAW, POLAND (JUNE 30) UPI - Pope John Paul II, concerned over a split between Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, urged the union leader to unite the nation in a letter made public Saturday.

"I wish you new light, inspiration and strength in your service for the good and unity of the motherland," the pope said in the letter to Walesa that was read at a meeting of the Civic Committee called to discuss its future.

The Civic Committee, formed in 1988 by Walesa and about 100 intellectuals, was instrumental in arranging last year's parliamentary elections and forming a Solidarity government led by Mazowiecki, Walesa's advisor.

The Committee grew into a popular movement, opened offices across the country and successfully fielded candidates in local government elections in May. But the Committee split when 66 members said it should be disbanded because it had fulfilled its objectives.

Walesa disagreed, arguing the Committee should become stronger than ever. He also criticized Mazowiecki for taking too long to sweep out communists from managerial positions in government.

The Polish-born pontiff said Solidarity's past trials, a reference to the union's harrassment and banishment by communist authorities following its formation in 1980, were easier than "the task which the nation and its leaders are facing now."

Mazowiecki imposed drastic economic austerity measures to counter inflation, which has lowered the Polish standard of living by 30 percent in the past five months. "May those for whom Poland is dear get united around the task of the overhauling of Poland," the pope said in the letter. On Friday John Paul II sent a similar letter to Mazowiecki, urging him to unite the nation to combat the economic crisis.

"I supported, support, and will support Mazowiecki," Walesa told some 120 activists at the meeting in Warsaw, but he said the prime minister made mistakes that need to be corrected.

Most of the participants at the meeting supported Walesa's plan to speed up political changes, including holding parliamentary elections in the fall instead of next year, removing communists from government jobs and replacing communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski. Walesa has said he would eventually run for president.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 30) UPI - Libyan Foreign Minister Azzouz al Talhi said in a newspaper interview that Israel might use a recent attack on Tel Aviv area beaches as a pretext for "a wide-scale" assault against his country.

In an interview published Saturday in the Gulf newspaper al-Ittihad in Abu Dhabi, al Talhi said his country had taken precautions to repulse an attack, but did not provide details.

Al Talhi repeated Libya's denials that it was connected to the unsuccessful May 30 sea attack against Israel by a radical Palestinian faction. He said Israel is trying to use the aborted mission as a pretext to attack Libya.

"The likelihood that Israel may launch a wide scale aggression against Libya is not excluded," al Talhi said. "Libya has taken all the precautionary measures needed to repulse any possible Israeli aggression.

"Libya had nothing to do with the latest seaborne operation against Israeli coasts," he said. "Israel is trying to use this operation as a pretext to attack Libya."

Al Talhi said Libya regretted President Bush's June 20 decision to suspend diplomatic contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization because the PLO did not condem the guerrilla operation outright. He said Libya held the Bush administration responsible for the failure of the U.S.-PLO dialogue because, he said, Washington supported Israeli policy.

Turning to U.S.-Libyan ties, al Talhi denied that Libya is producing chemical weapons but said "American threats against Libya" continued over the issue. "Libya is ready for a comprehensive inspection of this kind of weapons provided that this applies to all countries in the area," he said.

"Despite Arab efforts, particularly those exerted by Egypt and Morocco to improve U.S.-Libyan ties, no tangible progress has been achieved," al Talhi said.

LOCKPORT, IL (JUNE 30) UPI - Authorities Saturday identified the four dead teenagers killed killed Friday night in a race to beat an Amtrak passenger train at a crossing where the gates were down and operating.

Police spokeswoman Yvonna Redemske identified the victims as Brandon Crump 16, Minooka; Mitsy Wroblewski, 17, Lemont; her cousin Criquette Wroblewski, 16, Shorewood; and Zachary Zeller, 17, Shorewood.

The fifth teen injured in the crash, Jeremiah Murchison, 17, Minooka, was in serious but stable condition in the intensive care unit at Silver Cross Hospital in Joliet, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Amtrak spokesman Michael Stewart said the train, en route from Chicago to St. Louis, slammed into the car at about 8 p.m. on tracks owned by Southern Pacific Railroad just north of Joliet.

"What we have here is a westbound vehicle that apparently went around the (railroad) gates," Antole said. "We have reports the gates were operational and down." No one aboard the train was injured.

"There was no evidence (of alcohol) in the car and none of the kids smelled of alcohol. I think they just thought they could beat the train," said Redemske. "We do have trouble with these gates here in Lockport going up and down and up and down - even when there's not a train coming."

Police Lt. James Antole said results of tests by the Will County coroner's office were pending.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 30) UPI - Nelson Mandela, rewarding 75,000 people for hours of patience, thanked Californians for their early support of the anti-apartheid movement and urged young people not to abandon hope by turning to drugs.

The African National Congress leader planned to end his eight-city U.S. fundraising tour Saturday in Oakland, Calif. His one-day stop in Los Angeles was expected to produce about $2 million for the ANC's work to end apartheid in South Africa.

Before departing Los Angeles he took an early morning stroll around his downtown hotel, stopping to speak with several homeless people on the way. He was out of the Biltmore Hotel about 6 a.m. and spent about 30 minutes walking the perimeter of the building.

The outpouring of mutual affection between Mandela and Americans raised prospects for a friendlier relationship between a black majority government and the United States than Washington has historically had with revolutionary regimes.

During a grueling itinerary Friday that included a City Hall rally with Mayor Tom Bradley and 15,000 people, a meeting with former Soviet refusenik Natan Sharansky and that ended with a speech to a packed Memorial Coliseum, Mandela also spoke at a star-studded dinner that raised an estimated $1.2 million.

Typically behind schedule, he left the dinner for the Coliseum, where he was met with thunderous ovations from a crowd of 75,000 who paid $10 each and waited several hours to see him. Mandela paid warm tribute to Californians and delivered an anti-drug message for young people in America and the world.

"We learned that the solution was not to escape reality by resorting to drugs. We learned that we could make our future so bright by overcoming our own weaknesses and the weaknesses of others. We went to prison for so long, but never gave up hope. It is our common responsibility to never give up hope. We all can and we all must make the world a better place as a result of our common struggle," he said.

"Apartheid is crumbling on the brink of its death; our country is on the eve of a great beginning. Indeed, victory is in sight. Together with you and united in action, we can make it happen," he said.

"When the world slept and apartheid ravaged us, it was the noble sons and daughters of the state of California who rallied to our cause." As Coliseum crowd waited for Mandela, they listened to the Rev. Jesse Jackson. "My friends, with all of our love for Mr. Nelson Mandela, we cannot just admire him, we must follow him. He is not a celebrity, he is a freedom-fighter," said Jackson.

At the $1,000-a-plate dinner, he said, "All of you are in our hearts," to the audience that included Jane Fonda, Harry Belafonte, Lionel Richie, Quincy Jones, Danny Glover, Diana Ross, Mike Tyson, and Muhammad Ali.

"All of you - through your art - have brought so much pleasure to millions upon millions of people and honor to your profession. I feel humble in this room and honored by your presence ... So many of you are household names in our country."

"In prison, as soon as we were allowed to view films and TV, we became entranced by so many of you," he said. "In many respects, you were our window on life outside. Thank you for the pleasure you gave us in difficult circumstances."

Mandela, however, said he was not always pleased by Hollywood's portrayal of Africans. "One is compelled to note ... that Hollywood has tended to stereotype the lives of the people of Africa," he said. As a young man, I remember seeing 'Tarzan' and being uneasy - even disturbed - by this one-dimensional and distorted portrayal. Hollywood's image ... left me somewhat diminished. Fortunately, over the last few years, a few films have passionately addressed this injustice."

Mandela also held a 30-minute meeting at his hotel with Sharansky, who, like Mandela, was persecuted for his beliefs until he was allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union to Israel. The two have differed over Mandela's friendly relations with the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Earlier, the 71-year-old Mandela stood in the hot sun to the throng of 15,000 at the steps of City Hall and predicted America's outpouring of support will mean a quicker end to the apartheid government of South Africa.

"We believe that the finest tribute we can pay to your wonderful, warm, generous, and compassionate people is to intensify the anti-apartheid struggle on all fronts," Mandela said, attempting to rouse a crowd that had been dulled by a 4 1/2-hour wait under the sun.

Preceding Mandela was actress Cicely Tyson, who, in a dramatic reading, recited a litany of historic abuses dealt to black men and women and asked "Who else?" could have survived it.

"It is the gospel truth that the black man cannot be destroyed," Tyson said. "He has a force. He has a spirit, honey, that cannot be suppressed. ..." And the black woman, she said, "full of amazing grace, queen of the human race ... will survive."

(JUNE 30) UPI - An expanding Western heatwave pushed its way into the Plains and northern Rockies Saturday, while thunderstorms that triggered damaging tornadoes and flooding continued their assault on the Midwest. The National Weather Service expanded its "very hot" forecast northward and predicted readings of 101 in Denver and 100 in Billings, Mont.

Triple-digit temperatures have been daily occurences in recent weeks in Texas, the desert Southwest, and areas of Kansas and Nebraska, the weather service said.

Temperatures were expected to be in the 90s over much of the rest of the West, Midwest, South and Middle Atlantic region, the NWS said. The only areas to escape the heat were the Great Lakes, Northeast and Pacific Northwest.

Phoenix, which sizzled in record 122-degree heat earlier this week, was already up to 96 degrees before sunrise Saturday. Phoenix, Las Vegas and the California desert region all were expecting to see 110-degree temperatures later in the day.

Temperatures Friday rose into the 90s and above 100 in Kansas, western Nebraska and eastern Colorado, setting records in Denver and Pueblo, Colo.

Slightly cooler weather along the California coast enabled firefighters to make headway in their battle against a fire that consumed nearly 5,000 acres and 600 structures in Santa Barbara. A break in the searing heat and an easing of winds provided the first significant victory Friday to an army of 1,755 firefighters.

"The weather is looking fairly good," a relieved county spokesman Bill Douros said. Temperatures only reached about 80 degrees amid rising humidity and winds no more than 15 mph. The winds gusted to 60 mph amid triple-digit heat the night the fire began Wednesday.

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Midwest where residents were recovering from serious damaged caused by violent weather a day earlier. Thunderstorm warnings were in effect Saturday for parts of Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan.

In Illinois, a microburst with 140 mph winds damaged 39 buildings in an industrial park and ten homes in Streamwood, northwest of Chicago, the NWS said. Damage was estimated at $10 million to $15 million. One worker in the park was critically injured when a wall collapsed on him. Four others were injured, none seriously.

In New Lenox, southwest of Chicago, five children and two adults were slightly injured Friday when a 60-foot oak fell on their car and the village post office.

The storms dumped up to seven inches of rain as they swept east from northwest Illinois and as far south as Springfield, pushing many rivers toward flood stage and causing flash flooding over a wide area.

In southeastern Iowa, residents of Davenport and Bettendorf hard hit by flooding June 16 were evacuated from their homes Friday as heavy thunderstorms hit the area and caused more flooding along Duck Creek.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 30) UPI - East Germans Sunday will realize something they could only dream about a year ago - a strong West German mark, a free market economy and a new social security system - with political unification to follow.

The easterners were told Saturday the unprecedented economic merger of the two countries that takes effect Sunday will bring them prosperity - if they seize the opportunity and work at it.

The bank deposits of about 16.4 million East Germans automatically will be coverted into West German marks. Ten-thousand banks and other credit institutions will begin paying out the 25 billion West marks ($15 billion) shipped to East Germany in armored cars. Six hundred tons of bank notes and 500 tons of coins were shipped to the East.

Shopkeepers throughout East Germany worked throughout the weekend to stock up on Western goods, which will be readily available to easterners for the first time in 40 years.

Statements from both East and West German leaders reflected the awareness that many East Germans have over fears of the immediate effects of the economic, monetary and social union - a key step toward unification.

There were many predictions the sudden switch from a centrally run and and planned communist economy to a free market, capitalist economy could cause mass unemployment, inflation, social dislocation, and the shutdown of East German's inefficient and outmoded enterprises unable to compete in world markets.

East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere acknowledged in a television speech there would be "problems and worries," but said that with West German assistance "from now on things will be looking up."

He said not only West German firms, but American, French, and British companies have concrete projects in mind and plan to make investments in East Germany which will create new jobs while safeguarding old ones.

De Maiziere conceded no one could tell exactly what will happen. But he added: "I say to you, it will work. It must work. We citizens of the German Democratic Republic know that now it is up to us to roll up our sleeves and get going."

In an interview with the West German newspaper Bild, which has a large circulation in East Germany, de Maiziere appealed to workers not to strike for higher wages. He estimated it would take less than five years for East German wages to reach the West German level.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, in a speech in the East German city of Halle at the opening of a branch of West Germany's Commerz Bank, said July 1, 1990 should be a day for "hope and decisive action." "The problems will not be solved by hesitation and delay," Genscher asserted.

West German Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann said there were many problems to solve but economic union "has laid the foundation for prosperity, social security and protection of the environment."

Along with the economic union, the physical division of Germany will end Sunday. All controls on the East-West Berlin border and the long East-West German border were being abolished at midnight Saturday.

At a ceremony Sunday at the Neustadt border crossing point, West German Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble and East German Interior Minister Peter-Michael Diestel will honor the 80 East Germans killed on the Berlin border trying to flee to the West and the estimated 111 killed on the East-West German border.

"July 1, 1990 is a happy day in German history," said Dorothee Wilms, the West German minister for East-West German affairs. "On this day after 45 long years, for many people almost intolerable years, the last barriers inside Germany and all controls will be abolished."

Celebrations were planned throughout East Germany. A party called "Dance in the D-Mark" was scheduled in the East Berlin district of Adlershof in a building formerly occupied by the Stasi, the secret police of the old comunist regime ousted last November.

In West Berlin and in West German cities near the border, shops braced for an onslaught Monday of East German shoppers clutching their new marks. But a survey released last Thursday by the Bank of Tokyo Capital Markets indicated only 19 percent of East German savings will be spent in the next six months.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 30) UPI - Missouri, Arizona, and Washington will be the three states hardest hit by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's proposed military budget cuts, an economic research organization has concluded.

Texas, Maryland, and California would be the next three states most affected by the cutbacks, according to a new study by New York's Council on Economic Priorities.

In contrast, Alaska, Delaware, Hawaii, and South Dakota would be among the least affected because they have virtually no prime contracts for weapon systems scheduled for cuts, said the council's June research report titled "For Peace, Defense Efficiency: Economic Adjustment Now."

A council researcher said Hawaii and Idaho might actually benefit from the proposed changes, due to expected increases in military personnel or support services in the two states.

The report ranked states according to a "Defense Dislocation Index" or DDI based on the sum of each state's dependence on the defense industry and its unemployment rate and the ratio of probable cuts to total defense spending.

According to the DDI, Missouri would be the most dislocated state, losing $1.2 billion and as many as 80,000 jobs under the defense cuts proposed by Cheney.

The Missouri contractor most likely to be affected is McDonnell Douglas Corp., which builds the F-15 and F-18 fighter jets in St. Louis and which received the second highest amount of defense contracts in fiscal 1989.

Cheney has proposed eliminating the F-15 after a final buy of 36 jets in fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1. McDonnell Douglas is "already being hurt " the council said. "It faces layoffs of at least 5,000 more employees."

Arizona is not very defense dependent and has an unemployment rate of only 4.4 percent but still stands "to lose as much as half its $2.7 billion in prime (defense) contracts" and as many as 37,000 jobs, the council said.

Most likely to be affected, it said, are McDonnell Douglas's Apache helicopter program in Mesa; Motorola Government Electric's OV-1D aircraft modification program in Tempe; and General Motors-Hughes Aircraft with the Chaparral, Maverick, Phoenix and AMRAAM missiles in Tucson.

In his fiscal 1991 budget, Cheney proposed eliminating all of the above programs except for the new AMRAAM (Advanced Medium-Range Air-to-Air Missile), which has been experiencing troubles in flight tests.

The state of Washington ranks third on the DDI list, because its economy is heavily dependent on the Boeing Co., which has contracts for the B-2 "stealth" bomber, the Strategic Defense Initiative or "Star Wars" program, the Sea Lance anti-submarine missile and the Non-Line-of-Sight Missile.

"In (Washington) state, $2.6 billion is at risk for the B-2 and $206 million for other weapon systems," the council said. "According to CEP (council) estimates, some 44,000 jobs might be affected."

The council said that, based on prime contracts only, Maryland appears to have the most jobs at risk - about 187,000 - followed by California with nearly 138,000.

"However, in these two states the bulk of the potential job loss would be from reduction in B-2 bomber contracts; since production of the B-2 is still in its infancy most of the job losses would be on paper," the council said. "The Missouri and Texas (82,800) job losses, however, would be almost entirely in actual weapon systems production," the council said.

Following is the ranking of the 50 states and the District of Columbia with their Defense Dislocation Index numbers in parenthesis:

1. Missouri (158); 2. Arizona (119); 3. Washington (111) 4. Texas (82); 5. Maryland (78); 6. California (75); 7. New Hampshire (61); 8. Alabama (57); 9. New York (56); 10. New Jersey (55); 11. Connecticut (55); 12. Ohio (51); 13. Pennsylvania (45); 14. Michigan (42); 15. Maine (41); 16. Massachusetts (40); 17. Illinois (39); 18. Virginia (33); 19. Vermont (31); 20. Arkansas (31);

21. Louisiana (31); 22. Tennessee (30); 23. Utah (27); 24. Nevada (19); 25. Georgia (13); 26. Florida (13); 27. Colorado (12); 28. New Mexico (11); 29. Minnesota (11); 30. Indiana (10); 31. Oklahoma (10); 32. South Carolina (10); 33. West Virginia (8); 34. North Dakota (8); 35. Kentucky (6); 36. Iowa (5); 37. North Carolina (5); 38. Oregon (4); 39. District of Columbia (4); 40. Montana (2).

41. Wisconsin (1); 42. Kansas (1); 43. Wyoming (1); 44. Rhode Island (0); 45. Nebraska (0); 46. Delaware (0); 47. Mississippi (0); 48. Alaska (0); 49. South Dakota (0); 50. Hawaii (minus 1); 51. Idaho (minus 30).

(JUNE 30) UPI - Nelson Mandela addressed about 15-thousand supporters in sweltering conditions in Los Angeles yesterday. The South African black leader said America's support will mean a quicker end to the racial segregation policy of the government of Pretoria.

The Ecuadoran government and U-S officials say Scott Heimdal, who was kidnapped in April, has been freed by his captors and reunited with his parents. A U-S Embassy spokeswoman in Quito says Heimdal is in good condition. Heimdal was working as a mining engineer in Ecuador at the time he was abducted.

Authorities in Lockport, Illinois, say an Amtrak passenger train slammed into an automobile last night, killing four teen-age passengers and seriously injuring a fifth. A police spokesman says it appears the crossing gates were operational and down when the crash occurred. NO one aboard the train was injured.

Disappointed NASA managers have been forced to ground the shuttle fleet because of another fuel leak, this one aboard Atlantis. The crippling fuel leak is similar to the one that grounded the shuttle Columbia last month. Officials say they'll need at least two weeks to fix the problem.

Setbacks in NASA's shuttle program are just one problem facing the space agency. Lawmakers on Capitol Hill yesterday blasted NASA for failing to detect serious flaws in the one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope. Some legislators say the oversight casts doubt on NASA's credibility.

BELFAST, NORTHERN IRELAND (JUNE 30) UPI - One police officer was killed and another seriously wounded Saturday when gunmen shot them near a busy shopping district in downtown Belfast, investigators said.

A Royal Ulster Constabulary spokesman said the two officers were patrolling the area on foot when they were shot from behind by at least two men at mid-morning. The gunmen fled after the shootings, police said.

A spokesman said one of the officers died at the scene and the other was listed in critical condition at a nearby hospital. Police withheld their identities until relatives were notified.

Investigators declined to say whether they believe the shootings were carried out by the Irish Republican Army, which has in recent months heightened its violent campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

KHARTOUM, SUDAN (JUNE 30) UPI - On the anniversary of the coup which brought it to power, Sudan's military government promised Saturday to convene a national conference in August to shape the country's political future.

Military ruler Gen. Omar al-Bashir, who overthrew democratically-elected Prime Minister Sadiq al-Mahdi on Jun. 30, 1989, announced the holding of the conference in an anniversary address to the Sudanese nation, ahead of mass celebrations organized by the government.

Hundreds of thousands of people, according to the official Sudan News Agency, took to the streets of Khartoum to demonstrate support for the general's rule. People from all over the country marched for three and a half hours, the agency said, acclaiming al-Bashir's pro-Islamic rule and his re-introduction of traditional "Sharia" Islamic law.

"Sharia now," "Sharia or martyrdom," "One army, one people," "Sharia, Sharia, O Bashir," they chanted, according to the agency. Sharia law stipulates harsh physical punishment, including stoning, limb amputation, flogging, and hanging, for crimes such as adultery and theft.

Al-Bashir gave few details of the proposed political reform conference, saying only it would ensure unity of all elements of Sudanese society and would reject past formulas for government, including individual dictatorship, one-party or sectarian rule.

The general has made several pledges to alter his totalitarian government, which now rules by decree. He promised in March to form a political party of national unity at a grass-roots level.

But like a number of other stated policy goals, such as putting an end to Sudan's seven-year-old civil war, the reorganization has failed to materialize.

In March the United States cut economic and military aid to Sudan under a rule that automatically suspends assistances to governments that abolish democratic freedoms for more than eight months.

Rebels in southern Sudan, meanwhile, used the first anniversary of the coup to taunt the government with a further claimed military victory. The clandestine radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army, monitored in the Kenyan capital of Nairobi, said the anti-Islamic rebels had wiped out a big government convoy sent relieve troops under siege at the town of Yei 830 miles south of Khartoum.

The broadcast said rebel soldiers had ambushed the convoy en route from Maridi on Tuesday, and warned that similar attempts to relieve Yei, besieged since January this year, would be crushed. It gave no precise details of the size of the destroyed convoy but claimed 28 government soldiers were killed.

The rebels of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army has fought Khartoum governments since 1983, but has expressed particularly violent opposition to the current government.

The rebels, under its leader Col. John Garang, has seized over 20 government garrisons in southern Sudan, mainly on the west bank of the river Nile since al-Bashir took power, despite government pledges to eradicate the rebels by military force.

Successive military setbacks led to two sets of inconclusive peace talks last year but the civil war has dragged on much as before. More than 500,000 people have been killed or starved since 1986 as a result of the conflict, according to the human rights group Africa Watch.

Most of al-Bashir's lengthy speech was dedicated to criticism of the country's former political parties - now all banned - and to pledges of economic recovery and self-sufficiency in the future. The general said his 15-man military junta had established good relations with Libya, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Yemen and neighboring African states.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (JUNE 30) UPI - President Virgilio Barco's government praised a decision by the European Community to drop tariffs on agricultural products from Colombia to help it economically as it battles powerful cocaine cartels.

The dropping of tariffs is aimed at boosting shipments of agriculatural products from Colombia to Western Europe and will primarily affect exports of coffee, bananas, cotton, flowers, and tropical fruit, officials said.

Colombia also used the preliminary EC decision to exhort similar action from the United States, the target of constant complaints that it is not doing enough to help Colombia.

"I think this is the first real evidence, the first important political decision by the European Economic Community with respect to Colombia and other Andean countries," said Foreign Minister Julio Londono.

The decision must be ratified at a July 16 meeting of EC ministers but Colombian officials said they were confident of a favorable vote. "It is good news for Colombia," Londono said. "I believe there will be an increase in exports."

Barco had pressed European nations in a recent visit and the United States to open their markets to Colombian products. He argued Colombia is paying a disportionately high price in battling the cartels and should be compensated by favorable trade terms.

Colombian officials and the news media frequently complain the United States has not done enough to help Colombian trade and imposes unjustifiable high tariffs. U.S. Embassy officials say the Bush administration is actively promoting Colombian trade.

Londono, in an apparent reference to the United States, said, "I think this attitude of the Community constitutes an example for other nations that had expressed equal decision, equal intentions with respect to Colombia."

Peru and Bolivia, producers of the coca leaf, cocaine's main ingredient, also pressed for similar treatment of their products to move their economies away from their high dependence on the cocaine trade. But the two impoverished Andes Mountain nations do not export any significant amount of agricultural products.

The government also publicly pressed its campaign to capture Medellin cartel kingpin Pablo Escobar, named "Public Enemy No. 1." Escobar, as head of the cartel, is blamed for hundreds of murders, including judges, presidential candidates, and top government and police officials.

Army Gen. Harold Bedoya, commander of the Medellin region, named Escobar as responsible for six recent car bombs in the city of Medellin and the June 23 massacre in an area bar in which gunmen executed 19 people.

Escobar was blamed for the latest car bomb that exploded Thursday in Medellin, killing 14 people. In a statment Friday, Bedoya referred to Escobar as "crazy" eight times and called on citizens to help locate him.

A judge also approved prison sentences for eight men, including two army officers, for the 1989 murders of 12 members of a judicial commission, newspapers reported Saturday.

The commission was investigating paramilitary death squads in an area whose control was being disputed by the Medellin cartel and leftist guerrillas. The cartel formed and funded the death squads that killed guerrillas, leftist leaders or suspected sympathizers, the government says.

The judge also recommended the investigation of another army officer for links to the murders, the newspaper El Tiempo said. Authorities said former Organization of American States Ambassador Rodrigo Velasco was kidnapped by armed men believed to belong to a guerrilla group. Velasco, 50, was kidnapped Thursday on his farm in southern Colombia.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 30) UPI - A policeman killed a black anti-apartheid activist and wounded two others with one bullet when he fired into a crowd Saturday, witnesses said.

Police said the constable shot in self-defense after the crowd attacked him and colleagues with stones while they were making a legitimate arrest. Witnesses insisted, however, the firing was unprovoked.

The policeman shot into a mass of people outside a rally of the African National Congress in the black township of Alexandra, a satellite of Johannesburg.

"They (policemen) were mingling with the crowd and suddenly arrested a youth for no reason," Alexandra Civic Association spokesman Obed Bapela said. "The captain in charge was telling us why the youth had been arrested when a black constable with him just lifted his gun and shot at the crowd," causing the death and injuries, Bapela said, adding that the victim was an ANC activist.

A police spokesman said the man was shot after the policemen arrested a youth for possession of marijuana and were then showered with stones while locking the suspect in their van.

"They just kept on throwing stones" and some in the crowd tried to open the van door, the spokesman said. "A policeman shot a person in self defense" and fatally injured him, he said.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (JUNE 30) UPI - More than 10,000 Buddhists staged a silent march through the capital Saturday, demanding that Nepal's new constitution declare the primarily Hindu kingdom a secular state.

A committee created by Nepal's interim government, which took power this spring following pro-democracy protests, has been charged with writing a new constitution for the impoverished Himalayan country.

It was the second time in eight days Buddhists have taken to the streets to demand Nepal drop its official religious affiliation. Buddhists and Hindus have lived in harmony for centuries in Nepal. Hindus consider Buddha to be the tenth incarnation of a Hindu god.

But religion has become an emotional issue since the struggle for democracy toppled King Birendra's single-party government, although not the king himself.

Bishwa Nath Upadhaya, chairman of the constitutional commission, said most of the suggestions the group received from the public focused on language, religion, and related issues.

"Though all are free to work for the preservation of their rights, activities that are likely to ... create religious disputes can never be regarded as democratic," he said.

Also Saturday, a senior Nepalese official said India assured Nepal it would lift a 15-month-old trade embargo by Sunday. India agreed to lift the embargo on the land-locked country early in June when the kingdom agreed to consider India's security interests in the area. India also agreed to resume supplies of essential items like oil and coal to Nepal.

(JUNE 30) UPI - NASA has grounded its fleet of space shuttles after discovering another fuel leak- this one aboard Atlantis.

Engineers are scrambling to pinpoint the source of a crippling fuel leak on Atlantis... which is like one that grounded the Columbia last month.

The leak on the Atlantis will require a second straight trip back to the hangar for repairs and another major launch delay.

The setbacks could NOT have come at a worse time for NASA, which is struggling to keep the decks clear for a high-priority flight by the shuttle Discovery in October to ferry a European-built solar probe into space.

And if the shuttle problems are NOT enough... NASA is catching flak from lawmakers in Washington for failing to detect major flaws in the one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope.

Democratic Senator Barbara Mikulski is the head of the Senate appropriations subcommittee that funds NASA programs. Yesterday, at a committee hearing, she told Lennard Fisk- NASA's associate administrator for space science and applications- that the space agency's credibility has been hurt by these snafus.

Tensions between Lithuania and Moscow may ease now that the rebellious republic has agreed to impose a 100-day moratorium on an independence declaration.

The Lithuanian Parliament voted yesterday to postpone the declaration in hopes that the Kremlin will come to the bargaining table. Lithuanian President Landsbergis also predicted the move would persuade Soviet President Gorbachev to end an economic blockade.

The compromise resolution was passed on a 69-35 vote which followed two days of emotional debate. The result of the vote was met with scattered applause after which legislators went home. The resolution states the moratorium is for the expressed purpose of allowing negotiations between Lithuania and the Soviet Union.

The reaction from residents in Vilnius also was somewhat subdued. Said one man- ''I suppose know better than I how to deal with Moscow.''

(JUNE 30) UPI - 75-thousand people gathered in the Los Angeles Coliseum yesterday to welcome Nelson Mandela to California. The crowd waited several hours in blistering hot weather to hear the South African black leader speak and they were NOT disappointed.

After arriving a bit late, Mandela thanked Californians for their early support of the anti-apartheid movement and urged young people NOT to give up hope by turning to drugs.

In his words- ''We learned the solution was NOT to escape reality by resorting to drugs.'' Mandela went on to say it is a common responsibility to never give up hope in the face of adversity. He said South Africa is on the eve of a great new beginning and added U-S support can help end apartheid.

Earlier, Mandela attended a one-thousand-dollar-a-plate dinner to benefit the African National Congress. Celebrities on hand for the celebration included Jane Fonda, Harry Belafonte, Diana Ross, Mike Tyson, Quincy Jones and Danny Glover.

Later today, Mandela will wrap up his U-S visit with a fund-raising tour in Oakland.

The fight to save the planet's ozone layer won two new allies, with India and China agreeing to speed up the elimination of ozone-depleting chemicals.

An international conference on ozone depletion in London ended yesterday. 54 of the 59 signatories of the Montreal Protocol on ozone protection agreed to phase-out chloro-fluorocarbons by the end of the century, as well as other chemicals believed to be eating away at the ozone layer.

The protocol originally called for cutting global C-F-C use in half by the year 2000... but recent studies prompted the need for swifter action.

The delegates called for cuts of 50 percent by 1995 and 85 percent by 1997. They also agreed to review their schedule of C-F-C reduction in 1992.

The United States has pledged to contribute 25-Million to 40-Million dollars to the fund, which will be administered by an executive committee of 14 nations. The 14 include seven industrialized and seven developing nations.

MOSCOW (JUNE 30) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev stripped a retired KGB major general of his rank and government honors Saturday for saying publicly the Soviet security agency still uses dirty tricks and spies on innocent people.

The official Soviet press has published several attacks on Maj. Gen. Oleg Kalugin since he began giving speeches and interviews two weeks ago charging that the KGB is still a repressive agency that, despite claims to the contrary, has not reformed under Gorbachev.

The KGB itself issued an unusual press release denouncing Kalugin and hinting his work was suspect long before he retired in March. It did not explain why, if the agency doubted his ability, Kalugin was given so many decorations and promoted to head the department of foreign counter-intelligence.

"A special presidential decree, issued at the request of the Soviet Committee of State Security (KGB), stripped Kalugin of government awards for actions discrediting the honor and dignity of a state security officer " the official Tass news agency said. Kalugin was also stripped of his military rank and "other privileges," Tass said.

The retired KGB officer first came to public attention when he told the Democratic Platform bloc of radical communists two weeks ago that his former agency was trying to fool the public into thinking it had reformed.

In subsequent interviews with both Soviet and Western journalists, Kalugin charged that the KGB still spies on new political parties and workers' groups and participated in an official plot to discredit populist politician Boris Yeltsin.

Kalugin spent 30 years as a KGB agent, working his way up from the cover of a Radio Moscow correspondent in New York to deputy chief of the KGB mission in Washington and later to top posts in Moscow and Leningrad.

Kalugin said he was forced to retire in March because of a dispute with party leaders and an outspoken letter to Gorbachev. The official Communist Party newspaper Pravda said "the peculiarities of Kalugin's character did not allow him to withstand the test of responsibility."

Pravda made a number of vague allegations against Kalugin on Thursday, saying dozens of foreign agents were discovered after his retirement, though it did not say he was connected with any of them. "Now honest people work in the KGB," Pravda said. "They fulfill all the Soviet laws and are devoted to their work."

The KGB press release was also vague in its denial of Kalugin's charges, saying only that the KGB obeyed Soviet laws and that the former agent's allegations were an attempt to "mislead public opinion" for political reasons.

QUITO, ECUADOR (JUNE 30) UPI - The mother of a U.S. engineer released by Colombian kidnappers after his family paid a $60,000 ransom said Saturday she was so happy her son was safe she spent an hour by his bedside just watching him breathe in his sleep.

Scott Heimdal, 27, was released unharmed Friday after 61 days in captivity when his family paid the ransom to suspected Colombian guerrillas, Equadoran police said. He was flown from Colombia to Quito Friday night and reunited with his mother and father, who had flown to Equador to negotiate with the kidnappers.

His mother, Marge Heimdal of Peoria, Ill., said her son looked thin and tired, but was in good health. "I was in such disbelief that I laid at Scott's bedside while he was asleep for an hour just to watch him breathe," she said. "For the first time in my life, I almost passed out when I first saw him." The reaction of her husband, Roy Heimdal, was a mixture of tears, laughter and disbelief, she said.

U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Patricia Norman said the Heimdals, who were staying at an undisclosed location, would return to the United States, but they had not yet determined when.

Heimdal, an employee of a U.S. gold mining company, was kidnapped April 28 while riding in a motorized canoe on the San Miguel River along the Colombia-Equador border, said Luis Lopez, minister of the interior. He was found Friday in good health by Ecuadoran police in a boat on the same river.

Marge Heimdal said seeing her son alive was the happiest moment of her life, adding she could not believe the ordeal was over. The Heimdals and Scott's Ecuadoran fiancee were expected to return to Peoria early in the week, but Marge Heimdal said her son was still being examined by doctors. "I'm going to spend most of the afternoon shopping for new clothes for Scott," she said.

The family plans a major birthday celebration Thursday, when Scott turns 28, she said. Originally, the kidnappers had asked for $1.2 million in ransom, but lowered their demand to $60,000, which the family reportedly raised.

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND (JUNE 30) UPI - Stefan Edberg, raising his game at the crucial moment, Saturday advanced to Wimbledon's round of 16 with a 6-4, 5-7, 3-6, 6-2, 9-7 victory over tenacious Amos Mansdorf of Israel.

The match was played in swirling winds which sometimes gusted to 40 mph. In the fifth set, both players held serve easily through the first 14 games, never facing a break point.

Mansdorf, who was matching the third seed's effective serve-and-volley tactics, lost his serve in the 15th game. On the second deuce, Edberg drilled a close-range backhand at the Israeli, who netted the forehand volley. On the next point, Edberg belted a backhand down the line, Mansdorf lunged and again netted the forehand volley. Edberg then held serve at love for the match.

Mansdorf, ranked 34th, said that Edberg's performance at the decisive moment is what distinguishes the world's best players from the rest. "Always, the top guys will play better on the big points," said Mansdorf. "The difference is a slight mental difference."

Edberg, the 1988 Wimbledon champion, said his fifth-set strategy was to be patient. "I said to myself to stay with him and wait for my chance," said Edberg. "He only gave me one chance and I was lucky to take it."

Edberg's next opponent will be 13th seed Michael Chang, who defeated Edberg in the 1989 French Open final. They will play Monday after Wimbledon's traditional day off Sunday. On Saturday, the 18-year-old American recovered from a two-set deficit to defeat Australia's Mark Kratzmann, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Ninth seed Jim Courier of the United States became the ninth upset victim of the men's draw, losing to wild-card entrant Mark Woodforde of Australia 7-5, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4. No. 11 Guy Forget survived a long battle with Michael Stich of West Germany, winning 3-6, 7-5, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3.

On the women's side, second seed Martina Navratilova overwhelmed Karin Kschwendt of Luxembourg 6-1, 6-1. Navratilova, who has lost just nine games in her three matches, is seeking a record ninth Wimbledon singles title.

Gabriela Sabatini, the talented Argentine whose potential remains far greater than her achievements, advanced to the round of 16 with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Catherine Tanvier of France.

The fourth seed, whose usual strategy is to stay on the baseline and pound away with top-spin groundstrokes, came to net at every opportunity. Formerly a timid volleyer, Sabatini played the net with confidence and her shots were firm and sharply angled.

In 1989, she was a second-round loser at The All England Club, but "I am another player compared to last year," she said. "I feel more comfortable on grass. I was in control of the match the whole time." Sabatini, ranked in the top ten for five years, is still looking for her first Grand Slam singles crown.

Tanvier, ranked 113, was a third-round loser at Wimbledon for the fourth consecutive year. In nine trips to the tournament, she never has advanced past the round of 16.

In other matches involving seeded players, No. 7 Katerina Maleeva downed Ann Devries of Belgium 6-2, 6-0, No. 11 Natalia Zvereva outplayed American Gretchen Magers 2-6, 6-2, 6-4, and No. 14 Judith Wiesner downed Peru's Laura Gildemeister 6-2, 7-6 (7-5).

American Jim Grabb, who upset fifth seed Andres Gomez in the first round, lost to Christian Bergstrom of Sweden, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 6-2. Alex Antonitsch of Austria, who ousted No. 7 Henri Leconte in the second round, advanced with a 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) triumph over David Pate of the U.S.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 30) UPI - A Foreign Ministry official hinted Saturday that the United States has not lost any chances to improve relations with Iran and that the door is still open if it is willing to send more aid to earthquake victims.

The official, believed to have said earlier in the week that the United States had missed its chance to improve the position of western hostages in Lebanon because it did not respond as generously as other countries to the plea for earthquake aid, told United Press International Saturday that all opportunities for rapproachment have not been lost.

"We welcome all aid on a humanitarian level," said the official, who did not want to be identified when asked about the earlier statement. As if in response, the AmeriCare Foundation of the United States airlifted a second shipment of disaster relief supplies to Iran Saturday afternoon.

A Boeing 707 cargo plane with 68,000 pounds of supplies valued at $1.2 million took off from Bradley International Airport in Winsor Locks, Conn., an airport official said. Nine AmeriCare workers were also on board.

The cargo included medicines and medical supplies, bales of clothing, kerosene lamps, wheelchairs, 10,000 pounds of rice, folding stretchers, orthopedic supplies, baby food, vitamins, food, and clothing from Connecticut's Iranian community, as well as other supplies, said William S. Post, AmeriCare's comptroller.

A week ago, AmeriCare flew 85,000 pounds of disaster supplies to the quake stricken area of Iran. AmeriCares was the first humanitarian aid organization to begin relief efforts after the quake struck Iran June 21, and it was first to aid victims of the December 1988 earthquake in Soviet Armenia, said Post. He said AmeriCare would likely send more relief to Iran.

According to reports by the state-owned Islamic Republic News Agency, other aid also was continuing to flow into Iranian relief organizations for distribution to the stricken areas during the weekend.

INRA also reported that while strong aftershocks were continuing, the number was declining, an indication the situation was slowly returning to normal. Most of the aftershocks were around an area 120 miles from Tehran, the Geophysics Center of Tehran University said.

INRA said the supply of drinking water had been restored in about 25 villages in the region of the quake and technicians were repairing electrical installations. Sanitation facilities also were slowly being brought back to normal in the region of the quake, officials said.

Reports from Roudbar, possibly the hardest-hit city, said more than 90 percent of the ricefields in the northern province of Gilan were being brought back to normal. At least 50,000 people died and three times as many were injured in the massive quake and hundreds of thousands are homeless.

Some 86 countries from Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Americas sent relief aid in 174 planeloads to Iran, while the nearby Soviet Union and Turkey sent in convoys of trucks with relief supplies. The United States sent medicine and other supplies believed worth several hundred thousand dollars, said to be far less than other countries.

"At this critical stage of reconstruction we are not specifically asking for long-term commitment, but our existing need for the re-housing of victims includes resistant wood for construction, pre-fabricated homes, temporary emergency shelters, and heavy machinery like loaders, bulldozers and trucks for mixing concrete," the official said.

"Of course the cost of the projects will be tremendous, so any aid is welcome," he said. "Then, the implication that doors have been closed or opportunities missed, cannot be correct."

The official then asked the reporter to describe the response in America to Thursday's statement that U.S. aid was meager in comparison to other countries, indicating Tehran was still waiting for a reaction to the charge.

"Any foreign aid should be seen within the context of people helping people, but in Tehran as well as in Washington, gestures of this kind affect policy," a diplomatic source said Friday. "Consequently the quicker the U.S. response, the quicker would be the result at this end," the diplomat said.

Relations between the U.S. and Iran have been icy since the Iranian revolution in 1979 that overthrew the pro-American shah and resulted in the takeover of the U.S. Embassy and the capture of its staff. Some of the hostages were repatriated in a few weeks but 52 of them remained captive for 444 days until their release Jan. 20, 1981, moments after Ronald Reagan was inaugurated to succeed Jimmy Carter as president.

Tehran is believed to have great influence over fundamentalist Islamic groups that are believed to hold six Americans and other westerners hostage in Lebanon.

(JUNE 30) UPI - Firefighters in California expect to surround a 49-hundred-acre wildfire in the canyons above Santa Barbara that's Officials in Zambia say radio reports of a military coup are a hoax. Authorities arrested an army lieutenant who single-handedly seized the national radio station and announced the bogus coup. The broadcast said the military had taken over the country in the wake of three days of rioting earlier this week over price increases. 30 people were killed in the riots.

Rescue teams in Alaska found a missing sightseeing plane on a mountainside last night after a five-day search. Officials say a rescue team would be dropped as close as possible during the weekend.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (JUNE 30) UPI - Rebels raked military posts on the northern edge of San Salvador with gunfire and mortars, but no casualties were reported, military officials said Saturday.

The attacks, launched Friday night against the National Guard of Cuidad Delgado and the Fifth Army Brigade, lasted two or three hours. An army official said about 100 guerillas were believed to have been involved.

The attacks by rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, known by their Spanish initials FMLN, were the strongest in the San Salvador district since the rebel's nationwide offensive last November. They also came less than a week after government and rebel representatives ended a second round of inconclusive peace talks.

Salvadoran Red Cross spokesman Carlos Mendoza told United Press International that two special units were dispatched to the scene of the attacks. "We were called by civilians in the area, but there were no wounded," Mendoza said.

The Armed Forces Press Committee minimized the impact of the rebel attacks but said re-enforcements were brought in from other zones. " ... There were no deaths or wounded in either camp, and there no were no civilian losses," an army spokesman said.

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA (JUNE 30) UPI - A series of moderately strong earthquakes struck the central part of Costa Rica Saturday, causing some alarm but only minor damage, authorities said.

Bruce Presgrave, a geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the strongest of the temblors struck at 8:51 a.m. and measured 4.6 on the open-ended Richter scale. Smaller temblors continued throughout the afternoon.

The quakes broke windows, cracked walls and disrupted telephone service in downtown San Jose and in Puriscal, 27 miles west of the capital, where the strongest quake was centered. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

The national seismological system said the strength of all the quakes had not been determined, but the epicenter of the first temblor was located five miles below the ground near Puriscal.

Puriscal has suffered frequent seismic activity since March 25 because a local fault has been shifting. Authorities recently evacuated part of the population that had been left homeless after hundreds of homes were damaged by the quakes. Presgrave said it was not unusual for the Central American region to experience a series of minor quakes, known as a swarm.

FLORENCE, ITALY (JUNE 30) UPI - World Champion Argentina overcame Yugoslavia 3-2 in a penalty decider to reach the World Cup semifinals Saturday after the teams had drawn 0-0 at the end of extra time.

Diego Maradona and Pedro Troglio missed penalties for Argentina, but conversions from Jose Serrizuela, Jorge Burruchaga, and Gustavo Dezotti lifted Argentina to victory and a place in the semifinals. But they made hard work of getting there.

Yugoslavia had Refik Sabanadzovic sent off after only 31 minutes of a match played in sweltering heat. But Argentina failed to get the better of a hard-battling opponent. Yugoslavia would have won if it had shown more compusure in front of goal, but it too often wasted the final pass.

Argentina had the ball in the net three minutes from the end of extra time but the goal, scored by Burruchaga, was disallowed by Swiss referee Kurt Roethlisberger for handball.

The ruling provoked a wild scene near the Yugoslav dugout, with Maradona rushing over to the opposition's bench, shouting abuse and pointing at the Yugoslav substitutes.

The penalty shoot-out began with Serrizuela sending Tomislav Ivkovic the wrong way with the first penalty to put Argentina 1-0 up. Although Argentina's goalkeeper, Sergio Goycoechea, also went the wrong way, Dragan Stojkovic's shot hit the crossbar.

Burruchaga sent Ivkovic the wrong way to put Argentina 2-0 ahead before Robert Prosinecki made it 2-1. Maradona scuffed his penalty with his left foot and Ivkovic had a relatively easy save.

Dejan Savicevic made it 2-2, then Troglio hit a post with his right foot penalty, giving Yugoslavia the iniative. But Dragoljub Brnovic took a weak shot that Goycoechea saved easily.

Gustavo Dezotti put Argentina back in front at 3-2, and Faruk Hadzibegic's shot, which was saved by the goalkeeper diving to his left, put Argentina through.

There was more excitement in extra time than there had been in the previous 90 minutes. Troglio rounded off a move involving Caniggia, Maradona, and Ricardo Giusti with a diving header that Ivkovic did well to save at point blank range.

A minute later Savicevic fired over the bar at the other end from just yards out, and the same player again went close with a diving header that went wide. Dezotti was unlucky not to score for Argentina a minute into the second period when his right foot shot rose inches over the bar.

Juan Simon broke up a promising move by Yugoslavia when he hauled Stojkovic down to become the third Argentine player in the match booked for the same offense on the Yugoslav No.10. Troglio had been booked for a foul on Predrag Spasic. With three minutes to play Giusti found Maradona in a central scoring position, but Maradona fired lamely into the goalkeeper's arms.

Yugoslavia was reduced to ten men after 31 minutes when Sabanadzovic was sent off for tripping Maradona. He had been booked six minutes previously for not retreating ten meters at a free kick. Referee Roethlisberger first showed him the yellow card for the trip, then the red card.

Serrizuela, who missed Argentina's second round game against Brazil

because he had accumulated two bookings, had his name taken again by the refereee after 20 minutes for pulling Stojkovic's shirt.

Jorge Olarticoechea became the second Argentine booked when he tripped Stojkovic in the 43rd minute. Troglio was booked in the 63rd minute for tripping Spasic, 11 minutes after coming on as substitute for Olarticoechea.

Yugoslavia had a chance in the 14th minute, but Davor Jozic failed to control a cross and blasted the ball high over the bar. In the 22nd minute Prosinecki rounded Julio Olarticoechea wide on the right of the Argentina penalty area, but wheeled away as his fierce right foot shot flashed across the goal.

Argentina came close to breaking the stalemate three minutes after halftime when Oscar Ruggeri rose to meet a Maradona freekick and saw his header bounce off the top of the bar.

In the 54th minute Yugoslavia should have scored. Stojkovic went past two defenders with a run on the right flank and centered perfectly for Safet Susic who only had the goalkeeper to beat.

But the 35-year-old veteran failed to control the ball first time and Goycoechea collected it safely. Seven minutes after that Dejan Savicevic replaced Susic and added some pace to the Yugoslav attack.

LONDON (JUNE 30) UPI - As one of the year's most important world environmental conferences stretched into overtime, a decision on whether India would join a treaty aimed at phasing out ozone-depleting chemicals appeared far from certain.

Pitted against each other Friday night were the United States and other developed nations, many of which have the technology and the money to create alternatives to ozone-threatening chlorofluorocarbons, and developing countries led by India's Environment Minister Maneka Gandhi.

There was no dispute that the man-made chemicals used in refrigeration, foams, and aerosols are gradually destroying the belts of ozone 20 miles above the Earth that block out cancer-causing ultraviolet light, thus increasing the threat of ecological disaster.

The disagreements lay in how quickly all parties at the conference would be able to adapt to the phasing out of CFCs by the year 2000, given that developed countries have distinct financial and technological advantages over countries such as India and China.

"Until almost the last minute on Friday night, I wasn't sure we would reach agreement. There was as much suspense as in a Hitchcock movie," said Mostafa K. Tolba, executive director of the United Nations Environment Program.

Gandhi fought hard with the West at the Montreal Protocol conference, saying: "You have made the mess, and now you can pay to clean it up." She and delegates from other developing nations wanted stronger promises of technological help so that they could shift toward manufacturing their own CFC substitutes.

Representatives from the United States and other delegations argued that unless India and China join the tightened 1987 Montreal Protocol treaty to phase out CFC production and consumption, the ozone layer could not be preserved. There could be no loopholes for developing nations to slip through if they could not adhere to its strict ozone-saving measures, they said.

Central to the dispute was the fact that India and China - holding a third of the world's population - have in recent years begun to step up production of CFCs. Gandhi said India has recently installed the CFC technology that had earlier enabled the West to create cheap and convenient air conditioning and refrigeration.

Throughout the afternoon, delegates said during breaks in the protracted, closed-door talks that they were fairly optimistic that China and India would agree to recommend their governments join the treaty.

"We've just about tied it all up, but the bow isn't yet on it," said William Reilly, head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency delegation before heading off to catch a plane.

The soft-spoken Gandhi, wearing a colorful sari that made her easily identifiable in the crowded conference lobby, attracted a virtual rugby scrum of journalists around her during her frequent passes through the lobby late in the day. She was surprised India was being called "obstructive" and repeatedly chided the West over its reluctance to concede to wording in the treaty.

After finally agreeing to redrafts of the treaty at about 10:30 p.m., both sides emerged with the unprecedented agreements they had sought. India and China agreed to recommend that their respective governments sign the Montreal Protocol, and 54 of the 59 signatories of the protocol agreed to phase out CFCs and other chemicals believed to be eating away at the ozone layer by the year 2000.

India won the concession that "if developing countries feel that insufficient financial assistance and-or transfer of technology threatens to endanger their ability to comply with the protocol's control provisions they will be able to discuss this issue with other parties so as to find a solution."

"This is a major step forward in environmental diplomacy," said Britain's Environment Secretary Chris Patten, who chaired the conference during its last three days.

Under the treaty leading up to the CFC phaseout, CFC production and consumption will be cut by 50 percent by 1995 and 85 percent by 1997, with a review of the reduction schedule in 1992.

A breakaway group of 14 countries pressed to bring the total phaseout date forward to 1997, but were blocked by the United States, Japan and the Soviet Union.

Ozone-depleting halons used in fire extinguishers will be phased out by 2000, except for essential safety uses, with an intermediate cut of 50 percent by 1995.

The conference also agreed to set up a $160 million international fund to assist developing nations in using alternatives to halons and CFCs. It will be increased by $40 million apiece for India and China when each country ratifies the protocol.

The United States has pledged to contribute $25 million to $40 million to the fund, to be administered by an executive committee of 14 nations, including seven industrialized countries and seven developing countries.

Signatory nations also agreed to phase out by 2040 CFC substitutes that damage ozone to a lesser degree, and to stop using the metal solvent methyl chloroform by the year 2005.

MOSCOW (JUNE 30) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev has restored Soviet citizenship to three well-known dissident writers exiled to the West in the 1970s, the official Tass news agency said Saturday.

Gorbachev's presidential order left in limbo the most famous living Soviet expatriate - novelist Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, the Nobel laureate whose possible return to his homeland has been a source of fervent speculation in the country for the past year.

"By decree of the president of the U.S.S.R., Soviet citizenship has been restored to Aleksandr Zinoviev, Vladimir Maximov and Zhores Medvedev - the authors of books for which they were forced to abandon their country," Tass said.

Since their expulsions, the careers of the exiled writers have flourished in three different countries - Zinoviev in West Germany, Maximov in France and Medvedev in Britain. There was no immediate reaction to the presidential order from the three men.

Medvedev, a biologist who gained international renown for his work in gerontology - the scientific study of the process of aging - was one of the first Soviet dissidents to be driven from his country in the decade during which the plight of human rights activists first captured world attention.

He was summoned to the Soviet Embassy in London and stripped of his citizenship in 1973, while on a one-year work assignment at a British laboratory. He had suffered several years of harassment for his publication of books exposing the government's control of Soviet scientific life.

Medvedev praised Gorbachev during a visit to the Soviet Union last July, saying, "I know of no one else in the country today who could do his job better than him."

Medvedev's twin brother, Roy Medvedev, is a well-known historian who was never exiled despite his dissident writings and active work in human rights. He is now a respected member of the Soviet Parliament.

Maximov was also traveling abroad when stripped of his citizenship in 1975 four years after his novel, "Seven Days of Creation", was smuggled from the Soviet Union and published in the West. The book depicts 50 years of growing disillusionment with Communist rule through the experiences of a working-class family.

Maximov, a senior editor for the influential Soviet literary journal "Oktyabr" before his fall from grace, now edits "Kontinent," the prominent Paris-based magazine read by thousands of Soviet emigres in Europe and the United States.

Zinovyev's two novels - "The Yawning Heights," which ridiculed the Soviet Union under the guise of an imaginary country, and "The Brilliant Future," which criticized the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, earned him expulsion in 1978 after their publication abroad. Zinovyev had been removed from his post as head of Moscow University's logics department two years before his exile.

Despite the latest move, Gorbachev has not indicated whether he plans similar action in regard to Solzhenitsyn, and the Vermont recluse has given no clue that he would return to the Soviet Union.

Solzhenitsyn's "The Gulag Archipelago," the mammoth indictment of dictator Josef Stalin's labor camps for which he won the Nobel Prize in 1970, has recently been published in his homeland.

The Soviet Parliament is considering a bill that would codify freedom of conscience and religious belief. The U.S. government has linked the measure's passage to increased trade benefits and economic aid.

The head of the Senate appropriations committee, Democratic Senator Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, said the oversight has ''seriously hurt the credibility of NASA.'' She added- qute- ''They've had so much time and money to get it right.'' There are reports that NASA decided NOT to use top-secret military testing equipment that could've detected the flaws.

As if NASA's setback with Hubble isn't enough, agency managers have basically grounded the shuttle fleet because of a fuel leak discovered aboard Atlantis. It's similar to the leak that grounded the shuttle Columbia last month. NASA says it will take at least two weeks to determine the cause of the leak and repair it. The delay could NOT come at a worse time as NASA is hoping to stay on schedule for a high-priority October flight by the shuttle Discovery.

(JUNE 30) UPI - Lithuanian President Landsbergis predicts Moscow will end its blockade of vital goods to the republic now that lawmakers have imposed a 100-day moratorium on a declaration of independence. Soviet President Gorbachev has said there would be NO easing of economic sanctions or negotiations unless Lithuania suspended the document.

China's Communist Party leader says political reform will continue in China but he warns it will be aimed at strengthening the communist leadership. In a published speech carried by the official Chinese news agency, the party boss rules out any Western-style democratic change such as a multi-party system. He did acknowledge government corruption and self-interest has tainted the party's reputation.

A New York federal appeals court has reversed the extortion and conspiracy convictions of former Congressman Robert Garcia and his wife. The couple was convicted last year for their alleged involvement in the Wedtech scandal. The appeals court says the evidence was improperly presented to the jury. This clears the way for a new trial. Garcia, a Bronx Democrat, and his wife each were sentenced to three years in prison.

There's a fuss brewing concerning the newly crowned Miss Washington. Some people say Lynnae Thurik should be disqualified because she lived in Lake Oswego, Oregon, and worked for a company based in Oregon. She even competed and finished as third runner up in the 1989 Miss Oregon pageant. The executive director of the Miss Washington Pageant, says 26-year-old Thurik qualified in both states because she lived in Oregon but works at least 20 hours a week in Washington.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (JUNE 30) UPI - Queen Elizabeth II Saturday opened a military museum in western Canada before flying to Ottawa, the capital, for a speech marking the country's 123rd birthday and a possible protest over a side visit to the French-speaking province of Quebec. The British monarch was nearing the end of a five-day visit highlighted by the observance Sunday of Canada Day.

The queen's trip began almost immediately after the collapse a week ago of a constitutional amendment aimed at preventing Quebec's secession. She is expected to address the country's unity crisis during a speech Sunday on Parliament Hill in Ottawa.

The queen is also scheduled to make a 30-minute visit to a children's park in Hull, Quebec, across the river from Ottawa. Security for the Quebec visit will be extraordinarily tight since local Quebec politicians said they would protest the visit.

Most of Quebec's anger toward Britain and the royal family dates to 1760, when French forces were defeated on the Plains of Abraham, now Quebec City by the British.

Although successive British governors sent to Quebec sympathized with the French and fought against their assimilation, Quebecers have never forgotten the humiliation of their defeat.

On Saturday, the queen lit an eternal flame to open a $5.7 million military museum in Calgary. The museum houses collections of four regiments dating back to the early 1900s that played a key role in the two world wars.

The queen, who is recognized in the constitution as commander-in-chief of Canada's armed forces, was flying to Ottawa late Saturday after reviewing Calgary-based troops.

Organizers of the royal tour said earlier this week the queen would not become involved in Canada's internal politics unless she was advised to do so by Canadian government officials.

In a dramatic departure from tradition, and apparently on the insistence of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, the queen in an after-dinner speech late Friday expressed deep concern and anxiety over the country's political turmoil.

"When Canada has faced political stresses and strains, or the threat of internal divisions, I have followed events with anxiety and deep concern and the prayers and hopes that those problems can be resolved," she said. The queen said also she hoped her presence in Canada would be a reminder of times past and "encouragement to look towards a secure and happy future."

But the monarch's one-day visit to eastern Canada is likely to add to hostilities between Quebec and English-speaking Canada. Local members of the separatist Parti Quebecois, the main opposition party in the Quebec legislature, said they would protest the visit by wrapping themselves in the Quebec flag and showing their backs to the queen.

The anticipated protests recall an earlier visit in 1964, at the height of the independence movement, when the Liberal administration ignored risks and insisted the queen carry out a planned trip to Quebec City. The visit, known as the "Night of the Truncheons," was accompanied by rioting and bombings and extreme security precautions were required to protect the monarch.

The main purpose of the queen's current visit was to have been to preside over Quebec's signing of the 1982 constitution. Quebec refused to sign the constitution on grounds it did not recognize the province's French-speaking people as a distinct society. Quebec agreed to the document on condition the federal government and all ten provinces approved the constitutional amendment. When the amendment failed, after Newfoundland and Manitoba refused to vote on it, Quebec said it would seek greater autonomy.

Quebec City and several smaller communities have canceled Canada Day celebrations because of anger toward the rest of Canada and the danger of riots.

On Friday, Canada's native Indian leaders, left out of recent constitutional talks, sought reassurances from the queen of their right to self-government. The so-called Treaty Seven nations, which included several Stoney and Blackfoot Indian bands and the Sarcee Nation, presented the monarch with a petition signed by native Indians.

The petition asks the queen to reaffirm their right to self-government and to use her influence on Canada's political leaders to have aboriginals recognized as a distinct society in the constitution.

"She said she would take it and read it later. She will study it," Sarcee Chief Roy Whitney said after meeting with the queen. Whitney also said he was told by the federal government's Office of Protocol that the queen would address the natives' concerns when she returns to Britain.

In 1887, 20 years after Canada was established as a confederation, Canadian, British and Indian representatives signed the Treaty Seven acknowledging the natives' right to self government. But those rights never materialized because the federal government took jurisdiction over criminal and justice systems that had been established by the natives prior to the treaty being signed.

MOSCOW (JUNE 30) UPI - The Soviet Union lifted its ten-week oil blockade of Lithuania Saturday, a day after the Baltic republic met Moscow's demand for a moratorium on its independence declaration.

Lithuanian government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus said crude oil started flowing through a Soviet pipeline to the republic's only refinery at 5:35 p.m. Saturday, less than 24 hours after the republican Parliament approved the moratorium. "Our prime minister received a phone call from Moscow saying we would be receiving oil, and it looks like that's happened," Dapkus said.

President Mikhail Gorbachev cut off all oil and most natural gas and other supplies of raw materials to Lithuania in mid-April in an attempt to force the Baltic republic to rescind its March 11 declaration of independence.

In past weeks, Gorbachev softened his stand, saying if the Lithuanian Parliament declared a temporary moratorium on the declaration he would lift the blockade and agree to negotiations on the republic's desire to secede.

After two days of emotional debate, the Parliament in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius passed a compromise resolution Friday to declare a 100-day moratorium on the independence declaration, effective once negotiations on secession begin. No date has been set for the negotiations.

Dapkus said Lithuania would be receiving about 20,000 tons of oil a day, or half of what the republic received before the blockade, until the oil refinery can resume functioning at its normal levels.

The blockade forced Lithuania to close the refinery and at least a half-dozen other businesses because of a lack of fuel, and dozens of enterprises were unable to operate at full capacity. About 40,000 workers were laid off because of the embargo. Dapkus said it would be some time before the republic could tell if the sanctions have been totally lifted.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, whose 11th-hour support for the independence freeze proved decisive Friday, flew to Tallinn, Estonia, after the vote to report on the action to leaders of the other two Baltic republics, which have also declared independence.

Landsbergis said Friday that the moratorium was just an intermediate step. "The real tension and crisis is not now, it is coming," he said. "It will begin when we come closer to the negotiating table."

Lithuanian officials said it was unclear when actual negotiations may begin, and they expect a preliminary period of "talks about talks" to set the agenda for the negotiations.

Gorbachev has said he will try to persuade Lithuania to remain a part of the Soviet Union during the negotiations, but officials in the republic say they will insist on working out a plan for secession.

OSLO, Norway (JULY 1) UPI - About 4,000 Norwegian North Sea oil and gas field workers were set to strike Saturday night after negotiations on a new wage agreement collapsed.

The workers are members of the Workers Collective Union, the largest trade union in the area.

A walkout would stop all production in the Norwegian oil and gas-fields in the North Sea.

The strike, set for midnight, would cost Norway some $30 million a day.

''That is 25 percent of our total income and the situation is extremely serious,'' commented Johan Jakobsen, the regional minister in charge of cities who is filling in for Prime Minister Jan P. Syse during his summer vacation.

The workers handle transportation to the platforms as well as some of the production and catering. A strike would block the production for all 12,000 oilworkers on the Norwegian platforms.

About 1,000 workers were expected to be locked out by the employers because of the strike.

Jakobsen said the conflict would be discussed at a government meeting on Monday, but would not say whether the government would force the workers back to the platforms.

The Norwegian government has on six occasions in the past 10 years forced members from the Workers Collective Union back to work with legal measures.

It last happened in 1986 when the workers had been on a strike for three weeks, which cost Norway about $300 million.

''I will inform the government about the situation and the consequences of the conflict for the country,'' Jacobsen said. ''But I would like to underline that the government has attempted to let the parties on the labor market take responsibility for their own negotiations.''

ROME (JULY 1) UPI - Italy's new striking sensation Salvatore Schillaci scored his fourth goal of the World Cup tournament Saturday night to lift the Italians to a 1-0 victory over Ireland and a berth in the semifinals.

Italy, which has yet to surrender a goal in the finals, plays Argentina Tuesday in the semifinals.

Schillaci pounced on a loose ball after Irish goal keeper Pat Bonner deflected a shot by midfielder Roberto Donadoni. Schillaci drilled in the rebound in the 37th minute.

Ireland's best scoring chance of the first half came in the 26th minute when Paul McGrath sent in a pass from the left side to towering Niall Quinn, whose header over the Italian defense was saved by diving keeper Walter Zenga.

The second half was dull as Italy sat on its lead and Ireland struggled in vain against the Italian defense. Italy has not given up a goal in 913 minutes, dating to last Oct. 15 against Brazil.

Schillaci came close to scoring eight minutes into the second half when his shot eluded Bonner but struck the crossbar and bounced out.

In the 78th minute, Italian substitute Aldo Serena headed just high and wide after a pass from Roberto Donadoni. Bonner was called upon to make another save from Serena in the 83rd minute, when he rushed off his line to block the ball with his feet.

Schillaci had a goal disallowed for offside in the 89th minute, and when Ireland were unable to do anything constructive with a freekick a minute later, the World Cup dream was all over for the boys in green.

The only yellow card of the match was collected by Luigi De Agostini, for an overly aggressive tackle.

PORTLAND, OR (JULY 1) UPI - The trial of Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry on drug and perjury charges is well under way, and it might be the biggest marketing push ever for Oregon fruit growers' Marionberry jam.

Gary Walls, president of Trailblazer Fruit Products of Portland, said East Coast visitors at the city's annual Rose Festival were passing up syrups and other Oregon products for the jam, saying ''We only want jam. Our mayor's in a jam.''

A Portland elementary school teacher caught on to the idea, and has raised $400 for her English-as-a-second-language students' travel fund with her own version of the spread.

Lucretta Tursi bought five cases of the state's finest, slapped on labels reading ''The Mayor's in a Jam... Oregon Marion Berry jam, that is!'' and took them to a teacher's conference in the nation's capital. The idea caught on so fast, she sold every jar and is still filling orders by mail.

A Washington, D.C., store, which originally turned her down, saying the product was ''too political,'' has since contacted her about a 500-to-1,000-case order.

But Tursi said she didn't know if she would keep going with the potent pun noting that she has summer classes starting soon.

Barry, 54, is on trial in a District of Columbia court. He is charged with three felony counts of perjury and 11 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and conspiracy.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (JULY 1) UPI - A young Soviet man hijacked a Tuplolev 154 airliner with 159 people aboard on a domestic flight Saturday, forced the plane to fly to Sweden and surrendered to police after landing in Stockholm, police said.

Police spokesman Lennart Pettersson said the 19-year-old Soviet hijacker was taken to Stockholm police headquarters for questioning.

He said the Aeroflot airliner with 152 passengers and seven crew members aboard was hijacked on a flight from Lvov in the Ukraine to Moscow late Saturday evening.

No one on the plane was injured during the hijacking, although it appeared the hijacker may have had a hand grenade, the police spokesman said.

''We don't know yet what kind of weapon he used, but there was a packet that was placed inside our bomb-proof equipment,'' Pettersson said.

The hijacker's only demands were to surrender to the Swedish police and to leave the plane through a specific exit, which delayed the ending by half an hour.

''He chose a door through which he wanted to leave the plane and refused to go any other way,'' Pettersson said. ''We had to find a stairway that fitted to that exit.''

Police initially thought it was four hijackers armed with hand grenades, but corrected that information after the single hijacker gave up.

The Arlanda airport, 25 miles outside Stockholm, was informed that a hijacked plane was on its way at 9:45 p.m. and saw the plane land half an hour later.

It was brought to a special landing lane and was surrounded by police, who made contact with the hijacker over the airplane's radio.

It was the second time in three weeks that a Soviet plane was hijacked and forced to fly to Sweden. Two other Soviet airliners have been hijacked to Finland in recent weeks.

The 17-year-old hijacker of the earlier incident, Dimitriy Semyonov, risks a trial in Sweden and expulsion to the Soviet Union for his hijacking in June.

NEW YORK (JULY 1) UPI - Imelda Marcos and Adnan Khashoggi, sitting through the third day of deliberations Saturday in their three-month federal trial had at least one thing in common besides the charges against them: prayer.

Marcos has her Roman Catholic prayer books and religious tracts at the defense table in the courtroom. Khashoggi keeps a book-marked copy of the Koran close at hand.

The sequestered jury of seven women and five men ended their day at 6:40 p.m. when they begged off from hearing more testimony, and were scheduled to resume deliberations at 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

Marcos, 60, is charged with committing fraud and with obstructing justice by plotting with her husband, ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos to divert more than $200 million stolen from their homeland's treasury into real estate and art investments in New York and around the world. She turns 61 Monday.

Khashoggi, 53, is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud by helping the Marcoses conceal the purchase of four Manhattan skyscrapers.

The former Philippine first lady has kept a rosary in hand throughout the trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, but recently has also frequently been seen in her seat at the defense table reading religious tracts or prayer books.

She also goes to St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church adjacent to the Foley Square courthouse and did so Saturday, followed by cameramen.

Asked how she spends her time during deliberations, Marcos smiled and said softly, ''Just praying.'' Her lawyer, Gerry Spence, blocked further conversation, later explaining she was very weak.

Court officials have set aside an unoccupied room near U.S. District Judge John Keenan's third-floor courtroom for her to use during deliberations. Marcos has fallen ill three times during the trial, twice because of high blood pressure and once because of stomach trouble.

Marcos and her entourage use the side room to have their deli-catered lunch.

No such sanctuary was requested by Khashoggi nor was it provided.

The Saudi Arabian businesman and arms dealer - once considered one of the world's richest men - said he ''reads the mail and answers letters'' during deliberations. He also has a handsome copy of the Koran at his right hand, atop his courtroom table.

''I'm trying to use the time intelligently,'' the genial defendant said.

He welcomed ''as comforting'' the diligent manner in which the jury, headed up by a retired office manager who studied political science, has tackled its deliberations.

''It gives me continued confidence in the American jury system,'' he said. ''These people are not just statues. They are digging into their jobs and they are going to come up with a proper verdict.''

Saturday began with the re-reading of testimony of Rolando Gapud, former president of the Security Bank & Trust Co. in Manila.

Gapud testified during the trial that Marcos's late husband had secret holdings in a string of companies and that he had set up secret bank accounts for Marcos.

Gapud, testifying under immunity, also said Imelda Marcos used funds from the secret accounts and that the couple used more than $50 million from the accounts to buy real estate in New York.

(JUNE 30) UPI - The Kremlin made good on its promise today when it resumed the flow of oil to Lithuania. East and West Germany merge their economic systems tomorrow, and today East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere sought to calm any fears about the step. QUITO, Ecuador (JULY 1) UPI - The mother of a U.S. engineer released by Colombian kidnappers after his family paid a $60,000 ransom said Saturday she was so happy her son was safe she spent an hour by his bedside watching him breathe in his sleep.

Scott Heimdal, 27, was released unharmed Friday after 61 days in captivity when his family paid the ransom to suspected Colombian guerrillas, Ecuadoran police said. He was flown from Colombia to Quito Friday night and reunited with his mother and father, who had flown to Ecuador to negotiate with the kidnappers.

Marge Heimdal of Peoria, Ill., said her son looked thin and tired, but was in good health.

''I was in such disbelief that I laid at Scott's bedside while he was asleep for an hour just to watch him breathe,'' she said. ''For the first time in my life, I almost passed out when I first saw him.''

The reaction of her husband, Roy, was a mixture of tears, laughter and disbelief, she said.

U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Patricia Norman said the Heimdals, who were staying at an undisclosed location, would return to the United States, but they had not determined when.

Heimdal, an employee of a U.S. gold mining company, was kidnapped April 28 while riding in a motorized canoe on the San Miguel River along the Colombia-Ecuador border, sid Luis Lopez, minister of the interior.

He was found Friday in good health by Ecuadoran police in a boat on the same river.

Marge Heimdal said seeing her son alive was the happiest moment of her life, adding she could not believe the ordeal was over.

The Heimdals and Scott's Ecuadoran fiancee were expected to return to Peoria early in the week, but Marge Heimdal said her son was still being examined by doctors.

''I'm going to spend most of the afternoon shopping for new clothes for Scott,'' she said.

The family plans a major birthday celebration Thursday, when Scott turns 28, she said.

Originally, the kidnappers had asked for $1.2 million in ransom, but lowered their demand to $60,000, which the family reportedly raised.

In Peoria, Heimdal's sisters spent Saturday answering the phone to talk about the good news of their brother's release and planning a party for his return to central Illinois in time for his birthday.

''I'm so happy all the waiting and worrying is over,'' said Angie Heimdal, 21, a college student.

''He's safe and we're just happy he's coming home and it'll be over,'' said Linda Heimdal, 27, a schoolteacher.

Both sisters said they talked to their older brother by telephone in Quito.

''He said he was treated very well,'' Linda Heimdal said. ''He sounded good, joking around and everything, he sounded better than they (their parents) did.''

Angie Heimdal said her brother would recover well from his 61-day ordeal as a captive in the Amazon jungle.

''I don't think it will scar him,'' she said.

Linda Heimdal said her brother had no idea how central Illinois and the nation responded to his parents' appeal for help.

''He kept saying things like 'wow, you're kidding' when I told him about it,'' said Linda Heimdal, adding she and her sister will replace the worn yellow ribbons outside the family's rented bungalow with red, white and blue ribbons for Scott Heimdal's return home Tuesday or Wednesday in time for Independence Day.

''It's just wonderful news for the young man whose life was threatened and its wonderful news for the parents and two sisters,'' said Peoria Mayor Jim Maloof, a longtime family friend. ''They really showed such faith and courage and love in wanting to free their son and brother at a time when the State Department said they couldn't help them.''

Maloof said he was proud of his city for embracing the Heimdals and their plight.

NEW YORK (JULY 1) UPI - Jurors in the trial of John Vento, the third man to be tried in the 1989 slaying of a black teenager in Brooklyn, finished their sixth day of deliberations Saturday amid signs that a single count stands between them and a verdict in the racially charged case.

The jurors handed down a note shortly before 4 p.m. asking the judge to explain ''tumultuous behavior'' - two words of the riot charge that has bedeviled them since Monday as they considered the case involving the slaying last summer of Yusuf Hawkins, 16.

A visibly exasperated Supreme Court Justice Thaddeus Owens said, ''I can't tell you any more about 'tumultuous.'

''I've told you this at least a dozen times,'' he said, and after explaining it once more asked each juror individually whether they understood.

All twelve jurors said ''yes,'' and resumed deliberations until quitting for the day shortly after 7 p.m. They were scheduled to reconvene at 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

Vento, 21, faces murder and lesser charges for ''acting in concert'' with a gang of young white men who attacked Hawkins Aug. 23. Hawkins and three of his friends, also black, had gone to the Brooklyn borough's predominantly white Bensonhurst section to look at a used car. Vento is the third man to be tried in the killing.

Meanwhile, prosecutors denied rumors that defense lawyers had offered a guilty plea to the manslaughter charge.

''We are going to a verdict,'' said prosecutor Martin Hershey.

When the trial jury reconvened Saturday it asked for a re-reading of the riot charge against Vento for the eighth time, and Owens reluctantly complied.

''Can I assume I won't get any more notes on this?'' Owens asked when he finished.

''We won't swear to that,'' replied Leona Levin, a feisty Brooklyn union representative who is serving on the jury.

Jurors had sent a note to Owens late Friday asking for the legal explanation of the charge of riot, prompting the judge to say he was ''very distressed.''

''This is the seventh time you've asked for the elements of riot,'' he pointed out.

Owens then picked up a short stack of notes and thumbed through them to show how many requests the panel has made in their five days of deliberations.

After the judge read the explanation again, a juror asked if the prosecution had to prove that ''bats and guns, vile language, and derogatory statements'' were part of the attack in order for the jury to convict Vento of riot.

Owens replied if any one of those elements was present, jurors may vote guilty on that charge.

Prosecutors have urged jurors to convict Vento, noting the young man admitted to a grand jury that he helped round up the white mob.

Vento's lawyer, Gerald DiChiara, tried to prove Vento was not a racist and argued that the young man did not have murder on his mind when he joined up with Hawkins' attackers.

But first, the president took time out today to play golf near his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

He also plans to tackle briefing books on the NATO summit next Thursday and Friday in London, and on an economic summit he will host in Houston.

Bush summoned Defense Secretary Cheney, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell and Vice President Quayle for meetings in Maine on Monday and Tuesday.

The president will leave for London Wednesday night after family Fourth of July festivities.

The NATO summit will attempt to deal with changes in Europe, including German reunification, the break-up of the Warsaw Pact and the possible break-up of the Soviet Union.

The heads of the seven largest Western industrialized democracies will then meet for a summit July 9th through the 11th in Houston.

(JUNE 30) UPI - Firefighters are closing in on blazes in the Western part of the nation.

Fire officials say they have nearly contained a ferocious wildfire in the canyons near Santa Barbara, California... and progress also is reported on other major fire lines in California and the West.

Officials say the Santa Barbara fire is 90 percent contained and firefighters expect to fully surround the blaze later today.

The 49-hundred-acre fire has claimed one life and injured 40 people, destroyed at least 492 homes and other buildings, and caused about 240-Million dollars in damage.

President Bush... speaking from his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine... today declared parts of California major disaster areas and ordered federal aid to supplement state and local recovery efforts in fire-struck areas.

Police are still looking for the arsonist who set the fire.

The suspect will face an additional charge of murder in the death of Andrea Gurka... who was found dead in a creek bed behind her home in the hard-hit San Marcos Pass Road area.

The Moscow-Lithuanian pipeline is up and running again.

Lithuanian officials say Moscow turned on the tap earlier today, hours after the rebellious republic put a 100-day moratorium on its declaration of independence.

Lithuanian President Landsbergis... who yesterday lent his support to the independence freeze... said then that the move would persuade Soviet President Gorbachev to end the economic blockade.

Soviet officials had promised to lift the economic sanctions imposed 10 weeks ago if the Lithuanian Parliament suspended its declaration of independence.

Lithuanian spokeswoman Rita Dapkus says the republic requested one-thousand tons of oil per hour through pipelines frozen since the republic declared independence in March.

She said the amount was half what Lithuania had received before the blockade but said the idled oil plant has to work up to handling pre-blockade levels.

(JUNE 30) UPI - An Iranian official says it's NOT too late for the United States to improve relations with Iran, despite Washington's allegedly poor response following last week's earthquake.

The Foreign Ministry official is believed to have said earlier that the United States missed its chance to improve the position of western hostages in Lebanon. The official said the United States did NOT respond as generously as other countries.

As if on cue, the AmeriCares Foundation of the United States airlifted a second shipment of disaster relief supplies to Iran this afternoon.

A spokesman says AmeriCares was the first aid organization to begin relief efforts after the quake struck Iran on June 21st.

At least 50-thousand people died and hundreds of thousands are injured and homeless. Iran says drinking water and sanitation facilities are slowly being brought back to normal.

Iran also reports that while strong aftershocks are continuing, the number is declining... an indication that the situation is slowly returning to normal.

Sudan's military ruler today promised to hold a national conference to come up with a reformed government.

General Omar al-Bashir made the announcement in Khartoum on the first anniversary of his overthrow of a democratically elected prime minister.

Al-Bashir gave few details, saying only that the conference would unify Sudanese society and would reject past formulas for government... including individual dictatorship and one-party rule.

The general has made several pledges to alter his totalitarian government, but has NOT come through in the past. In March, the United States cut aid to Sudan for abolishing democratic freedoms.

Also today, the official Sudan News Agency says thousands of people took to the streets of Khartoum to demonstrate support for the government's re-introduction of traditional Islamic law.

At the same time, rebels in southern Sudan claimed a military victory in their seven-year-old civil war. The anti-Islamic rebels say they wiped out a government convoy.

(JUNE 30) UPI - Nelson Mandela arrived in Oakland, California, today for a triumphant end to his 12-day tour of the United States.

The mayors of Oakland and San Francisco greeted Mandela at Oakland's airport... where he arrived behind schedule by more than an hour.

The black South African leader was whisked off to address a crowd of 58-thousand at the Oakland Coliseum. Later, he's to attend a fund-raising reception and dinner.

Among those greeting him was Democratic Representative Ron Dellums of California... who in 1971 introduced a resolution asking Congress to divest U-S interests in South Africa because of its apartheid policies.

Mandela left Los Angeles after having raised an estimated two-Million dollars to help the African National Congress fight apartheid in South Africa.

More rioting in Zambia.

The latest outbreak was triggered by a disgruntled army lieutenant who took over a government radio station in Lusaka today and broadcast for more than three hours that he had staged a successful coup.

Police say they have arrested the man, whose hoax sent hundreds of excited civilians... already angry about price increases... into the streets of the riot-torn capital.

Police and soldiers fired live ammunition over the crowds, telling them to disperse. One group was reportedly driven out of a market with tear gas, but there are NO reports of casualties.

Zambia was wracked earlier in the week by three days of rioting prompted by the price increases. The violence left up to 30 people dead, 200 injured and 550 detained.

In response, the president called yesterday for an October national referendum on his leadership that could end his 26-year rule.

Ecuadorean police say the 27-year-old U-S engineer was released unharmed yesterday after 61 days in captivity when his family paid a ransom to suspected Colombian guerrillas.

He was flown from Colombia to Quito last night, where he was reunited with his mother and father, who had flown to Ecuador to pay the asking price of 60-thousand dollars to the kidnappers.

His mother... Marge Heimdal... says she was so happy to see her son that she almost passed out... and later spent an hour just watching him sleep.

U-S Embassy spokeswoman Patricia Norman says the Heimdals, who are staying at an undisclosed location, will return to their home in Peoria, Illinois, soon, but did NOT say exactly when.

Heimdal... an employee of a U-S gold mining company... was kidnapped three months ago while riding in a motorized canoe on the San Miguel River along the Colombia-Ecuador border.

Nelson Mandela... forced to cut short his visit on the last stop of his U-S tour... says he'll be coming back in a few months.

The South African black nationalist closed out his U-S visit today in Oakland, California, by making a suprise announcement. Mandela says he plans to return in October to visit with American Indians and help them in their struggles.

Mandela... forced by time constraints to cancel a meeting with Indian leaders... says he's concerned about American Indian rights. Indian leaders have said those conditions include poor education, poverty, inadequate health care and lack of economic opportunities in a white-dominated society.

(JUNE 30) UPI - Swedish authorities say a young Soviet man hijacked a Soviet airliner to Sweden and then surrendered to police after landing in Stockholm.

The Aeroflot airliner with 152 passengers and seven crew members was diverted on a flight from Lvov in the Ukraine to Moscow this evening.

A police spokesman says it appears the hijacker may have had a hand grenade, but NO one was injured. Police say the man had a packet they placed inside bomb-proof equipment.

The hijacker's only demands were to surrender to Swedish police and to leave the Tuplolev 154 plane through a specific exit. That delayed the ending of the hijacking drama by half an hour while a staircase was located to fit the exit.

Police initially thought four hijackers were involved.

It's the second time in three weeks that a Soviet plane was forced to fly to Sweden. Two other Soviet airliners were hijacked to Finland in recent weeks.

The Soviet-Lithuanian pipeline is on-line again.

The Soviet Union lifted its 10-week oil blockade of Lithuania today... one day after the Baltic republic temporarily suspended its declaration of independence.

Lithuanian government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus says the taps were turned on this morning... less than 24 hours after the moratorium was approved by the republic's Parliament.

Soviet President Gorbachev cut off all oil and most natural gas to Lithuania two-and-a-half months ago in an attempt to force Lithuania to rescind its March 11th declaration of independence. But he softened his stance in recent weeks... saying he would lift the embargo and agree to negotiations if the Baltic republic rescinded its independence bid.

Dapkus says Lithuania is receiving by request about 20-thousand tons of oil a day... about half of what the republic received before the blockade... until the oil refinery can get up to speed.

The blockade forced Lithuania to close the refinery and at least half-a-dozen other businesses because of lack of fuel. About 40-thousand workers were laid off due to the embargo.

Sullivan says black men must shift emphasis away from the stereotypes to the ''thriving three-quarters'' of blacks who have succeeded despite adversity. The health secretary urged black men to provide positive role models for black youth.

Sullivan says President Bush is pledging one-and-a-half-Million dollars in outreach grants to black neighborhoods. The money will help in job training, social service and anti-drug efforts.

But while new government programs will help, Sullivan says government alone cannot solve the problems facing black men.

AMMAN (JULY 1) - Supporters in Jordan of a leading Syrian-based Palestinian faction announced the formation of a political party Sunday.

Dib Marjeh, an MP and member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (FPLP), said the decision to form the party was made by the FPLP's central committee in Damascus last week.

He said the FPLP politburo would meet within 48 hours in the Syrian capital to decide whether to call the new political grouping the National Progressive Jordanian Party or the Labour Party.

The FPLP, headed by George Habash, is one of the main factions in the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Political parties have been banned in Jordan since 1957, but King Hussein in April promised a new national charter that would restore multi-party politics.

The charter is being drawn up by a 60-member committee and will be subject to a plebiscite.

Despite the ban, a first pro-Palestinian party, the Jordan's People Democratic Front, was formed a year ago by supporters of another Syrian-based faction, the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

An official announcement said the detainees were being freed to mark the upcoming Id el-Adha Islamic feast.

Waiting friends and relatives welcomed dozens of prisoners Sunday morning as they walked out of notorious prison camps like Ansar in the Gaza Strip, Keziot in the Negev desert and Megiddo in northern Israel.

An army spokeswoman said most of those released, who include boys under 14 years of age, were Palestinians. According to Arab sources most of them had only a few days left to serve in detention.

Before the release was announced, about 10,500 Arabs were in Israeli detention, according to army figures.

BERLIN (JULY 1) - After a wave of jubilation when monetary union came into effect at midnight Sunday, many East Germans have woken with reunification hangover and are withdrawing far fewer of their new West German Deutsch marks than had been anticipated.

Only a quarter of the 25 billion Deutsch marks (14.8 billion dollars) which the West German Bundesbank, or central bank, had deposited throughout East Germany has been withdrawn, West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel said.

In newspaper interviews Sunday, Mr. Waigel praised the "sense of responsibility" of East Germans who chose to leave their Deutsch marks in the bank.

Mr. Waigel said that the calm among East German citizens, who he characterized as "already as conscious of the necessities of monetary stability" as West Germans, led him to believe that there was no risk of inflation.

The surprising statistics were reflected in the somber faces of East Germans Sunday morning, uncertainty about the future tempering their joy as they calmly lined up outside banks here to exchange their old currency for Deutsch marks.

"There's no reason to celebrate now," said Francisca, as she waited under a light rain in the middle of a line 100 meters long. "We're going to take the children out for pizza in the West to mark the occasion, but that's all."

The sober atmospere provided a sharp contrast with the scene here at midnight Sunday (2200 GMT Saturday) when the opening of the West German Deutsch Bank branch caused a mob scene, with crowds surging around the bank.

Several people fainting as police tried to keep control. Other East Berliners climbed on car hoods, poured champagne, honked car horns and set off firecrackers.

COLOMBO (JULY 1) - A Tamil political party accused Sri Lankan forces on Sunday of causing widespread death and destruction in Tamil areas and announced that it was boycotting parliament in protest.

A joint letter written by nine MPs of the Eelavar Democratic Front (EDF) said that thousands had died since June 11, when the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) renewed its separatist campaign.

The letter, addressed to President Ranasinghe Premadasa, said that troops were killing innocent civilians, destroying their property and setting fire to houses in the Tamil-majority northeastern province.

"It is the innocent civilians who pay the highest price with their lives and the loss of their property (in this conflict)," it said.

The letter alleged that during repeated bombings of the northern town of Jaffna, public buildings, schools, private houses, food stores and even parts of the main hospital had been razed.

Colombo has admitted to bombing Jaffna in a bid to end the siege by the LTTE of a military garrison there, and that pilots had fired at some non-combatant targets by mistake.

"It is sickening to find ourselves in a situation where we are unable to help the very people whom we are supposed to represent in parliament," the EDF said, adding that its MPs would boycott the house this week in protest.

The EDF is the political wing of the Eelam Revolutionary Organisation of Students (EROS), a Tamil militant group known to be close to the LTTE. The EDF has 13 MPs in parliament, all elected from the northeast.

The letter also urged Colombo to initiate a cease-fire with the LTTE "and settle this (ethnic) problem through continued consultations and consensus."

The Sri Lankan government opened peace talks with the LTTE in April 1989. The talks have been shattered by renewed fighting in the Tamil areas.

BEIJING (JULY 1) - China and Indonesia agreed Sunday to accept nothing less than a total settlement to the Cambodian conflict, as Ali Alatas began the first visit to Beijing by an Indonesian foreign minister in 23 years.

Mr. Alatas, accompanied by a large delegation, arrived here via Hong Kong for talks aimed at paving the way to normalizing Sino-Indonesian relations that collapsed in acrimony in 1967.

But a Chinese Foreign Ministry source said Mr. Alatas's first meeting with Chinese counterpart Qian Qichen began with "an in-depth discussion" of the Cambodian issue.

"Both sides expressed the need for a comprehensive settlement," the source told reporters after the meeting.

"They emphasized that an impartial solution would not lead to a genuine solution of the Cambodian issue," he said.

The official New China News Agency (NCNA) quoted Mr. Qian as saying that China and Indonesia shared "many common points" on Cambodia. Any partial solution, he was quoted as saying, would "only leave many future problems."

Mr. Alatas and Mr. Qian are to continue their talks on Monday, when a protocol is to be signed regarding Indonesia's repayment of an 84 million dollar debt to China that was left in limbo in 1967.

China supports a tripartite Cambodian resistance movement, including the Khmer Rouge, in a protracted guerrilla war against a government in Phnom Penh that is backed by Vietnam.

Indonesia has kept up contacts with Hanoi on behalf of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), and has hosted a series of peace talks in Jakarta which have failed to end the 11-year war.

DUBLIN (JULY 1) - Nelson Mandela received a tumultuous welcome here Sunday and thanked the Irish people for their support during his 27 years in South African jails.

Mr. Mandela, 71, told reporters on his arrival at Dublin airport that he was grateful for the "wonderful support from the people of Ireland in the cause of our anti-apartheid struggle."

The deputy president of the African National Congress (ANC), accompanied by his wife Winnie, was given a red carpet welcome at the airport where he was greeted by Irish Foreign Minister Gerry Collins, members of the Irish Anti-Apartheid Movement and other dignitaries.

As he stepped out of the door of the private jet which brought him to Dublin from San Francisco, Mr. Mandela raised his arms in a victory salute while a crowd of several hundred spectators gathered on a terrace overlooking the VIP reception area broke into loud cheers.

Mr. Mandela and Mr. Collins met for about 10 minutes in the VIP lounge before the black leader emerged from the lounge and spoke briefly with supporters who were waving Irish and ANC flags and shouting "Viva Mandela."

Mr. Mandela praised the Irish government's opposition to immediate lifting of economic sanctions against Pretoria and said "we look forward to an exchange of ideas" on the situation in South Africa.

In an interview after Mr. Mandela's departure from the airport, Mr. Collins said he too looked forward to an "exchange of ideas."

He also said Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey and other senior officials would "advise" Mr. Mandela on the situation in Northern Ireland, where the Irish Republican Army (IRA) is fighting the British presence.

TEHERAN (JULY 1) - The Iranian government Sunday dismissed the idea of a link between the foreign aid received after last month's massive earthquake and efforts to free Western hostages in Lebanon.

Interior Minister Abdullah Nouri said the "time was not right" to discuss the hostages and that Teheran had done all it could to secure the release of the 15 Westerners believed held in Lebanon, mostly by pro-Iranian groups.

Mr. Nouri also ruled out any link between the earthquake and "Iran's political relations with other countries," expressing the hope that the aid "is not being determined on the basis of political considerations."

The Iranian government has accepted aid from all countries expect Israel and South Africa following the June 20 earthquake that killed an estimated 40,000 people and devastated the northwestern Gilan and Zanjan provinces.

Contributors to the relief effort have included several countries Iran considers hostile and with which it has no diplomatic ties, including Gulf War enemy Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, the United States and Britain.

The decision to accept aid has angered anti-Western hardliners who insist that the country should not lower its guard against outside influence.

Ten of the Western hostages have U.S. or British nationality, but Mr. Nouri emphasized that there was "no connection between the international assistance to earthquake victims and the issue of Western hostages in Lebanon."

"The humanitarian aspect of the aid has nothing to do with the hostage issue. The Iranian position on this issue has always been clear and Teheran has done all it could do," he said.

The hostage problem has been deadlocked since the release of two U.S. hostages, Robert Polhill and Frank Reed, in April.

Both Iran and Syria were thanked by the United States for securing the freedom of the two Americans, but Teheran's demands for a reciprocal gesture from Washington have been largely ignored.

Iran has threatened to end efforts to mediate with hostage-takers in Lebanon unless the United States pressures Israel and pro-Israeli Lebanese groups to free Palestinian and Shiite Moslem prisoners.

KHARTOUM (JULY 1) - Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni plans to mediate between the Sudanese Government and SPLA rebels in an attempt to end the civil war in southern Sudan, junta leader General Omar Hassan el-Beshir said here.

Gen. Beshir made the announcement after he held talks in Khartoum with Mr. Museveni, the official news agency SUNA said Sunday.

Mr. Museveni, who arrived Friday to attend celebrations marking the first anniversary of the junta's takeover in Khartoum, said before he left Saturday that he had discussed an Ethiopian peace initiative with Gen. Beshir.

Sudan and Ethiopia accuse each other of supporting armed opposition movements in their respective countries.

Mr. Museveni, who reiterated that Uganda was not aiding the Sudanese rebels, declined to reveal details of the Ethiopian initiative.

The SPLA has been fighting since 1983 to free mainly Christian and animist southern Sudan from domination by the Moslem majority in the north.

The Ethiopian initiative comes ahead of the annual Organisation of African Unity summit meeting, scheduled to be held in Addis Ababa July 9-11, and the Ugandan president said his talks with the Sudanese military leader also concerned preparations for that.

BOGOTA (JULY 1) - Officials here resumed extradition of drug suspects to the United States this weekend, delivering two Colombians to U.S. authorities, the government announced.

Luis Cabarcas Acosta and Jose Rafael Juliao Fernandez were taken under heavy guard Saturday from La Picota penitentiary south of here to the Eldorado international airport, where they were turned over to U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents.

A DEA airplane was to carry the suspects to Panama and then to the U.S. state of Florida.

Mr. Cabarcas is wanted in North Carolina on cocaine smuggling and money laundering charges. Mr. Juliao is wanted for trial in Florida, where he is a fugitive from justice in a drug trafficking case.

The men were among 15 so-called extraditables detained in La Picota until the government decides their fate.

Colombia last extradited a suspect March 28, when it sent alleged drug trafficker Luis Fernando Gutierrez to the United States.

Unofficial sources said the decision to extradite the two suspects this weekend underscored the government's resolve to continue pressuring the nation's powerful cocaine lords, who have unleashed a bloody campaign of bombings and assassinations of police.

The industrial city of Medellin, home to a cocaine cartel of the same name, has been particularly hit this year by the violence -- including a bombing Thursday which killed 14 people -- which has left dozens dead.

President Virgilio Barco launched an offensive against the drug cartels last August. He is to relinquish his office to President-elect Cesar Gaviria on August 7.

KENNEBUNKPORT, ME (JULY 1) - Black South African leader Nelson Mandela has thanked U.S. President George Bush for supporting the fight against apartheid, U.S. officials said here Sunday.

"Mr. Mandela thanked the president for his support for the struggle to end apartheid," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in this seaside community where Mr. Bush is spending the weekend.

Before the anti-apartheid activist left the United States for Ireland Saturday, Mr. Mandela telephoned Mr. Bush from California to express his gratitude, Mr. Fitzwater said.

At a June 25 meeting at the White House, Mr. Mandela publicly expressed his disagreement with Mr. Bush about the situation in South Africa -- mainly by rejecting Mr. Bush's request that the ANC renounce violence in the apartheid struggle.

Mr. Mandela's 12-day U.S. tour was part of an international campaign to urge governments to maintain sanctions against South Africa until Pretoria dismantled its system of apartheid.

The 71-year-old deputy president of the African National Congress (ANC) was released from a South African jail in February after some 27 years in detention for his fight against the segregationist policy.

In 1986, the U.S. Congress enacted trade sanctions against South Africa despite the protests of then-president Ronald Reagan.

WATTVILLE, South Africa (JULY 1) - Bitter black rivals the African National Congress (ANC) and the Zulu movement Inkatha held an "historic" meeting east of Johannesburg Sunday ahead of a potentially bloody strike.

Zulu leader Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi and ANC Deputy President Nelson Mandela have not met at national level, but local leaders in this black township convened Sunday's talks in a bid to head off an explosion of violence during Monday's ANC-backed one-day strike.

The protest has been called to urge government action against the civil war between the pro-ANC United Democratic Front (UDF) and Inkatha in Natal province, which has left more than 3,000 dead since late 1986.

But demands for the disarming of the KwaZulu police and for the arrest of warlords are seen as a direct attack on Inkatha -- Chief Buthelezi is both Chief Minister and Police Minister in KwaZulu tribal homeland.

Inkatha members in Wattville believe ANC supporters will attempt to intimidate them into staying away from work, and rumours are rife that Inkatha's Zulu migrant workers in mine hostels will attack townspeople.

Local Inkatha leader Khayalakke Buthelezi led some 30 miners into Sunday's talks with a 14-strong ANC team, including women and Indians, headed by Cleopas Nsibande.

Appealing for tolerance, Mr. Buthelezi said: "This meeting is to try to relieve conflict between black on black, because in the end we don't achieve anything by fighting each other, and our oppressors the Boers see us as stupid."

Mr. Nsibande said: "I believe that even if this meeting was called by minor people like myself and Mr. Buthelezi it is historic in the context of the struggle.

"We are hoping it will go beyond Wattville so that maybe it can become a lesson for all South Africa.

"Nelson Mandela stays in Johannesburg and Chief Buthelezi stays in Zululand, but me and Mr. Buthelezi, we are neighbours, we are the relatives who wake up shoulder to shoulder, eating together, working together like oxen, oppressed together."

JERUSALEM (JULY 1) - A bomb exploded late Sunday in the heart of west Jerusalem injuring three people, including a little girl, a hospital source said.

The bomb had been put in a mailbox in an alley leading to the Ben Hillel shopping street. Police sealed off the neighborhood to search for clues and arrested a score of Palestinians.

Police also dispersed a small group of Israelis who chanted anti-Arab slogans following the explosion.

Bomb-related incidents have increased in west Jerusalem in recent weeks.

On May 28, an Israeli was killed and nine others injured by a bomb blast in a west Jerusalem market. On June 25 a bomb was found and safely defused. The next day two Israelis were slightly hurt by another planted near a bus-stop.

SOFIA (JULY 1) - More than 5,000 demonstrators marched here Sunday to show their support for striking university students protesting against alleged irregularities in the country's elections last month.

The students, whose exams have been postponed because of the strike, have called on the authorities to publish reports of fraud they say took place during Bulgarian elections on June 10 and 17.

The polls, the first free elections since the end of pro-Soviet communist rule, were won by the Socialist Party, the former communists.

The students are demanding the resignation of the head of Bulgarian television, Pavel Pissarev, a Socialist Party member, and want international experts to study a television videotape that apparently compromises Bulgarian President Petar Mladenov.

The videotape shows Mr. Mladenov re-entering the National Assembly after having failed to appease a crowd of demonstrators last December and saying "send in the tanks."

Mr. Mladenov says the videotape, which was used by opposition parties during the electoral campaign, is a tampered montage.

LONDON (JULY 1) EFE - Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, left hospital Sunday where he had spent three days after breaking an arm while playing polo.

The prince left Cirencester hospital, in western England, with his right arm in a sling and accompanied by his wife, Princess Diana, who turned 29 years old Sunday.

Upon leaving the hospital, Prince Charles said he was feeling fine and that he was happy to be released in time to celebrate his wife's birthday.

The prince broke his right arm in two places after falling from his horse, Echo, during a match Thursday.

Doctors at the hospital said the prince would have to give up polo for a long while to allow the arm to heal completely.

OAKLAND, CA (JULY 1) UPI - Nelson Mandela ended a whirlwind anti-apartheid tour in the United States Saturday, vowing in a surprise announcement to return in October to visit with American Indians and help them in their struggles.

The pledge was the last major announcement of Mandela's 12-day U.S. trip before he boarded a private airplane for a trip to Dublin, where he was to meet with Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey and Irish anti-apartheid leaders.

Although he canceled appearances at two Oakland fund-raising events to meet his schedule, Mandela was warmly received at an Oakland Coliseum rally of some 60,000 people who stomped, waved flags and chanted, ''freedom, freedom.''

As he did at other stops on his tour, Mandela urged Americans to maintain pressure, including economic sanctions, on South African government to persuade it to dismantle the white-rule system of apartheid.

''Now more than ever, we call upon you to redouble your efforts,'' the black leader told the crowd at the coliseum. ''Our country demands democracy. Our country, which continues to bleed and suffer pain, needs democracy.

''Our country stands on the threshold of fundamental change but we still have a long road to travel before reaching our destination - freedom.''

In an apparent departure from his text, Mandela said he was upset that he was unable to meet with American Indian leaders who wanted to present him with robes and gifts on his arrival in Northern California. Mandela told the jammed rally at the coliseum that he was ''very disturbed'' over letters he received from Indians.

''I can assure the leaders of the Indian community that I will return in October with the permission of my organization which I am sure I will get '' Mandela said.

He said the letters he received since his arrival in the United States ''described the conditions of American Indians here and I assure you that they have left me very disturbed.''

''I will visit the Indian areas of this country and get a briefing from the Indian community. We will exchange views as to what I can do to help them in their struggle.''

Some American Indian leaders have compared the plight of their people on reservations to that of South African blacks - poor education, poverty, inadequate health care and being shut out from economic opportunities in a white-dominated society.

At a news conference prior to his departure, Mandela sidestepped any detailed comment on his plan to return to the United States.

''The Indian people have written to me and explained their position,'' he said. ''It is but natural I should respond to that by seeing them as I proposed to do.''

He thanked the American people for their support, including money. Tour organizers said they did not have an estimate of how much cash was collected during the eight-city tour, but Mandela said the sum ''exceeded our wildest expectations.''

During the Oakland rally, California Assembly Speaker Willie Brown exalted the crowd to wave dollar bills in the air and then pass them to the aisles where volunteers collected the money on behalf of the African National Congress. Rows of people passed large wads of cash toward the aisles as Brown half-jokingly urged them not to pocket the money.

Mandela's appearance at the Oakland rally was his last fund-raising event in his tour for the African National Congress's battle against apartheid. He canceled a scheduled appearance at a fundraising dinner because of a scheduling conflict with his Irish trip.

Mandela was introduced to the coliseum crowd by Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. who first petitioned Congress in 1971 to adopt legislation for divesting U.S. interests in South Africa.

Mandela praised the actions of San Francisco and Oakland longshoremen who in 1984 refused to unload a South African cattle ship, an action he said brought attention to the ANC's struggles and resulted in churches, universities and other groups taking anti-apartheid stances.

Mandela said that during the tour he and his wife, Winnie, were greeted with ''overwhelming friendship and solidarity.''

After three decades during which his nationalist party was illegal and he spent 27 years in prison in South Africa, Mandela said, the resolve for ending apartheid is stronger than ever.

SAN JOSE, CA (JULY 1) UPI - A moderate earthquake jiggled the San Jose area Saturday and was felt in several locations in the San Francisco Bay area but no damage or injuries were reported, officials said.

The temblor registered 4.0 on the Richter scale and was centered 8 miles northeast of downtown San Jose in the Alum Rock area at 5:36 p.m., the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park reported.

''It was on the Calaveras fault and is the latest in a series of light to moderate earthquakes that have occurred on the fault in the vicintiy of Alum Rock in the last two years,'' said Pat Jorganson of the USGS.

The Alum Rock area is in the city limits of San Jose and includes a state park.

The temblor, described as a single jolt by some residents, caused no serous damage or injuries.

''It shook our building pretty good but we received no reports of damage '' said a Santa Clara County sheriff's deputy in San Jose.

The U.S.G.S. in Golden, Colo., recorded the temblor at 3.8 on the Richter scale.

SANTA BARBARA, CA (JULY 1) UPI - Firefighters Saturday had nearly tamed a ferocious wildfire that consumed almost 500 buildings in the canyons above the Pacific Ocean, although that blaze and other major fires in the West were proving more stubborn than expected.

The 4,900-acre Santa Barbara fire claimed one life and injured 40 people, destroyed at least 492 structures and caused an estimated $240 million in damage. It was 95 percent contained Saturday evening and firefighters expected to have the fire essentially extinguished by Sunday night.

Predictions that the Santa Barbara fire and other major blazes in California and Arizona would be encircled Saturday proved overly optimistic.

From his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine, President Bush Saturday declared that a major disaster exists in California, and ordered federal aid to supplement state and local recovery efforts in fire-struck areas.

The president's action makes federal funding available to affected individuals and local governments in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara counties. Assistance can include temporary housing, grants, low-cost loans to cover uninsured property losses and other programs to help individuals and business owners recover from the effects of the disaster.

Federal funding also is available to eligible local governments on a cost-sharing basis for the repair or replacement of public facilities damaged by fire.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency is continuing damage surveys in other areas and ''additional counties may be added after the assessments are completed,'' a White House statement said.

A review by Santa Barbara County's building inspector determined the fire burned 438 houses, 28 apartment buildings, 13 businesses, 10 public buildings, $ne mobile home and two farm builidngs.

Authorities continued a search for the arsonist who set the fire and said that person also would face a murder charge in the death of Andrea Gurka, 37, who was found dead in a bone-dry creek bed behind her home in the hard-hit San Marcos Pass Road area.

Rewards totalling $120,000 were offered for the firebug.

The seige of fires in drought-scorched California and the West began Wednesday in the Los Angeles County city of Glendale, where 66 homes were damaged or destroyed in a fire that burned in hot wind and searing 100-degree temperatures. The fire caused an estimated $40 million damage. Like the Santa Barbara fire, it was blamed on an arsonist.

In all, eight people died in more than a dozen fires in the West. Six firefighters were killed in Arizona, where some 34,000 acres burned and 62 summer homes were lost.

A California inmate-firefighter died Friday from injuries suffered in another deliberately set fire in the town of Hemet near Palm Springs.

In western Colorado, a fire blackened 3,200 acres of brush and timber near Montrose. Containment of the lightning-caused blaze was not expected until the middle of next week.

In addition, a 400-acre blaze was burning near Colorado's Mesa Verde National Park.

In Texas, Forest Service spokeswoman Merle Glenn said a fire in the Guadalupe National Firest had grown to 5,058 acres Saturday and flames had entered McKittrick Canyon, an environmentally sensitive and hard-to-reach area.

The fire was more than 40 percent contained, but there were no predictions on when it would be surrounded.

In Arizona, higher humidity and extensive cloud cover allowed firefighters to made headway against a fire that killed the six firefighters in the Tonto National Forest. The 28,480-acre blaze, covering 44 square miles, was expected to be surrounded by Sunday evening.

Forest Service spokeswoman Joyce Hassell said the northeast corner of the fire was still active, delaying previous estimates of containment on Saturday.

About 800 people evacuated from summer homes in the area were allowed to return.

(JULY 1) UPI - Anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela concluded his 12-day U-S visit Saturday by telling a northern California rally it had to ''redouble'' its efforts to topple the system of racial segregation. The next stop for the 71-year-old African National Congress deputy president is Dublin, where he'll meet with Irish anti-apartheid groups.

East and West Germany have taken the most concrete step toward their eventual political re-unification. After midnight Saturday, East Germans started converting their currency at a 1-1 rate with West Germany's monetary unit. Along with the economic merger, the two countries have ended border controls.

The U-S Geological Survey in Golden, Colorado, says a moderate earthquake measuring three-point-eight on the Richter scale struck the San Francisco Bay Area Saturday evening. The temblor was centered eight miles northeast of downtown San Jose. The U-S-G-S says the shaker is the latest in a series of seismic activity in the area.

Environmentalists in Hong Kong are applauding new anti-pollution regulations enacted in the British colony Sunday. The initiative restricts the sulfur content in fuel consumed by factories in the colony- a move environmentalists say will reduce sulfur emissions in industrial areas by about 80 percent.

(JULY 1) UPI - More than 10-thousand Buddhists staged a silent march through Katmandu Saturday to demand Nepal's new constitution drop affiliation with any religion. It was the second time in eight days that Buddhists in the Himalayan country made a public appeal that the nation drop its official ties to the Hindu religion.

The spiritual leader of 250-Million Orthodox Christians is scheduled to kick off a tour of five U-S cities Monday. His All Holiness Dimitrios, archbishop of Constantinople, will stop in New York... The Navy Saturday commissioned the fifth ship in its ''improved'' Los Angeles class. Republican Representative Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida says vessels like the U-S-S Miami, the latest nuclear-powered fast-attack submarine, are needed to show the United States does NOT intend to drop its guard despite the thaw of global relations.

(JULY 1) UPI - The win streak is history - and just when the New York Mets were getting used to it.

''We all had started to feel that we were never going to lose,'' Mets first baseman Dave Magadan said Saturday after the Cincinnati Reds had denied New York a club-record 12th straight victory with a 7-4 come-from-behind triumph. ''Of course, we know that's not true, but we did have that feeling.''

The feeling lasted until the eighth inning when the Reds scored three times with a little help from their bench.

''You have to give a lot of the role players credit,'' Cincinnati catcher Joe Oliver said. ''Guys like Luis Quinones and Ron Oester, who came off the bench and got key hits.''

New York took a 4-3 lead into the eighth, when Jeff Musselman, 0-2, relieved starter David Cone. Musselman walked Paul O'Neill leading off, but got pinch hitter Billy Hatcher to force O'Neill at second.

That's when the key hits started.

Pinch-hitter Luis Quinones singled Hatcher to third, and Hatcher scored on Ron Oester's infield hit for a 4-4 tie. Wally Whitehurst replaced Musselman and surrendered a two-run double to left to Oliver.

''Just when uou think you can't be beaten things start to happen,'' Reds' Manager Lou Piniella said after seeing his club stop a three-game losing streak. ''It was a 25-man effort. It's not who starts, but who finishes the game and gets the job done.''

Reds reliever Norm Charlton, 6-1, got the job done, pitching 1 1-3 scoreless innings for the victory.

''Lou's right,'' said reliever Randy Myers, who worked the final two innings to earn his 15th save.''It was a total team effort to come from behind.''

For the Mets the job now becomes starting a new streak.

(JULY 1) UPI - Reaching one-hundred whether a birthday or a sought-after goal is a landmark worthy of celebration. But when Cleveland Indian righthander Doug Jones earned his 100th career save Saturday night, he put it into simple perspective.

''It's one more than 99,'' Jones said following the Indians 4-1 thrashing of the California Angels. ''It's nice to know I've been around that long.''

Jones pitched the final two innings for the landmark relief effort, his 22nd on the season.

The 33-year-old Covina, Calif. native spent nine years in the minors before he made it to the big leagues in 1986 with Cleveland. His first full major-league season was in 1988 when he had 37 saves. He saved 32 last year.

In five appearances dating to June 15, Jones had not saved a game, although he had a 4-0 mark in that span. But relievers are not supposed to get wins, they are supposed to preserve them, and 15 days is a long time between saves for Jones.

''That has nothing to do with it,'' Jones said of the save drought. ''It's going out and pitching and being effective. Sometimes you're more effective than others.''

A well-seasoned verteran, Jones' effectiveness as a reliever reflects his ability to handle late-inning pressure.

''He never seems to get rattled,'' said Tom Candiotti who went to 9-3 thanks in large part to fellow pitcher Jones. ''Even tonight, he had guys on first and third but he didn't get rattled. I think that's the greatest point Jones has is he doesn't lose his composure out there.''

Athletics 9, Blue Jays 4

At Toronto, Bob Welch scattered nine hits over 6 2-3 innings for his major league-leading 13th win and Dave Henderson drove in four runs to give the Oakland Athletics a victory. Welch, 13-2, allowed four earned runs while striking out five and walking one. Dave Stieb, 10-3, took the loss.

Yankees 10, White Sox 7

At Chicago, Rookie Jim Leyritz slugged his first two major league homers and four RBI in a 16-hit New York attack to shut-down the White Sox. Dave Righetti's 16th save allowed Jeff Robinson, 1-5, his first win despite giving up four hits and a run. Melido Perez fell to 6-7.

Orioles 6, Twins 0

At Minnesota, Bob Milacki pitched a three-hit shutout and Bill Ripkin drove in two runs night to lift the Baltimore Orioles to extend the Twins losing streak to four games. Milacki, 4-4, retired the final 15 batters he faced. Scott Erickson, 1-1, lost in his second major league start.

Tigers 5, Royals 3

At Kansas City, Cecil Fielder belted a two-run shot for his major-league leading 26th home run and Tony Phillips added a three-run homer powering the Detroit Tigers over the Royals. Edwin Nunez, 2-0, threw three innings of hitless relief and Mike Henneman pitched a scoreless ninth for his 17th save. Storm Davis, 2-6, gave up five runs and seven hits in a losing effort.

Mariners 6, Brewers 2

At Seattle, Jeffrey Leonard hit two home runs and drove in three runs to help the Seattle Mariners run their winning streak to four games. Right hander Eric Hanson, 8-6, hurled his first complete game of the season, scattering five hits while striking out six and walking none. Ted Higuera, 5-2, accepted the loss.

EAST BERLIN (JULY 1) UPI - East Germany left behind 40 years of socialism at midnight Saturday, discarding its currency and replacing it with the deutsche mark of capitalist neighbor West Germany.

The monetary union of East and West Germany, a key step toward the unification of the two German states separated since World War II, was accompanied by the elimination of state subsidies of many East German goods and an end to border controls between the two nations.

In East Berlin's bustling downtown Alexander Platz, East German citizens jostled to become the first to exchange their worthless ostmarks for western deutsche marks when a branch of the Deutsche Bank - West Germany's biggest - opened its doors for business at the stroke of midnight (6 p.m. EDT).

Champagne corks popped and fireworks exploded the moment the first customers wanting to cash in their East German savings for ''D-Marks'' - as the West German currency is called - were allowed inside the premises.

A crowd of 10,000 people who gathered outside the bank to witness the moment cheered.

Across the Alexander Platz - once the prewar heart of the German capital - East Germans were merrily throwing away handfuls of their now worthless small change, as others began singing the popular German refrain, ''Such a Day as Wonderful as This One.''

The square was filled with people. Car drivers hooted their horns. Elsewhere in the city East Germans celebrated by holding parties and ''dancing in the D-Mark.''

At 9 a.m. Sunday (3 a.m. EDT), 15,000 currency exchange centers opened their doors to the public throughout East Germany.

But in East Berlin, only a few appeared ready to brave heavy morning downpours to swap currencies. No more than a couple of dozen people could be seen outside each of the exchange centers.

The 25 billion deutsche marks needed to finance the currency union were dispatched to East Germany in armed convoys and stored in safes in the cellar of the former Communist Party building in Berlin.

East Germans were able to change their eastern marks at a favorable 1 to 1 rate for deutsche marks after midnight, but limits were set on the amount of cash that could be converted and many East Germans found themselves with surplus funds Saturday.

Romanian gypsies and other merchants peddled goods of every description in the square and street musicians performed for the shoppers, lending the shopping spree a festive air.

At the nearby Zentrum department store, shoppers thronged the clothing departments buying East German-made garments at vastly reduced prices.

But while most East Germans welcomed the introduction of the western deutsche mark, there were others who expressed fears of the cataclysmic shock to come.

For some East German businesses, the switch to capitalism will allow them to compete in western markets and sell coveted western goods.

But the change will spell hard times for other East German businesses that are ill-equipped to compete with western manufacturers. Economists say many East German businesses will be forced to close and estimate unemployment in the country of 16 million could reach 1 million by the fall.

At some gas stations Saturday, cars lined up around the block as consumers hurried to fill their tanks with relatively cheap fuel.

Despite the potential pitfalls, most East Germans seemed to view the future with guarded optimism.

Annette and Roger Wien, who live with their two sons in an apartment in the working-class East Berlin neighborhood of Prenzlauer Berg, have only a small bank account to switch into deutsche marks.

While her husband's job at the nearby cultural center seems safe, Annette Wien's employment at a small garment factory is tenuous. She fears the factory will close once an influx of western goods hits East German stores.

Although the couple voted for the Democratic Socialist Party, the successor to the Communist Party, in East Germany's first free elections in March, both want German unity as quickly as possible.

Also after midnight, travel became unrestricted between both halves of the once-divided Berlin as well as the whole of the East-West German border. For the first time since before the Berlin Wall was built in 1961, an underground train service will begin operating between East and West Berlin.

MANILA, Philippines (JULY 1) UPI - Communist guerrillas have kidnapped a U.S. Peace Corps volunteer in the central island of Negros, Philippines and U.S. officials said Sunday.

The officials said three guerrillas of the communist New People's Army kidnapped Timothy Swanson, 26, an agriculturalist from Cheyenne, Wyo., in his house in the village of Patag in the mountain municipality of Silay on June 13.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said American officials learned of the kidnapping Saturday while trying to contact Peace Corp volunteers to enforce Washington's decision Wednesday suspending the program in the Philippines because of intelligence information that guerrillas planned to kill or kidnap volunteers.

Schrager declined to disclose details, saying the matter was ''sensitive.''

He said Philippine officials had been informed of the kidnapping, had expressed concern and were giving full cooperation.

A Philippines' Agriculture Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the guerrillas told Swanson's Filipino wife, Merle, they were ''inviting'' the volunteer to the hills to talk, telling Seanson: ''It's nice there. It's peaceful.''

The official said Swanson never returned to his village, 300 miles south of Manila on the depressed sugar-producing island of Negros.

Five days later, Swanson sent a letter to his wife, a teacher, asking her not to report the kidnapping to authorities for fear of his life, and requesting clothing.

Swanson's wife has refused to talk about the incident, but has requested assistance from Philippine Roman Catholic Church authorities.

Swanson agrived in Negros two years ago and was married to the Philippine woman on May 29. The official said Swanson's parents attended the wedding.

Three U.S. Embassy officials arrived in Bacolod Sunday and met with Philippine military and civilian officials to discuss the kidnapping.

On May 29, guerrillas also kidnapped Japanese rural technician Fumio Mizuno in Murcia town, also in Negros. Negotiations were continuing for his release.

Washington announced Wednesday the suspension of the 29-year-old Peace Corps program in the Philippines, regarded as one of the agency's most successful missions overseas.

U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt received information June 22 that the volunteers might be the targets of attacks and quietly began recalling the volunteers to Manila.

He announced the recall on Tuesday and the volunteers began departing from the Philippijnes on Friday after a farewell reception hosted by President Corazon Aquino.

Philippine military and defense officials have expressed dismay that the embassy did not inform them in advance of the decision to withdraw the volunteers. They said they had been unaware of any threat against the volunteers.

Last May, two American airmen were killed outside the U.S. Clark Air Base north of Manila, bringing to 10 the number of U.S. nationals slain in politically motivated incidents over the past three years.

The 19,000-strong NPA, which has been battling the Manila government for 21 years, claimed responsibility for the slayings of the airmen, vowing to attack more Americans until the United States withdraws its forces from the Philippines.

The kidnapping of Swanson was the fifth in the Philippines involving an American since 1979. In the previous incidents, all the victims, including American missionary Lloyd Van Vactor, were released unharmed. Moslem separatist guerrillas were involved.

The most recent previous U.S. kidnapping victim was David Stiffler, 42, a Vietnam War veteran and writer of ethnic music, who was abducted on the southern island of Mindanad on July 30, 1988, by Moslem separatists. He was freed after 17 days.

Swanson was the first kidnap victim believed to have been taken by communist guerrillas.

(JULY 1) UPI - Firefighters battling a tenacious wildfire in Santa Barbara, California, say they should contain the fire by tomorrow night. Officials had predicted they'd have the destructive fire under control by Saturday night... but the flames proved too stubborn. So far, the blaze has killed one person and consumed nearly 500 buildings.

President Bush has declared Santa Barbara and Los Angeles counties major disaster areas. The move frees federal funds to assist people in the affected areas. In addition to several other Pacific fires, blazes have broken out in Arizona, Colorado and Texas. Officials say triple-digit temperatures are as much to blame as suspected arsonists.

Champagne poured freely and the honking of cars filled the air after midnight Saturday in East Berlin's downtown area. Celebrants filled Alexanderplatz to hail the most definite step yet toward German re-unification... the economic merger of the two Germanys. The procedure calls for East Germans to trade in their almost valueless currency at a one-to-one rate for West German money.

Organizers of the fund-raising tour by South African black nationalist Nelson Mandela have NO estimate how much money his 12-day U-S visit has added to anti-apartheid coffers. But before departing from Oakland, California, Saturday, Mandela commented that the sum went well beyond his ''wildest dreams.''

New York jurors are scheduled to resume deliberations Sunday morning in the trial of John Vento. The panel appears to be stymied by the charge of riot which Vento faces for his alleged role in the slaying of a black teen-ager last August. So far, jurors have asked the judge in the case to explain aspects of the charge eight times.

NEW YORK (JULY 1) UPI - Fifty detectives tracking the Zodiac killer are up against a weird individual who seems to enjoy taunting police as much as he does stalking victims.

The man who calls himself the Zodiac - and apparently patterned his savage attacks on defenseless victims on California's serial killer of the same name - has shot four people since March 8, fatally wounding one.

He has vowed to stalk and kill a person from each of the 12 astrological signs, and police believe he knew the signs of his four victims. He inscribed their zodiacal symbols on a series of taunting, cryptic notes.

Police say the gunman apparently questioned the latest victim about his astrological sign a few days before shooting him, but investigators were baffled as to how he learned his other victims' birth dates.

Detectives have turned to astrologers, astronomers and classical scholars in an effort to decipher the notes, which contain references to classical mythology, constellations and signs of the zodiac, police said.

Investigators on the special 50-detective task force set up to catch the killer do not believe he will strike again until July 26, the first Thursday of Leo, the next astrological period.

He has attacked only on Thursdays, in the early morning hours, striking at 21 or 42-day intervals. He stalked and shot his last victim, a 30-year-old homeless man sleeping on a bench in Central Park, June 21.

But detectives were taking no chances last Thursday, and police beefed up patrols in the park and on the Brooklyn-Queens border, where the other victims were attacked.

The gunman's third victim, Joseph Proce, 78, who was shot May 31, died last Sunday from his wounds.

Four of the shadowy killer's six notes were mailed to news organizations and police. Two of them were left at the scenes where he struck.

The scrawled notes, filled with misspellings and bad grammar, boast of the shootings and describe the victims.

One note, sent to police in November, months before the gunman first struck, warns that the ''Zodiac will spread fear,'' and mocks investigators with the challenge: ''(Y)ou are not good and will not get the Zodiac.''

Another says, ''The 12 sign (sic) will die when the belts of the heaven are seen.''

The victims have included a Scorpio, Gemini, Taurus and Cancer. Police believe Leo is next.

In a bizarre twist to the mystery, the gunman wrote in the November note, ''Taurus the first sign is dead.'' Proce was a Taurus and, though not the first victim, was the first to die.

Chief of Detectives Joseph Borrelli has warned New Yorkers not to discuss their birth date with strangers.

Mayor David Dinkins has offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer, and detectives said they were using a new computer system to analyze information and tips.

One possibility the police have ruled out is that the gunman is the same killer who terrorized the San Francisco area from 1966 to 1974 and claimed to have slain nearly 40 people. Police there believe he killed at least six. The crimes remain unsolved.

The gunman also claims in one note to be the San Francisco killer. But Robert Graysmith, who spent years writing ''Zodiac,'' a book about the California killings, was unequivocal.

''It's not the same guy,'' said Graysmith, who was shaken when he learned of Proce's death.

''I wrote a book to catch a killer, not inspire one,'' said Graysmith, who noted that the suspect in the New York shootings has been described as a black man in his 30s, while the California killer was white and now would be about 60.

BANGKOK, Thailand (JULY 1) UPI - Prime Minister Hun Sen, leader of the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian government, has called on resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk to set the date and place for Cambodian cease-fire talks as soon as possible.

''In my limited view, we cannot allow indecision and let this unique opportunity slip to have a cease-fire and restore peace to the motherland '' Hun Sen wrote in a letter broadcast Saturday night by Phnom Penh radio.

The three resistance groups, including the former ruling Khmer Rouge, have been battling for 10 years to unseat the Cambodian government, which was installed by Vietnam after it invaded Cambodia in 1978.

Hun Sen said he wanted Sihanouk, the acknowledged leader of the three-party resistance coalition, to set the date and place for a meeting of a joint ''Supreme National Council'' to work out how to implement the cease-fire agreement signed last month in Tokyo. Hun Sen said this should be done ''quickly.''

''This is a test for all Cambodians to see whether we can be united and reconciled in the supreme interest of the nation and the people,'' the letter said.

The vaguely-worded cease-fire agreement has had no impact on the fighting because the Khmer Rouge, the most powerful of the resistance group, has refused to abide by it.

The 12-member Council is supposed to convene by the end of July to work out the means of carrying out the cease-fire, but the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge have refused to nominate representatives to it. Other resistance factions have also appeared less than eager to go ahead with the meeting.

Hun Sen said Sihanouk should nominate two more representatives to take the place of the Khmer Rouge in a formula that gives six seats to the resistance and six to the Vietnamese-backed government.

Last week, the Khmer Rouge offered what it called a proposal for a comprehensive political settlement of the Cambodian problem.

The peace plan rejected the two-part formula agreed for the Council, insisting that all four Cambodian groups have equal representation not only in the Council, but in all the ministries of the government.

The Hun Sen government has repeatedly rejected the four-part idea because it would give separate recognition to the Khmer Rouge, who are blamed for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians during their 1975-1979 rule.

The Khmer Rouge, who carried out a radical communist revolution when in power, said the political settlement should result in ''a liberal democratic regime with many political parties, a parliament, and a free-market economy.''

The proposal said human rights would be fully guaranteed and the settlement should be supervised by a U.N. peace-keeping force.

NEW CANAAN, CT (JULY 1) UPI - A private relief group that has sent two planeloads of supplies to earthquake-ravaged Iran will likely send additional aid, officials say.

A Boeing 707 cargo plane carrying 68,000 pounds of supplies, valued at $1.2 million, left Saturday from Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks for Iran.

A week earlier, AmeriCares of New Canaan flew 85,000 pounds of disaster supplies to Iran, where an earthquake has left at least 50,000 people dead and thousands of others homeless.

William S. Post, comptroller of the foundation, said it will likely send more supplies to Iran.

''We're probably going to evaluate that (more shipments) next week when the people accompanying this shipment return,'' Post said. ''I'm sure that any disaster of this nature is going to become an ongoing program at AmeriCares,'' he said.

The latest shipment included medicine and medical supplies, bales of clothing, kerosene lamps, wheelchairs, rice, folding stretchers, food and clothing from Connecticut's Iranian community, and other supplies, Post said.

#90182u0330 07/01/1990 ~United Press International
BRUSSELS, Belgium (JULY 1) UPI - NATO heads of state meeting this week in London will seek to adapt the alliance to the past year's rapid changes in Europe to avoid its becoming a dinosauric relic.

The once-unchallenged linchpin of Western European security, founded amidst eyeball-to-eyeball Cold War confrontation, must convince skeptics that an Atlantic alliance retains a vital role in a new age of East-West harmony.

Four decades of now-obsolete military strategy face a surgeon's scalpel, if not a meat ax, at the summit of 16 NATO heads of state on Thursday and Friday.

Eisenhower-era doctrines like ''forward defense,'' based on repulsing a Soviet attack at the hem of the Iron Curtain, are as passe as pop art, while new buzzwords like ''pan-European security system'' are the latest rage.

Moreover, the alliance must forge a political role in a continent galvanized by the lightning-like democratization of Eastern Europe and collapse of the Warsaw Pact as a military threat.

''A political role for NATO is crucial to public support, especially in the United States,'' says a top alliance official. ''Otherwise, people rightly ask why billions of dollars are being spent for weapons when there is no longer a Soviet threat.''

A political face for NATO is also central to the West's efforts to win Soviet acceptance for a united Germany's membership in the alliance.

''The issue is not so much Germany in NATO, but what kind of NATO Germany will be in,'' says Gianni De Michelis, Italy's fun-loving foreign minister who has written a book on European discotheques.

Fierce defenders of NATO's continued vitality, particularly U.S. officials maintain the alliance is still critically necessary as the only organization linking North America with Europe in a common defense network.

''We all know what NATO has been: the most successful alliance of free nations in history,'' U.S. Secretary of State James Baker told his colleagues at last month's meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Scotland.

Others are not so sure the old transatlantic link is the only way to go.

Increasingly confident organizations like the European Community and 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, or CSCE, are barking at NATO's heels to take over alphabet-soup supremacy in the brand new Old World.

''The European Community should be responsible for its own defense,'' says British Lord Carrington, the former NATO secretary-general, who wants an EC defense alliance to also play a role in the Middle East.

The CSCE, which includes all of Europe except Albania, plus the United States and Canada, is planning a landmark summit in Paris this fall, which some are comparing in historical importance to the 1815 Congress of Vienna.

The NATO summit caps an extraordinary series of top-level meetings this spring, at which the alliance took stock of new realities.

In May, plans to modernize aging short-range nuclear missiles and artillery in Europe were scrapped, and NATO defense ministers concluded ''the threat from a united Warsaw Pact no longer exists.''

The twin doctrines of ''forward defense'' and ''flexible response'' are still on the books, however, and are due to be re-examined in London.

''Forward defense'' dictates repulsion of a Warsaw Pact ground attack at NATO's eastern borders, requiring large numbers of ready Western troops massed near those frontiers.

''Flexible response'' calls for countering an overwhelming Soviet conventional attack with short-range nuclear weapons.

Most military strategists maintain the doctrines are outdated, that chances of a surprise attack are slim, so NATO generals would have plenty of warning time to mobilize far-flung units, and that the nuclear arsenal is aimed at now-friendly countries like Czechoslovakia, Hungary and East Germany.

NATO's current secretary-general, Manfred Woerner, hinted last month at the alliance's new battlefield look, involving ''an ever-greater need of mobile units, which are both flexible and rapidly deployable.''

All agree significant change is needed unless NATO, like the Warsaw Pact, becomes as irrelevant to 1990s Europe as ''I Like Ike'' buttons are to 1990s politics.

LEXINGTON, KY (JULY 1) UPI - A couple will be married Wednesday with an estimated 35,000 of their closest friends as witnesses.

Lisa Fowler and Jeff Clark, both 23, of Frankfort, won a free wedding in a promotional contest sponsored by a Lexington radio station, WKQQ-FM.

The only catch was that the ceremony had to take place Wednesday - a week after they won - in a speedboat being towed by a truck during the annual Fourth of July parade through downtown Lexington.

The magistrate who will perform the ceremony will be dressed as a ship's captain. The station has also thrown a seven-night Bahamas vacation into the deal.

The station has contacted the Guiness Book of World Records to see if the expected crowd of 35,000 parade-goers would be recognized as a record wedding congregation, since the current record could not be determined.

Fowler works for the state Transportation Cabinet and Clark is a loan officer for Farmers Bank in Frankfort. To enter the contest, they had to submit a photo and say why they wanted to get married in a parade. Fowler's poem won over about 40 other entries.

Her poem explained how she and her husband-to-be had grown up in the same neighborhood, but never dated until about six months ago. The couple were engaged in May and had tentatively set a Sept. 1 wedding date, but had made no concrete plans.

Fowler said she is almost as excited about the offbeat ceremony as she is about getting married at all.

''I can't wait. I'm kind of eccentric when it comes to dressing and I enjoy fun, spontaneous kind of things,'' she said. ''I thought it was kind of funny that Jeff thought we even had a chance to win.''

BRUSSELS, Belgium (JULY 2) UPI - Overshadowed by Germany's drama, the European Community began Sunday its own ambitious program for monetary union that will lead to a common currency and central European bank.

Carried to its conclusion, the 12-nation EC's plans call for a ''Eurofed'' modeled after the U.S. Federal Reserve System, and a single currency to replace francs, deutsche marks, pounds and other monetary units.

''The move toward economic and monetary union (EMU) represents a quantum leap,'' said a report issued last fall by a blue-ribbon EC panel, which set July 1 as the starting date.

Stage 1 of the three-step program entails modest monetary coordination and free movement of capital. Dates are not yet set for closer coordination in Stage 2 and full EMU in Stage 3.

The breakneck speed toward German unification once worried European ''federalists'' that EMU would be sidetracked, but resolve to create a ''United States of Europe'' has instead picked up steam recently.

Last week, EC leaders meeting in Dublin decided to hold a special conference on Dec. 13 in Rome to blaze the trail toward full economic and monetary union.

The community was already committed to forging a single trading market of 323 million people by the end of 1992, through harmonization of technical standards and other rules.

To merchants and manufacturers, a single European currency is the logical next step, eliminating costly and time-consuming exchange operations. Tourists forced to line up at railroad station exchange booths couldn't agree more.

''A single currency makes sense, and most of all to 'Joe Sixpack,' the common citizen,'' says Sir Roy Denman, the British former EC ambassador to the United States.

The road to full EMU promises to be bumpy, however, with months of hardball negotiations ahead, especially with Great Britain.

Britain, concerned about losing national sovereignty, is not anxious for her beloved pounds to join East German ostmarks as mere collectors' items.

''I do not think a single currency is inevitable,'' said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. ''The economies of the community are very different indeed.''

Just 10 days ago, Thatcher's chancellor of the exchequer proposed a 13th currency - the European Currency Unit, backed by a new monetary fund - which would compete against national currencies.

There is also disagreement over just what the ''Eurofed'' should look like.

West Germany, whose staunchly independent Bundesbank has strictly controlled inflation for four decades, insists on similar insulation from political pressure for a European central bank. Monetary policy and politics are closely entwined in some EC nations, notably Great Britain.

The powerful Bundesbank president, Karl Otto Pohl, has proposed a two-speed EMU, with five countries whose economies closely converge -

Germany, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg - forming a core central bank to be joined later by other nations.

''If Britain won't go along, the train might just pull out of the station without her,'' Denman says. ''And when she tries to get on board later, she may find the furnishings in the club car are not quite to her liking.''

BEIJING (JULY 1) UPI - China on Sunday launched its most ambitious census since the 1949 revolution, hoping to yield an accurate count of the world's most populous nation despite its vast number of transients and unregistered children.

Nearly 7 million census-takers fanned out during the morning into the alleys of the country's teeming cities, its mountain villages and rural hamlets to gain what officials hope will be an accurate profile of China's estimated 1.1 billion people.

The 10-day census, the fourth since the 1949 founding of communist China, is the first since 1982 and the first in which census-takers will go door-to-door and compile detailed survey forms on each household.

The government, which has staked substantial national prestige on the quality of the census, has portrayed it as on a par with international census standards but in recent weeks has undertaken an intensive propaganda campaign to ensure cooperation.

In Beijing's northwest on Sunday morning, census-taker Li Kejie had already been on the job for an hour when he visited Lu Zhongqi, 41, a shop manager, for the household census interview in Lu's spacious three-room apartment.

''So far, so good,'' said Li, who also worked for the 1982 census. ''Each household has supported us.''

''The state has given this a lot of publicity,'' said Lu. ''It will provide important information for the government.''

Not everyone is expected to be so easy to count, however, considering China's large number of transients and the millions of children born outside the government's strict '' one-couple, one-child'' family planning policy.

''The counting has made some Chinese feel nervous,'' the official Xinhua news agency acknowledged in a dispatch. ''The migrant population fears being sent home, families with unplanned children fear punishment and private businessmen fear taxes.''

An estimated 20 million to 50 million people make up a so-called ''floating population,'' who are mostly rural dwellers allowed more freedom of movement under the last 11 years of economic reforms. They move around as peddlers, laborers and hold other transient jobs.

In Beijing, where the floating population is estimated at 1.3 million over an official population of 10 million, census-takers began working Friday night to count the transients, who often have no fixed home and are virtually outside the system.

''As most of the floating population usually do business in the daytime and return home late, we have to begin the operation late in the evening to ensure accuracy,'' said Zhu Yilin, head of the city census office.

Census officials expect a vexing problem in rural areas will be the enumerating of unregistered children, known as ''black babies'', who were born outside family planning guidelines. Black babies are less a problem in cities, where the government's population control program is generally working.

Census officials have assured residents that census data will not be shared with family planning agencies or police, but Chinese peasant families have a long history of evading officials, sometimes by simply hiding unregistered youngsters.

Although the government has eased the policy in recent years, often allowing two children, some households have several more and could face fines or other penalties if the children are counted.

''There has been an increasing trend of failing to register births,'' Xinhua reported over the weekend.

The census actually began last month in China's most remote western regions, Tibet and the province of Xinjiang, where census-takers must reach large numbers of small, isolated villages.

SPICER, MN (JULY 1) UPI - Carbon monoxide that seeped into as many as 40 rooms at a resort hotel sent 107 people to the hospital Sunday, but no one was seriously affected, authorities said.

The carbon monoxide leaked from a flue in a furnace at the Cazador Inn, Kandiyohi County authorities said.

Guests at the hotel began to complain of dizziness and nausea late last week, authorities said. The leak was not detected, however, until about 8 a.m. Sunday.

The furnace had been turned on overnight to heat a hot tub, officials said and by morning up to 40 rooms at the hotel had been contaminated by gas. Some people were found unconscious in their rooms, while others showed other symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Some 107 hotel guests and emergency personnel were taken to Rice Memorial Hospital in Willmar.

Hospital administrator Hans Dahl said most were treated and released. He said it appeared no one would have to be kept overnight.

Spicer firefighters and the Kandiyohi County civil defense unit asked anyone who had stayed at the hotel since Thursday to be checked by a doctor for carbon monoxide poisoning.

Thousands of people were in Spicer Sunday to attend the annual Fourth of July celebration.

JERUSALEM (JULY 1) UPI - The Israeli Cabinet Sunday approved emergency regulations allowing the government to import and construct 3,000 prefabricated houses for Soviet Jewish immigrants.

The new regulations, which will be in effect for three months, suspend existing building requirements and permit the immediate construction of the houses in seven areas.

Leaders of Soviet immigrant groups have complained the government is not moving fast enough to provide housing for the thousands of Soviet Jews expected to arrive in Israel this year. They say at least 60,000 new dwellings are needed annually to house the new arrivals.

Housing Minister Ariel Sharon, who heads the Cabinet's Immigration Committee, has said Israel will need 7,000 new houses or apartments a month by the end of the year, but the present building capacity is 2,500 a month.

Sharon, the former defense minister who planned Israel's Lebanon invasion in 1982, has promised private land will not be expropriated and the homes will not be built on park and nature reserve lands.

Last week, Sharon said the new immigrants will not be directed to the occupied territories and new houses would not be built there for them.

Army Radio reported Sunday that 12,457 immigrants, including 11,015 Soviet Jews, arrived in June. Last week, the head of the Jewish Agency, which oversees immigration, said about 50,000 Soviet Jews arrived in the first half of 1989.

Three ministers, including Interior Minister Arieh Deri, opposed the emergency regulations, which waive requirements for local and district building permits. Fifteen voted in favor.

Deri has said the new regulations were not necessary since approved master plans allow the construction of about 50,000 apartments.

MILAN, Italy (JULY 1) UPI - Captain Lothar Matthaeus scored on a penalty in the 25th minute Sunday, giving West Germany a 1-0 victory over short-handed Czechoslovakia for its expected third straight berth in the World Cup semifinals.

The Germans deserved their victory in front of 73,347 at Giuseppe Meazza Stadium and would have won by a bigger score except for some brave defending.

The Czechoslovaks were reduced to 10 men in the 69th minute when Lubomir Moravcik was sent off for his second bookable offense. But even with 11 players, his team rarely threatened.

The penalty came after Germany's outstanding striker, Juergen Klinsmann, had battled his way past Moravcik and Czechoslovak captain Ivan Hasek in the penalty area. As he bore down on goal, Josef Chovanec and Frantisek Straka went to block Klinsmann's path, but they sandwiched him and the referee instantly signaled a penalty.

Matthaeus sent goalkeeper Jan Stejskal the wrong way with a blistering right foot shot.

The Germans fully deserved the lead and were only prevented from scoring twice in the first half by some intelligent defending by Hasek.

Twice, in the 18th and 44th minutes, he headed what would have been certain goals off the line, first from Guido Buchwald and then from Klinsmann.

The Germans stormed through the Czechoslovak midfield almost at will with Matthaeus, Pierre Littbarski and Karlheinz Reidle in particular finding and creating space with accurate short passes.

The Czechoslovaks came close in the fifth minute when Michal Bilek's fiercely driven free kick forced Bodo Illgner to tip the ball over the bar. But they did not create another chance until just before halftime.

Tomas Skuhravy, with five goals in the tournament, had to wait until the 41st minute for his goal-scoring opportunity. He did well to reach a Hasek cross, but headed high over the bar.

West Germany maintained its superiority after the break with Littbarski powering a 60-foot drive just 30 seconds after the restart.

Although some of the refereeing decisions by the Austrian referee Helmut Kohl appeared to favor the Germans, Franz Beckenbauer's team seemed unlucky not to be awarded a second penalty in the 62nd minute.

In a sweeping move started when Buchwald broke up a Czechoslovak attack, Andreas Brehme and Uwe Bein exchanged passes to set up a German chance. Brehme's final cross found Bein, who controlled the ball well but was hauled down by Stejskal just before shooting.

Vaclav Nemecek replaced Michal Bilek after 67 minutes, but two minutes later Czechoslovakia was reduced to 10 men.

Moravcik, who had been booked in the first half, was sent tumbling to the ground by Kohler as the two chased a loose ball. When the referee ignored Moravcik's appeal for a foul, he kicked out in anger and lost his boot in the process. Kohl booked him and then pointed to the bench.

The referee also booked Bilek, Straka and Ivo Knoflicek of Czechoslovakia and Klinsmann of West Germany in a match that was hard-fought, but never dirty.

WARSAW, Poland (JULY 1) UPI - Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, apparently conceding defeat in efforts to broaden support for his radical reform program, suggested Sunday a meeting ''as partners'' with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

They could discuss within a week or so how to avoid further ruptures that would be detrimental to Poland, the prime minister suggested.

From his home in the port of Gdansk, Walesa said he was ready for a meeting but added, ''It's only a proposal. We can fix a date.''

Walesa has criticized the Mazowiecki administration for failing to root out the remaining communist bureaucracy more quickly, and for imposing tough austerity measures that have meant a 30 percent drop in living standards.

Mazowiecki made the suggestion when appeared at the end of a two-day meeting of representatives of the Civic Forum, the citizen's movement Walesa created in 1988 to help chart Poland's road to democracy.

The meeting was held as Poles were hit by another round of price hikes. The cost of natural gas and home heating doubled Sunday, while electricity went up 80 percent and postage 60 percent.

The Solidarity movement has been trying to decide its own future on the political scene, a process that has produced several conflicting factions and pressure groups.

In a brief speech, Mazowiecki seemed resigned to a split and suggested he knew he could no longer count on a consensus for his program.

''The meeting should not suggest there are no differences between us, because that isn't true,'' Mazowiecki said.

He said the meeting between with Walesa should be on what both can do ''without harming the common good for Poland and the common achievements of Solidarity.''

Leading Solidarity activist Zbigniew Bujec said Mazowiecki's speech appeared to amount to political damage control.

''Mazowiecki counted on a consensus supporting his policies until spring, in the name of national interests,'' Bujec told United Press International. ''Today's speech showed he lost those illusions, and it looks like he has proposed to discuss only how to split peacefully.''

A big question was where the meeting might be held.

The Solidarity chapter in the historic Gdansk shipyard, where the movement was founded a decade ago, has invited both men to settle their differences on July 7. The session would be in the same conference hall where the Gdansk Accords were signed with the communists in August 1980 to legalize the East Bloc's first independent trade union.

But the Solidarity premier seemed to indicate it was beneath his station to meet Walesa on his home turf, even though he sat by Walesa at that historic meeting.

''My telephone will not work if it will only be regarded as homage or subordination,'' he said. ''It will operate only when it's treated as a conversation of two partners.''

A new survey, meanwhile, showed people's confidence in the government is declining. Only 34 percent of Poles surveyed believe living standards will improve during the next three years, compared with 59 percent in January. Confidence in the government in the same period fell from 81 percent to 64 percent.

''Friendliness'' toward Mazowiecki dropped from 85 to 74 percent, while Walesa's ''friendliness'' rating slipped from 72 to 51 percent, the polls showed.

At the close of the meeting, the participants adopted a resolution calling on Mazowiecki and Walesa to resume talks in order to agree on common goals.

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (JULY 1) UPI - Nine lawmakers appealed to Sri Lanka's leader Sunday to declare a unilateral cease-fire in the 20-day-old renewed war with Tamil rebels, saying the conflict had devastated the country's northeast.

They claimed thousands had died and hundreds of thousands been left homeless by the violence.

The members of Parliament, all Tamils from war-torn areas of the teardrop-shaped island, said bombing by the air force in the northern city of Jaffna had destroyed public buildings, schools, private homes and a part of the city hospital.

''We implore that Your Excellency should take the initiative for a cease-fire to prevent further damage ... and settle this problem through continued consultation and consensus,'' the lawmakers said in a letter to President Panasinghe Premadasa.

Sri Lankan security forces have been battling the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam rebel group since June 12, when guerrillas simultaneously attacked four army camps in the eastern part of the country.

Since then at least 1,000 people, including government troops, police, civilians and rebels, have been killed in the fighting. Hundreds of thousands of people have fled their homes to escape the violence.

The Liberation Tigers are waging a struggle for an independent Tamil homeland in the north and east of the country. They claim the predominantly Hindu Tamils need a separate state because they are discriminated against by the island's Sinhalese majority, which is mostly Buddhist.

The appeal by the Tamil lawmakers came during a relatively quiet day throughout most of the country, but rebels continued to press their attack on a 300-year-old Dutch fort in Jaffna, where about 400 soldiers and policemen have been trapped since the renewed hostilities began.

NEW YORK (JULY 1) UPI - Cardinal John O'Connor said Sunday he was not consulted about the excommunication of a Catholic woman for heading a Texas abortion clinic and insisted he had ''no plans'' for taking similar action in his archdiocese.

Speaking after his last mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral before his annual summer hiatus, O'Connor said he had no role in the excommunication of Rachel Vargas by Bishop Rene Gracida of Corpus Christi, Texas.

Gracida excommunicated Vargas early in June for working as the director of an abortion clinic. The action was only revealed late last week.

O'Connor, who heads the U.S. Catholic bishops' pro-life committee, has been at the forefront of the church's fight against abortion.

A lengthly article he wrote last month in the New York archdiocese's official newspaper sparked controversy because some Catholic politicians felt he was threatening them with excommunication for their abortion rights views.

Formal excommunication, by which a Catholic is cut off from the sacraments of the church, is rare and is usually reserved for only the most serious violations of church teaching.

O'Connor told reporters after the mass that it would have been ''inappropriate'' for him to have given advice to Bishop Gracida about the excommunication of Vargas.

The cardinal added that, ''I have no plans to excommunicate anybody'' in the New York archdiocese and said he would not comment on whether Gracida's action might alienate Catholics from the church leadership.

O'Connor was asked whether a woman who had abortions should be automatically excommunicated. He said the church would have to consider the woman's age, whether the abortion was ''knowingly and intentionally'' performed and whether the woman was aware of church teachings.

OTTAWA (JULY 1) UPI - Queen Elizabeth II wound up a visit to Canada Sunday by appealing to the people on their national day for tolerance and understanding to resolve a unity crisis threatening to divide English and French-speaking parts of the country.

''It is my fondest wish for this Canada Day that Canadians come together and remain together, rather than dwelling on differences which might further divide them,'' the British monarch told about 30,000 people who had gathered tocelebrate the country's 123rd birthday.

The queen, who spoke in English and French, Canada's two official languages, said it was up to Canadians to keep their country united.

''There is no force except the force of will to keep Canadians together,'' she said.

The queen, an enduring symbol of the country's colonial past and its historic ties with Britain and the monarchy, is regarded by many Canadians as a calming presence amid the uncertainty of whether Quebec will remain a part of Canada.

She scheduled a brief visit to Hull, Quebec, across the river from the nation's capital, before departing late Sunday at the end of a five-day visit.

Local members of the separatist Parti Quebecois, the main opposition party in the Quebec legislature, said they would protest the Hull visit by wrapping themselves in the Quebec flag and showing their backs to the queen.

Several Quebec communities where separatist feelings run high cancelled Canada Day celebrations because of fears they would turn violent.

Celebrations of Canada Day in Ottawa were deliberately low key following the collapse a week ago of a constitutional amendment aimed at preventing Quebec's secession.

Quebec had promised to sign the 1982 constitution if all provinces approved the amendment recognizing the French-speaking province as a distinct society and allowing it special powers.

The amendment failed when Manitoba and Newfoundland, with the support of most English-speaking Canadians, refused to vote on it. As a result, Quebec has demanded greater autonomy from the federal government and is considering writing its own constitution.

Despite the party atmosphere Sunday on Ottowa's Parliament Hill, the queen noted ''a sense of anxiety'' among Canadians. ''I am not just a fairweather friend,'' she added. ''I am glad to be here at this sensitive time.''

The queen also urged Canadians to use the summer months as a ''period of calm reflection to find a way through present difficulties.''

She reminded Canadians their country has been ''blessed'' beyond most others in the world. ''It is a country worth working for,'' she said.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney described the monarch as a symbol of ''grace and wisdom'' and praised her ''selfless committment to the cause of Canada's unity.''

Mulroney said the evolution of the nation, which was created in 1867 out of complex negotiations to unite the farflung parts of the former British colony, has been troubled. But Mulroney said he was certain the country would emerge, united, from its current difficulties.

Most of Quebec's anger toward Britain and the royal family dates to 1760, when French forces were defeated on the Plains of Abraham, now Quebec City by the British.

Although successive British governors sent to Quebec sympathized with the French and fought against their assimilation, Quebecers have never forgotten the humiliation of their defeat.

The queen is recognized in the constitution as commander-in-chief of Canada's armed forces.

In a dramatic departure from tradition, and apparently on the insistence of Mulroney, the queen in an after-dinner speech late Friday expressed deep concern and anxiety over the country's political turmoil.

''When Canada has faced political stresses and strains, or the threat of internal divisions, I have followed events with anxiety and deep concern, and the prayers and hopes that those problems can be resolved,'' she said.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (JULY 1) UPI - A police officer seriously wounded in a weekend shooting by the Irish Republican Army has died in the hospital, a police spokesman said Sunday.

The officer, Gary Meyer, 35, was the second officer to die as the result of an attack by two or more IRA gunmen Saturday afternoon near the busy shopping district in downtown Belfast, the spokesman said.

Meyer and another Royal Ulster Constabulary officer, Harold J. Beckett, were ambushed while on foot patrols, the spokesman said. They were shot from behind by at least two gunmen, who then fled through the network of streets in the area. Beckett, 47, died where he fell.

The shooting occurred near the security gates that lead to the Republican Falls area, police said.

MIAMI (JULY 1) UPI - An argument between a Haitian customer and a Hispanic store clerk over a pair of pants grew into two days of angry protests that trapped a merchant inside his store and worsened relations between blacks and Hispanics.

About 1,000 angry Haitians trapped the store owner inside the Rapid Transit Factory Outlet Saturday to protest the alleged beating of a Haitian customer on Friday.

The siege ended peacefully Saturday night when police sneaked the store owner out through the back door. The owner, who usually opens on Sundays, heeded police advice and stayed closed.

''It's quiet today, very quiet. I think everybody's in church,'' said Miami Police spokesman Gary Green.

No one was injured or arrested during the two-day protest, although city leaders estimated the bill for police protection will cost taxpayers more than $200,000.

The crowd said a Haitian customer, Abner Alezi, was beaten by store employees and then unfairly arrested by Miami police Friday. They said store owner Luis Reyes should have been arrested.

A crowd of angry Haitians demonstrated in front of the store for six hours Friday, then dispersed peacefully.

Reyes decided to reopen Saturday at 10 a.m. ''to show that he would not be intimidated.''

After being released by police Saturday morning, Alezi, 44, went on Creole-language radio station WKAT-AM to tell his story. He said he was beaten after he demanded that Reyes hem a pair of pants he had bought at the store.

Alezi said a Hispanic clerk started the fight but Reyes said Alezi demanded alterations immediately and then grabbed the clerk. Alezi said the clerk beat him.

Radio announcers urged listeners to show their anger over the incident, as well as anger over the lack of an official welcome given to Nelson Mandela during his visit last week and over conditions at the Krome Detention Center where illegal aliens from Haiti and other nations are held.

''The terrible treatment of Haitians and blacks in general has gone way too far,'' said WKAT reporter Ludner Beauvoir.

By 11 a.m., a crowd had gathered at the Biscayne Plaza Shopping Center and more than 140 Metro-Dade and Miami police officers were called out to restrain them.

As police in riot gear looked on, the crowd danced to a drum beat, and occasionally threw water balloons, rocks and bottles at the shuttered store. Reyes, his father and a friend waited inside.

Police were reluctant to use force for fear the confrontation might escalate.

''Strict police action was the last thing we wanted to do,'' Police Chief Perry Anderson said.

Finally, as a noisy train passed by at 8:45 p.m. Saturday, police cranked up the sliding back door of the store. Reyes, his father and the friend crawled into the back seat of a nearby police cruiser and were gone before the crowd noticed.

Anti-Hispanic sentiment was strong throughout the demonstration. Several protesters screamed racial epithets at Hispanic city officials who showed up to urge calm. Two reporters for a Spanish-language radio station had to leave the scene when protesters started yelling anti-Cuban comments and beating on the side of their car.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (JULY 1) UPI - The federal government Sunday took control of wildlife management on public lands away from the state of Alaska in a fight over hunting rights.

''We said we didn't want to assume this responsibility,'' said Walter Stieglitz, regional director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, who directed the reluctant takeover when Alaska failed to meet Sunday's deadline for complying with a federal lands act.

The unparalleled takeover transferred game management in roughly two-thirds of Alaska, an area larger than Texas, from state hands to federal control.

The transfer of power and wildlife management responsibility has been the most hotly debated issue in the state for months, but it is the outgrowth of many years of bitter fighting between rural native subsistence hunters and urban sport hunters - with politicians, courts and government agencies in the middle of the dispute.

''Who manages (wildlife) is an important issue up here,'' Stieglitz said, ''and there is an important principle involved.''

State lawmakers who convened in special session in the capital in Juneau one week ago in an attempt to thwart the federal action have instead split into warring camps, sticking to their guns on the divisive issues involved.

Special hunting privileges for rural Alaskans triggered the fight. Most rural subsistence hunters are Eskimos, Indians and Aleuts scattered in remote villages across the state. The Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act grants a hunting priority to rural Alaskans.

The state, too, had a law giving its rural residents priority to game in establishing hunting seasons and limits. But in the latest in a series of challenges over the years by urban sport hunters, the state Supreme Court struck down the state rural preference law.

The state court agreed with sport hunters that Alaska's constitution prohibited unequal allocation of state resources. White city-dwelling sportsmen claim the case is an equal rights issue. Native groups claim their traditional subsistence way of life is a matter of survival in remote regions where people still live off the land, thus justifying special hunting rights.

The December court ruling was stayed until July 1 to give the legislature a chance to deal with the outcome and find a legal way to get back into compliance with federal law.

Native groups and Alaska Gov. Steve Cowper, a Democrat, wants to amend the state's constitution to permit special hunting rights for rural residents.

Last Thursday, the state Senate voted 14-6, the required two-thirds majority, to place the proposed constitutional amendment before voters in November. But the state House was divided 20-20 after a vote Friday and was still squabbling over the issue Sunday when the federal takeover went into effect without the necessary 27-vote two-thirds House majority support for rural subsistence.

House Republicans, with backing from sports hunters and the National Rifle Association, oppose changing the constitution to give special hunting rights to rural Alaskans.

Even the oil industry and the state's congressional delegation have joined the intense lobbying effort - they support a state constitutional change favoring subsistence - because of the federal-state issues involved that may spill over into other areas.

No matter what the outcome - whether the federal government keeps its new control or whether the state finds a way to comply with the federal subsistence mandate - rural subsistence peoples will keep hunting.

But even many of the adversaries in the debate agree that federal wildlife management may expand to other areas in Alaska, threatening state jurisdiction and leading to cries of state rights.

At the outset, few will notice any change, said federal environmental specialist Bill Knauer, who developed interim federal hunting regulations, which he described as ''more than liberal than the state's'' for subsistence hunters. He said there were subsistence-only hunts in some areas but he said expected no major restrictions on sport hunting.

Although the new regime was in effect, Knauer said the first hunts under the new regulations were not scheduled to occur until August.

However, Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan warned June 20 that sport hunting may be restricted to protect Native American subsistence hunting and that federal authority may have to be extended.

DETROIT (JULY 2) UPI - United Auto Workers union workers ratified a new three-year contract with Rockwell International providing 7 percent general wage increases and two lump sum payments to about 8,000 aerospace workers in California and Oklahoma, officials said Sunday.

UAW Vice President Odessa Komer said 84 percent of the members voted for the contract at Local 887 in Los Angeles; Local 1519 in Santa Susana, Calif.; Local 952 in Tulsa; and Local 1558 in McAlester, Okla.

''It is a forward looking settlement which the UAW-Rockwell negotiating team was able to achieve amid the difficult economic circumstances currently affecting the entire aerospace and defense industry,'' said Komer. ''The new national agreement features improvements in the incomes and retirement benefits for workers in Rockwell's aerospace and defense operations.''

The union has lost about 9,000 jobs at Rockwell in the current wave of Defense Department cutbacks, including the B-1 bomber. Rockwell also builds the space shuttle, which has been grounded, and rocket motors for such missiles as the Titan.

The old pact expired Friday and the two sides reached tentative agreement last week before a strike vote was needed.

The new agreement runs through June 26, 1993 and provides a 4 percent general pay raise effective Saturday that will average 40 to 70 cents an hour. A 3 percent increase effective July 6, 1991 will average 35 to 62 cents an hour. In addition, a lump sum payment of 2 percent of an employee's previous year's salary will be made in December 1990. A 6 percent sump sum payment will be made in August 1992. A typical aircraft structural installer would get about $2,100 in the second payment, said union spokesman Karl Mantyla.

Mantyla said the new contract also includes improvements in retirement and health care benefits, as well as a new employee involvement program designed to improve the quality of life on the job.

(JULY 1) UPI - East and West Germany merge their economies... the European Community begins its program on economic unification... and a U-S Peace Corps worker in the Philippines is abducted. Details on these stories and more, next, from the wires of U-P-I.

The financial marriage of East and West Germany has prompted some honeymoon jitters.

The two countries merged their economies at midnight last night.

East Germans waited in long lines through the night to trade in their worthless money for the higher-valued West German deutsche mark. Many celebrated with champagne, fireworks and by tossing East German change into the air.

Although East Germany will benefit in the short run from the stronger West German money, many are worried about a future that is far from certain.

The East German government has admitted that some of its state-supported industry simply canNOT compete with the West and that factory closures and a rise in UNemployment is inevitable.

It is expected that incomes of East Germans will continue to be as little as one-third that of West Germans.

But West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl in a T-V address yesterday said that NO one will be worse off than before. He said the merger offers the chance... and even the guarantee... that the standard of living for East Germans will ultimately improve.

European leaders are on their own ambitious course for economic union.

The European Community kicked off a program today that will lead to a common currency and central European bank down the road.

The community plans to merge into what has been described as a ''United States of Europe.'' The plan calls for a federal bank... which will be modeled after the U-S Federal Reserve system.

The E-C also plans a single currency to replace francs, deutsche marks, pounds and other monetary units.

E-C leaders will meet in Rome in December to blaze new trails toward economic and monetary union.

To merchants and manufacturers, a single European currency is the logical next step... and will eliminate costly and time-consuming exchange operations.

But Britain... the traditional hold-out in E-C decisions... continues to drag its feet.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says she does NOT think a common currency is ''inevitable.''

CROMWELL, CT (JULY 2) UPI - Wayne Levi captured his third title in 35 days, firing a final-round 67 Sunday to win the $1 million Greater Hartford Open by two strokes over four golfers.

Levi finished with a four-round 267 for his 11th victory in 14 years on the tour, and made him the PGA's first three-time winner in 1990. The $180,000 first prize - along with winning checks from the Atlanta Classic and Western Open - moved him into fifth place on this year's money list with $579,880, a career-best.

''This has been a great six weeks,'' said Levi, doing some quick math. ''Let's see ... three times $180,000. That's $540,000. Unbelievable.''

Mark Calcavecchia, who led by two strokes with just two holes left, finished in a four-way tie for second at 269 with third-round co-leader Brad Fabel, Chris Perry and hard-charging Rocco Mediate, who closed with a final-round 65.

Nolan Henke, who topped the leader board after three rounds with Fabel, shot a 71 and finished in sixth with Bob Lohr, Brian Tennyson and Loren Roberts.

David Canipe, Robert Wrenn and John Cook were one stroke back at 271. Cook who was just a shot off the lead after 54 holes, got to 12-under, but never recoverd from bogeys on 10 and 11.

Paul Azinger, seeking his third straight GHO title after edging out Levi in 1987 and '88, finished five strokes back at 272.

Calcavecchia appeared to have the title in his grasp after birdies on 11, 12 and 13 that put him up by two shots after 16 holes. But the defending British Open champ double bogeyed at the 17th and followed with a bogeyt at 18.

Levi quickly seized the opportunity with a six-inch birdie putt on the short 13th to take a one-shot lead even before Calcavecchia reached the 18th tee.

He then knocked an 8-iron to within 13 feet on the 424-yard 14th hole for another birdie.

''I saw what Calcavecchia was doing,'' said Levi. ''But I just kept plugging.''

Calcavecchia won $66,000 to move ahead of Azinger into the No. 3 spot on the money list.

''I've got no comment,'' said Calcavecchia, whose tee shot on the 399-yard dogleg 17th found the left rough. His second shot failed to carry the pond which lines the right side of the fairway and protects the green.

Calcavecchia boldly stroked a downhill 10-foot birdie try on the 18th, which would have moved him to 13-under with Levi, but his ball slid four feet past the cup and he missed the return putt.

Levi appeared to be in trouble himself when he three-putted the par-3 16th as Fabel, a shot back at 12-under, watched from the tee. But after Levi walked from the green, Fabel robbed the GHO of its remaining suspense when he chose the wrong club and self-destructed.

''I was between a 5-iron and a 6-iron, and I couldn't decide. Turns out I wasn't even on the right page,'' said Fabel whose 6-iron sailed into the grassy knoll behind the green then kicked into the water. Fabel double-bogeyed the hole and only captured a share of second place when he birdied the 420-yard 18th.

Azinger, who beat Levi with clutch putting in '87 and with a 72nd hole chip-in a year ago, shot his fourth consecutive 68 and tied for 13th with seven other players.

(JULY 1) UPI - Nelson Mandela arrived in Ireland today to more of the same acclaim he received in the United States.

In a brief speech at Dublin's airport, Mandela repeated his call to keep the pressure against South Africa's apartheid system with continued economic sanctions.

Supporters cheered the deputy president of the African National Congress... and parents held their infants aloft so they could get a look at him.

Mandela will make a ceremonial courtesy call on Irish President Patrick Hillery tomorrow morning. The black rights leader will then discuss trade sanctions with Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey at Dublin Castle.

Although the European Community has put off any decision on continuing sanctions, Haughey and Collins have said Ireland will keep sanctions in place.

The White House today said Mandela called President Bush last night to thank him for his support in the fight against apartheid.

President Bush is cramming for back-to-back summits beginning later this week and stretching until next Wednesday.

The president meets at his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine for the next two days with Defense Secretary Cheney, Joint Chiefs of Staff

Chairman Colin Powell and Vice President Quayle .

Those talks will be aimed at trying to draw a new political, military and economic map of Europe.

Bush then leaves Wednesday for London, where NATO heads of states will seek to adapt the alliance to the past year's rapid changes... namely, the disintegration of the Soviet Union and the East Bloc.

He'll return to host another summit July 9th through the 11th in Houston.

At both summits, leaders are expected to try to paint a new political face on NATO and figure out how to convince Moscow to allow a united Germany full membership in the alliance.

(JULY 1) UPI - Iran's interior minister says aid for earthquake victims should NOT be linked to improving relations with the West... adding that Iran has NO desire for closer ties with the United States.

Interior Minister Abdollah Noori today said some foreign assistance may have been politically motivated. Aid continues to pour into Iran, 10 days after the devestating earthquake.

An Iranian official speaking anonymously last week had suggested the United States was NOT as generous as other countries, prompting speculation that Iran was seeking more aid in return for improved relations.

Iran's ambassador to the U-N last week put the death toll at at least 50-thousand people... but one Iranian dissident figure today claimed that three times that many have died.

A statement by the leader of a leftist Iraq-based organization also quadrupled damage estimates to some 30-BILLION dollars.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency says bodies are still being dug from under the rubble. It is believed that 10 relief workers have been crushed to death by falling rubble or died in helicopter accidents.

China today launched an effort to count every one of its more than one-BILLION people.

This is the most ambitious census since the 1949 revolution. The mission will be complicated by large numbers of transients and UNregistered children.

Nearly seven-Million census-takers fanned out this morning into the cities mountain villages and hamlets.

The 10-day census is the first in which census-takers will go door-to-door and compile detailed survey forms on each household.

The government has undertaken an intensive propaganda campaign to ensure co-operation.

But many couples try to hide their children from the government because of fines and other penalties for having more than one child in the over-populated nation.

ROME (JULY 1) UPI - Gary Lineker ended Cameroon's improbable World Cup run Sunday with two penalty goals, advancing England to a semifinal date in Turin, where dislike for the English runs deep.

The Redoubtable Lions, who had already made tournament history by being the first African nation to make the quarterfinals, looked like certain winners when they led 2-1 with time running out on the English.

But Lineker drew two fouls in the penalty area in the 83rd and 105th minutes and took the penalties himself, the first earning his team extra time, and the second completing a 3-2 victory.

The win earned England a Wednesday matchup with West Germany, who reached their third successive semifinal by beating Czechoslovakia 1-0 in Milan earlier Sunday.

The game will take place in Turin, the northern city which is home of Juventus, the club team whose fans were trampled to death at Heysel Stadium in 1985 before a European Cup match with Liverpool. Thirty-nine fans died in the tragedy, which prompted English clubs to be banned from subsequent European competitions.

England Manager Bobby Robson admitted England was lucky to come out with the win.

''We pulled it out of the fire. I thought we were on the plane home tomorrow.''

Praising the performance of Cameroon, he pointed out that the Africans had defeated defending champion Argentina, Romania and Colombia.

''We didn't understimate or disrespect them, but they still surprised us. They were a very good side and a little unlucky to be out. Our character and resilience stood us in good stead. It brought us back into the tournament when we were on the way out.''

Commenting on Lineker's winning penalty, Robson said: ''Time was ebbing out and a good run by Gary Lineker toward the end gave us a penalty that we deserved. To get fouled and then get up and take the penalties is not easy. He kept his cool, he's an experienced player.''

Lineker, leading scorer in the 1986 World Cup with six goals, said the first penalty was more difficult psychologically and he felt more relaxed with his match-winning second effort.

''I'm just pleased to get to the semifinal, anything can happen now,'' he added.

The only previous time England made the semifinal was in 1966 when it went on to win the cup at home.

The English entered the match as heavy favorites against a team given a 1 in 500 chance to win when the tournament started.

Yet, it was England who looked like the World Cup acolytes.

A 25th-minute goal by David Platt had provided England with an undeserved halftime lead, but the Redoubtable Lions of Cameroon turned the match dramatically with two goals in four minutes.

Roger Miller, who had scored four goals as a substitute in making Cameroon the first African nation to reach the last eight, was instrumental in both goals.

The 38-year-old striker was fouled by Paul Gascoigne in the 62nd minute and Emmanuel Kunde made no mistake in equalizing from the penalty spot.

Milller struck again in the 65th, setting up Eugene Ekeke Ebelle, who celebrated his World Cup debut by giving Cameroon a 2-1 lead, just two minutes after coming on as a substitute.

But just when it seemed the Africans was heading towards an epic victory, Lineker's two penalties spared England's blushes.

Earlier Sunday, West Germany maintained one World Cup streak while ending a cycle for Czechoslovakia.

Lothar Matthaeus scored with a 25th-minute penalty to give the Germans a 1-0 victory over the Czechoslovaks, who had been reduced to 10 men when Lubomir Moravcik was sent off in the 69th minute for his second booking.

West Germany, the losing finalist in each of the two previous World Cups, has advanced to the semifinals eight of the last 10 times since 1954.

The victory in front of 73,000 at Giuseppe Meazza Stadium was West Germany's first over Czechoslovakia in the World Cup after a loss in 1934 and a draw in 1958.

It also ended Czechoslovakia's dream of repeating a 28-year cycle of reaching the World Cup final. The nation advanced to the championship match in Italy in 1934 and in Chile in 1962.

Only some intelligent defending by Czechoslovak captain Ivan Hasek, who headed two efforts off the line in the first half, and some brave goalkeeping by Jan Stejskal, prevented the Germans from winning by a bigger score.

''We could have scored three times,'' said West German manager Franz Beckenbauer, bidding to take West Germany into its third straight final.

''But the Czechoslovakia team was not as easy to beat as it may have looked. I think we could have done even better after they had a man sent off, we should have taken more advantage of that.''

Czechoslovak coach Jozef Venglos admitted the better team won.

''I think on this form West Germany can win the World Cup final,'' he said. The Germans are very balanced. They are a very good side.''

Roman Catholics traditionalists who want to keep the Latin rite Mass scuffled today with a congregation outside Paris. Dozens of those who favor the formerly traditional mass in Latin burst into a cathedral. Two people were injured in the fighting.

Prince Charles was released from the hospital today, three days after breaking his right arm in two places in a fall from his horse during a polo match. Britain's future king... known as an agressive player... woN'T return to the polo field for awhile. Doctors have told him he's through for the season.

The Rainbow Family began its weeklong gathering today in Minnesota. The yearly get-together draws some six-thousand lovers of nature, peace, and parties. This 19th gathering is set in Minnesota's Superior National Forest on Barker Lake. Some communities have NOT welcomed the gathering in the past. But NO problems have arisen so far this year.

(JULY 1) UPI - President Bush may propose withdrawing U-S nuclear-tipped artillery shells from Western Europe at this week's summit of NATO leaders in London. A published Washington report quotes a senior U-S official saying the idea to withdraw the weapons is ''in the air.'' The official says it's one of several ideas being considered in an effort to ease Soviet concerns about a unified Germany in NATO.

East Germans got their first full taste of capitalism today as their nation merged economically with West Germany... but they may soon sample the bitter after-taste of UNemployment. The East German government has already said its state-supported industry canNOT compete with the West, and that factory closures are inevitable. Analysts say as many as two-Million East Germans could lose their jobs.

A compromise may be in the works in Poland. Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki today suggested he and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa meet ''as partners'' to discuss how to repair ruptures in the Civic Forum leadership. Walesa has criticized Mazowiecki's slow pace of reform, and for imposing tough austerity measures which have triggered a 30-percent drop in the standard of living.

Alaska NO longer has the right to issue hunting licenses. The federal government has yanked rights of wildlife management from the state on the grounds it did NOT meet today's deadline for complying with a federal land act requiring fair and equal hunting practices. The state refused to strike down a law granting special privileges to rural Alaskans over hunting sportsmen.

(JULY 1) UPI - Lightning struck a crowded pavilion today in West Virginia... injuring at least 24 people huddled under it. Authorities say the lightning struck a post supporting the tin-roofed pavilion at an archery range near Reedsville. One man near the post had to be resuscitated at the site and was flown by helicopter to a hospital. Most of the injured suffered minor burns and cuts. The victims had sought shelter under the pavilion during a thunderstorm.

Peru's president-elect is visiting the home of his ancestors. Alberto Fujimori arrived in Tokyo today, where he was met by the head of the Foreign Ministry's Latin America department. Fujimori... the first person of Japanese ancestry to be elected president of a Western nation... plans to lobby Japan for increased assistance to help repair Peru's ravaged economy.

The military today charged an army officer with two counts of attempted murder for allegedly flipping his wife over an eighth-floor hotel balcony in Kansas City, Missouri. Last month, Major David Schneider was aquitted of civilian charges in the case... but a military spokesman says new information has been found. Investigators will be appointed tomorrow to conduct the military equivalent of a grand jury probe.

Firefighters are trying to snuff out the last of a fire that has consumed hundreds of homes near Santa Barbara, California. Humid air is helping to keep the flames down after a dry heat wave fed the blaze last week... giving officials hope of extinguishing the fire by tonight. The fire burned up five-thousand acres and killed at least one person. Other large fires are still raging elsewhere in California, Arizona, Texas and Colorado.

(JULY 1) UPI - Queen Elizabeth appealed to the people of Canada today to resolve the cultural differences threatening to tear the nation apart. The queen spoke to an Ottawa crowd in both English and French... advising Canadians to strike a compromise to keep separatist-minded Quebec in the country. Today was the final day of the monarch's five-day trip to the former British colony.

Sources say Liberian rebels hijacked a ship loaded with 15-thousand tons of rice off the port of the capital city Monrovia today. At the same time, rebels and government troops battled only a few miles from Monrovia. A last ditch proposal to end the fighting was offered yesterday by the Economic Community of West African States. It calls for President Samuel Doe to resign from office. Diplomatic sources say the United States supports the plan.

Republicans and Democrats may have to sink or swim together over the political hot potato of the tax issue. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell said today that any plan to raise taxes will fail unless it receives majority bipartisan support on Capitol Hill. He said he would NOT let Republicans back away from the issue and allow Democrats to shoulder the blame for higher taxes.

Friends of a Peace Corps volunteer kidnapped in the Philippines say he spoke the local language and was friendly with all area residents... including his kidnappers. U-S officials say communist guerrillas abducted 26-year-old Timothy Swanson on June 13th from his house on Negros island. His father says Swanson joined the Peace Corps ''to help people who needed some help.''

(JULY 1) UPI - Lightning injures at least 24 people in West Virginia... while firefighters work to snuff out a wildfire in Santa Barbara, California...

A reported arms proposal from the White House...

And U-S officials in the Philippines announce the kidnapping last month of an American Peace Corp volunteer...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

At least two dozen people were injured today in northern West Virginia when lightning struck a pavilion they were huddled under during a thunderstorm.

The most seriously hurt man was sitting just six feet from where the lightning bolt struck a post supporting the pavilion's tin roof. Officials say paramedics had to resuscitate the man, who was then flown to a nearby hospital. He remained in critical condition tonight.

The victims were at an archery range in woods near Reedsville when the storm struck, and they sought shelter under the open-air pavilion. Most of the victims suffered minor burns and cuts when they fell as lightning shook the shed.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms made their presence felt from the Tennessee Valley to New England.

In the West, a heat wave rolls on... and numerous wildfires still rage.

But firefighters expect by tonight to put out one devastating fire near Santa Barbara, California. The blaze has claimed nearly five-thousand acres, 500 houses and at least one life.

The hot weather spread as far north as Alaska... giving Fairbanks a record summer high of 86 today.

President Bush reportedly is considering withdrawing U-S nuclear-tipped artillery shells from Western Europe in a pitch to appease Moscow over a unified Germany in NATO.

A published report quotes senior U-S officials saying the proposed withdrawal is one of several initiatives on a list that was circulated earlier to allied governments for comments.

News of the plan comes as President Bush reviews military and political options before leaving Wednesday for a Western summit in London.

Diplomatic sources say NATO leaders have already seen proposal... and have given it good reviews.

Most nuclear-tipped shells are deployed in West Germany and are incapable of hitting targets more than 18 miles away... a fact officials say make the weapons obsolete as German re-unification nears.

Moscow has said it does NOT want any nuclear weapons in a unified Germany.

#90182u1729 07/01/1990 ~United Press International

(JULY 1) UPI - Friends of a Peace Corps worker kidnapped in the central Phillippines say the volunteer previously had good relations with his communist rebel abductors.

One fellow Peace Corps worker says Timothy Swanson knew the local language and could get along with anyone in the area, which should help him in his captivity.

Authorities disclosed today that Swanson was kidnapped June 13th by members of the communist New People's Army on the island of Negros . American officials say they learned of the abduction just yesterday while trying to evacuate Peace Corps workers believed endangered by the guerrillas.

The retired Roman Catholic bishop in the area says he asked Swanson's Philippine wife NOT to tell anyone about the incident.

The kidnappers had told the woman they wanted to ''borrow'' Swanson ''for questioning.'' She said the gurrillas were ''very courteous'' and promised to send him home in two days. Instead, five days later, they picked up Swanson's underwear, books and other belongings.

(JULY 1) UPI - Republicans and Democrats are playing what amounts to a political game of chicken over the tax issue.

Senate leaders agree that any agreement to raise taxes will fail unless the measure has majority bipartisan support on Capitol Hill.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell said he told President Bush at the outset of budget talks that he would NOT let Republicans back away from the issue to win a popularity contest. He says he would NOT allow Democrats to ''shoulder the burden'' of a tax increase.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said he doesN'T think Bush intends to raise income taxes... but will opt instead for increases in oil imports or so-called ''sin'' taxes.

Although Dole outlined possible areas for tax increases, neither he nor Mitchell would say if cutting entitlements like Social Security was a certainty to meet spending cuts.

The deficit threatens to top 250-BILLION dollars, but the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law requires that figure to be 64-BILLION in fiscal 1991.

A failure to reach the figure will trigger across-the-board spending cuts... something neither party wants.

(JULY 1) UPI - The National Organization for Women today re-electing a slate of strong pro-choice officers. NOW also vowed to support candidates favoring reproductive rights in elections across the country.

Those actions came in San Francisco on the final day of the annual NOW convention.

Delegates also passed a resolution aimed at helping Louisiana women if a tough anti-abortion bill passed by the state legislature becomes law. NOW voted to establish a volunteer network to assist women with transportation and housing in neighboring states to obtain safe and legal abortions.

The delegates also voted to launch a campaign in Louisiana similar to the ''Pennsylvania project.'' That program resulted in 91 women running for office on the ballot this year... 73 of whom won primary elections.

Pennsylvania was the first state to enact a strong anti-abortion law in the wake of recent Supreme Court rulings giving states more leeway on the issue.

Troubles for this year's census reportedly are a thing of the past.

The Census Bureau today announced it has counted 99 percent of all American households... a feat that would be a major victory for the agency which has been criticized from the start for mismanaging the nation's headcount.

The Commerce Department, which oversees the census, credits armies of temporary field workers who trekked door-to-door across the nation to track down and interview people who failed to mail back their questionnaires.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher says the findings are a ''huge improvement'' over the mail-back response.

And despite a slow start earlier this year, Census officials have already processed more than 80-Million completed forms... more than three-fourths of the 106-Million questionnaires distributed.

(JULY 1) UPI - The National Organization for Women declared Sunday that it will pull out all stops to elect candidates who support a woman's right to have an abortion. Delegates at the NOW convention in San Francisco also passed a so-called ''feminization of power'' resolution.

New York became the first state to act on the right-to-die issue. The legislature today O-K'd a measure that allows a person to give another individual the right to make critical health decisions in the event that the first person is incapacitated.

A published report quotes U-S and diplomatic officials as saying the White House has offered to remove the American arsenal of nuclear-tipped weapons from Western Europe. The Bush administration had NO comment on the report.

At least 24 people were injured this afternoon... one seriously... when lightning struck a post supporting a tin-roofed pavilion near Reedsville, West Virginia. The group was made up of archery enthusiasts who had sought shelter under the pavilion during a thunderstorm.

The Commerce Department says an army of temporary census takers who went door-to-door helped boost this year's population count to 99 percent completion. The new figure is a marked increase from the sluggish start for the census.

(JULY 1) UPI - Abortion rights was a cornerstone during the election of officers today at the National Organization for Women annual convention in San Francisco. Members re-elected strong pro-choice officers and vowed to support candidates favoring reproductive rights in November. Delegates also passed a resolution urging women to support and fund some high-profile candidates... including Dianne Feinstein, who is California's Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

New York lawmakers today passed a bill to let people name someone to make critical health decisions for them if they are incapacitated. The bill marks the first state legislative action on the issue since the U-S Supreme Court last month approved a requirement for clear evidence that a person wanted life support removed before becoming incapacitated. New York Governor Mario Cuomo is expected to sign the legislation.

Officials say a carbon monoxide leak from a flue in a hotel furnace sent 120 people to a hospital today in Spicer, Minnesota. Investigators also are checking whether a swimming pool mechanical room contributed to the problem. Officials say guests at the hotel complained of dizziness and nausea a few days ago. But the leak was NOT detected until last night... one day after the furnace was turned on to heat a hot tub.

Cardinal John O'Connor of New York says he had NOTHING to do with the decision of a Corpus Christi, Texas, bishop to excommunicate a Roman Catholic women who heads an abortion clinic. O'Connor... who has been in an outspoken advocate in the Catholic Church's fight against abortion... says it would have been ''inappropriate'' for him to advise the Texas bishop on the issue. He also denied reports that he plans to pursue such actions in his archdiocese.

(JULY 1) UPI - The government of Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda tried to reassert its power today by ordering banks and stores to re-open in the riot-torn capital of Lusaka. The move comes one day after an ill-fated and apparently single-handed attempt to topple Kuanda... and follows four days of sporadic rioting in the African nation. Kuanda tried to appease his detractors Friday by announcing an October referendum on the country becoming a democracy.

The 50th birthday of the world's first floating bridge will go largely unheralded tomorrow. That's because Seattle's Mercer Island bridge... all 100-thousand tons of floating concrete and steel... is undergoing a 36-Million-dollar facelift and is closed to traffic. A spokesman for the Washington state transportation department says the birthday will be celebrated in 1992, when the renovation is unveiled.

DENVER (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Random Access Inc. (NASDAQ:RNDM), one of the Rocky Mountain Region's fastest-growing microcomputer resellers, Monday announced that its president and majority stockholder, Bruce Milliken, has agreed to place in escrow 2 million of his 3 million shares of common stock.

The escrow agreement contains an earnout provision whereby Milliken can earn back a portion or all of his shares if Random achieves certain earnings per share levels over the next five years.

The agreement is part of an overall strategy to effect a secondary public offering of Random stock and warrants. The proposed offering is being handled by the investment firm of Cohig and Associates of Denver. The shares will be released back to Milliken if a secondary offering of at least $1.5 million is not completed by Dec. 1, 1990.

Beginning with the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1991, Milliken can earn back the maximum number of shares which, when added to the number of Random shares outstanding as of the fiscal year end, will not cause the pre-tax earnings per share to drop below the number(s) set forth in the table below.

LISC was formed last year with offices in Fairfax, VA., and Santa Clara, Calif., pursuing both commercial and governmental contracts. Under the restructuring, government contracts will be consolidated at the LISC facility in Santa Clara.

McMahon added: ''Since our current Crescent contract as well as any major bids that we are making on other government programs -- including the Treasury Multi-user Acquisition Contract and the Nationwide Office Automation for the Veterans Administration -- all originated from our Santa Clara facility, there won't be any disruption to these activities or to our government customers.''

LISC's commercial endeavors in engineering documentation management systems and geographic information systems, which are currently in Fairfax will become part of Formtek.

Last October, Lockheed acquired Formtek, which has headquarters in Pittsburgh, Pa. Formtek specializes in EDMS and its products include integrated modular software and turnkey systems for the capture, manipulation, distribution, storage and management of engineering documents.

PALO ALTO, CA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Southwall Technologies Inc. (NASDAQ:SWTX) Monday announced that its Heat Mirror XIR clear solar shading coating, is now commercially available in Monsanto Co.'s new Solarflex interlayer for laminated architectural glass.

Solarflex was introduced on June 29 at the Construction Specification Institute trade show in Chicago. ''This is an important step forward for Southwall,'' said president and chief executive officer Bruce J. Alexander.

''It is the first commercial use of Heat Mirror XIR coating. The architectural market for laminated glass is growing and we expect to be a major player through Monsanto's commercialization of Solarflex interlayer.

''The automotive market for laminated glass is also quite large,'' Alexander continued. ''And our exclusive North American supply agreement with Monsanto also places great emphasis on this product for solar shading windshields. We are very optimistic about the prospects for Heat Mirror XIR coating in a Solarflex product for automobiles.''

Southwall vice president for glazing laminates, Thomas G. Hood, explained that Heat Mirror XIR was developed specifically for use with polyvinyl butyryl (PVB) adhesive that forms the interlayer of laminated safety glass.

''Monsanto encapsulates a layer of Heat Mirror XIR coating within its Saflex PVB,'' Hood said. ''This interlayer is then laminated between layers of glass. The finished laminated glass is able to block a very high proportion of infrared radiation of visible light.''

Solarflex architectural laminated glass is designed for use in commercial buildings, such as hotels, retail stores, office high rises, and high-sun climate residential windows. Monsanto plans to initially introduce the product in the United States and Canada, with expansion to other world markets to follow.

Southwall Technologies Inc. designs and produces thin film coatings that selectively absorb, reflect or transmit certain types of electromagnetic radiation. Southwall products are sold into the architectural, automotive and electronics markets.

PORTLAND, OR (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - The Oregon Public Utility Commission (PUC) staff has issued its initial settlement proposal on a number of issues in Portland General Electric Co.'s (PGE) current price-increase request.

The PUC staff proposes increasing PGE's 1991 revenues by $6 million, compared with PGE's request for an $89 million revenue increase.

Ken L. Harrison, chairman and chief executive officer of PGE and Portland General Corp., said the PUC report is a starting point for discussions that will continue over the next two months.

''We are still at a preliminary stage of the rate-setting process,'' Harrison said. ''While we're far apart on the numbers, we have confidence in our position and believe the price request that PGE has proposed is fair and justifiable.''

The PUC's final order is due in January 1991. The next step in the case calls for two months of settlement discussions between PGE, PUC staff, and other parties. Public hearings will begin Sept. 5.

Harrison added that he hoped the settlement discussions provided a ''proper forum for dialogue and finding common ground'' for the mutual benefit of all parties.

''A financially healthy PGE benefits our customers, the communities we serve, our investors, and our employees,'' Harrison said. ''We are looking forward to meeting with the PUC staff, listening to their concerns and, I hope, together working out a reasonable, fair result.''

The principal subsidiary of Portland General Corp., PGE is an electric utility serving more than 569,000 retail customers in northwest Oregon.

SAN FRANCISCO (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - The Bank of California's Real Estate Industries Group Monday announced that it will provide $170 million in interim construction and medium term financing for the Towson Town Center, a regional shopping mall near Baltimore.

The transaction includes a co-agent arrangement with The Bank of California and the Los Angeles branch of The Mitsubishi Bank Ltd. for $120 million and $50 million, respectively.

According to Jerry McIntyre, executive vice president of The Bank of California's Real Estate Industries Group, few deals of this magnitude exist within the industry on a year to year basis.

''Towson Town Center is considered a trophy property. Annual retail sales are expected to exceed $280 million in the first year of operation, and the center has always maintained a high level of tenant occupancy,'' said McIntyre. He noted that competition among banks for the transaction was intense.

''The size of the transaction, combined with the prominence of the players made this a great coup,'' said Cathy Chase, vice president and manager of Mitsubishi Real Estate, a lending unit in the Real Estate Industries Group.

The unit has had a long term relationship with The Hahn Co. and Santa Anita Realty Enterprises Inc., two of the general partners in the development, and is responsible for managing the Towson Town Center transaction.

Hahn Co. Senior Vice President of Finance Roger Birks said, ''Key features of the package are a $170 million interest rate swap provided by The Mitsubishi Bank Ltd., New York, combined with an attractive rate on funds offered by The Bank of California.''

Towson Town Center's planned expansion will increase its retail space from 356,000 to 956,000 square feet and boost the number of smaller stores from 71 to 260 with an expanded Hecht's and a new Nordstrom.

The center will be an enclosed A-shaped building linking the existing Hecht's, an east coast subsidiary of the May Co., with Nordstrom at its apex.

Towson Town Center is expected to bring an estimated 1,600 new jobs and more retail business to the Towson community. At its opening the center will be one of the largest shopping malls in the Baltimore metropolitan area.

The Bank of California's Real Estate Industries Group has $2.9 billion in committed assets and $1.6 billion in outstanding assets, with a network of offices located in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Ore., Sacramento, Calif., Fresno, Calif., Newport Beach, Calif., and San Diego.

PHILLIPSBURG, NJ (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Tround International Inc. (NASDAQ:TROUE) announced Monday that it has been awarded Phase II of its contract with the U.S. Navy to develop a 25mm breachless gun and triangular round ammunition system, based upon the company's patented Open-Chamber Technology.

TORRANCE, CA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Sankyo Seiki (America) Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Sankyo Seiki Mfg. Co. Ltd., Tokyo, has acquired the assets of CaliPer Inc. and has formed a new division in Torrance dedicated to the design of quarter-inch cartridge tape drives for the OEM market.

Under the terms and conditions of the agreement, the newly formed Sankyo-America Tape Products Division will acquire CaliPer's DC600 product-related assets and the key employees of CaliPer.

Sankyo-America has named William Kreidler to head the division as vice president and general manager. Kreidler has overall responsibility for the Tape Products Division, including engineering, operations and worldwide sales. He reports to Ken Uchibori, senior vice president of the Tape Products Division.

According to Uchibori, Sankyo-America's focus for the new tape drive operation will be on increasing the capacity of the DC600 data cartridge systems, including current development of a 1.35-gigabyte product. Following completion of that project, he noted, Sankyo-America's next priority will be on migrating the QIC-1350 technology down to the DC2000 mini cartridge form factor.

Sankyo-Japan previously manufactured drives for CaliPer, and Uchibori noted that customers will now have a direct communication line to the manufacturer instead of being one step removed, as was the case when CaliPer functioned as a distribution arm.

The structure of the Tape Products Division is designed to take advantage of Sankyo-Japan's existing worldwide infrastructure, while specifically focusing design and development in the United States for close access to key customers, said Uchibori.

Sankyo-Japan previously had a key role in the cartridge tape market primarily as a contract manufacturer, but the objective now is to increase the company's market presence by selling direct to computer systems OEMs and distribution accounts.

In the new organization, Sankyo-Japan has responsibility for development of drive mechanisms, read-write electronics, recording heads and overall drive electronics.

Sankyo is a comprehensive precision electronics equipment manufacturer. In addition to tape products, the company is a leading supplier of floppy disk drive mechanisms and components for hard disk drives.

OAKLAND, CALIF (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - TransAction Financial Corp. announced Monday that it is rejecting a secret pact proposed by Sprouse-Reitz Stores Inc. of Portland, Ore., (NASDAQ:STRS) that would have halted TransAction Financial's offer to acquire all the company's shares for $17 per share in cash.

Dain Bosworth Inc., financial advisors to Sprouse-Reitz, offered to reveal confidential evaluation materials to Transaction Financial last week under the conditions that the evaluation material be kept secret and TransAction Financial agree to cease all its activities that might influence Sprouse-Reitz policies or result in acquiring or changing control of Sprouse-Reitz for two years.

TransAction Financial Corp.'s offer to purchase, for cash, all the outstanding common stock of Sprouse-Reitz at $17 per share was made on April 23, 1990. Prior to disclosure of the offer, Sprouse-Reitz stock had been trading at $8.50 per share.

''This secret pact reveals the board of directors of Sprouse-Reitz and its financial advisors have chosen a very strange approach to maximizing shareholder value. The board has refused to meet or negotiate with us for more than two months, now they are demanding we withdraw our offer as a precondition to providing any information,'' said Robert H. Bisno, chairman of TransAction Financial Corp.

''We will not enter into a secret pact with Sprouse-Reitz. Our offer to purchase the company is in the best interests of all shareholders. The board of directors should tell Robert A. Sprouse II to stop stonewalling and act upon our offer,'' Bisno stated.

TransAction Financial's $17 per share cash offer was not made contingent upon obtaining financing, but does require approval of shareholders owning both the voting and non-voting common stock of Sprouse-Reitz.

The Sprouse family only owns 21.4% of the company, but controls 78.3% of the voting common stock. Robert A. Sprouse II voted down a resolution seeking voting rights for all shares of non-voting common stock at the annual meeting of shareholders held in Portland, Ore., on June 4, 1990.

''We are growing tired of playing games,'' Bisno said. ''The Sprouse-Reitz board of directors and, specifically, the 'Special Committee of Independent Directors' have a lot of explaining to do if they wish to convince shareholders they are properly executing their fiduciary duties and honoring the public statement made by Robert Sprouse II on May 10, 1990, that 'the board fully recognizes its responsibilities to act in the best interests of all shareholders.'''

On June 15, Peter R. Bechen, one of Sprouse-Reitz's two outside directors resigned. Bechen, the 42-year-old president and chief executive officer of Pacific Reality Associates, had been re-elected to the board of directors on June 4, 1990.

The remaining outside director, Donald E. Tripp, a 58-year-old consultant, joined the board of directors of Sprouse-Reitz on Dec. 1, 1989, following the resignation on Nov. 30, 1989, of Ken L. Harrison, chairman and chief executive officer of Portland General Corp. According to disclosures filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Tripp acted as a paid consultant to Sprouse-Reitz in fiscal 1990.

The only other directors of the company are John A. Sprouse, 81, honorary chairman of the board and his sons, Robert A. Sprouse II, 54, president and chief executive officer, and John E. Sprouse, 49, who resigned as vice president-merchandising and secretary of the corporation on May 1, 1990, but will serve as a consultant to the company until May 1991. John E. Sprouse is reported to be on a sailboat headed for the South Pacific.

''TransAction Financial is mailing a copy of the secret pact proposed by Sprouse-Reitz to all shareholders so they can see for themselves the absurdity of the Sprouse proposition,'' Bisno said.

The $17 per share cash offer to acquire Sprouse-Reitz Stores Inc. is being made on behalf of TransAction Financial Corp., First San Francisco Holdings Ltd. and certain other investors. TransAction Financial Corp. owns in excess of $500 million in commercial, office and residential developments in urban, West Coast communities.

LOS ANGELES (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Edward's Steak House, the 44-year-old landmark restaurant near MacArthur Park that two months ago announced that it was succumbing to crime and urban blight, Monday (July 2) said that it has been sold and will close July 31.

The founders and owners of the popular downtown restaurant, Edward and Lynette Rausch, said their 36,326-square-foot property at 731 S. Alvarado St. in the once-fashionable Westlake district has been purchased by a group of investors. Terms of the sale were not disclosed.

Ken Rausch, son of Edward Rausch and president of the family business, said that scores of letters and phone calls have poured in since the family announced its decision to close last May 2.

''The emotions expressed by our customers -- many of whom have been coming to Edward's for 25 years or more -- have ranged from outrage to sadness to complete dismay,'' Rausch said.

''We are most appreciative of our customers' sentiments as well as the interest shown by the media. Our decision to close because of crime and related problems that have infiltrated the MacArthur Park neighborhood in recent years seemed to strike a tender nerve in Angelenos concerned about the continued deterioration of the central city and its impact on a long-established family business.''

Noting the 30-day operation launched by the Los Angeles Police Department June 21 to reclaim MacArthur Park, Rausch said he sincerely hopes the city will ultimately be able to deal with the crime, drug-dealing, prostitution and other problems that afflict the neighborhood.

''Unfortunately, any success they enjoy in cleaning up the park and environs comes too late for Edward's, our thousands of customers and 40 employees,'' he commented.

Rausch said that the restaurant would be open as usual seven days a week until the official closing on the evening of July 31. He added that to date none of Edward's employees have quit, and he will conduct a job fair on their behalf to help place them in other restaurants.

HONOLULU (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - A Hong Kong financial brokerage firm that arranges multi-million dollar transactions between banks throughout the world has announced it will open operations in Honolulu this fall.

A.J. Steven & Company Ltd., which recently filed incorporation papers here will be the first business of its type ever to operate in Hawaii and is the first tangible result of efforts to attract such operations in order to establish Honolulu as an international financial center.

Gov. John Waihee and Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi, both longtime supporters of the financial center effort, extended their welcome to the company, hoping it would be the first of many such institutions to choose Honolulu as a location for doing business.

When the operation begins here in September, it will introduce a financial product that it anticipates will put Honolulu in the forefront of an entirely new international banking transaction market.

The product is a U.S. dollar-denominated Interest Rate Futures Agreement that will offer banks an instrument for hedging asset and liability positions sensitive to fluctuations in interest rates.

In Honolulu, A.J. Steven also will offer its traditional brokerage services in foreign exchange, money market, and capital market transactions between banks, as well as trading in precious metals.

At this year's legislative session, a bill was passed that helped convince the company to invest in Honolulu. It identified inter-bank brokerage firms as ''financial institutions'' thus placing such operations under the franchise tax statutes and exempting them from the general excise tax. It was one of several successful bills championed by Sen. Anthony Chang and State Rep. David Ige.

A.J. Steven is a Hong Kong-based firm with 60 brokers, formerly known as Qwinzy Co. Ltd., which was established in 1951. In addition to opening operations here, where it will start up with six to eight brokers who will be hired locally, it currently is in the process of acquiring a Singapore-based inter-bank brokerage firm to complement its global network.

EDCH has been working for about 30 months, under the auspices of the Honolulu Financial Center Task Force, on a program to attract international financial businesses to Honolulu. The task force comprises representatives from the State and City governments and the business community.

Substantial financial support for the project comes from State funds through contractual arrangements between the Department of Business and Economic Development and EDCH -- with additional funds from EDCH member dues provided by private businesses and the City and County of Honolulu.

The initial offering of the fund was July 21, 1988.

The most significant change in the portfolio during June was an increase in the GNMA component from 10 percent of the portfolio to 35 percent. According to portfolio manager Frank Collecchia, senior vice president of Kemper Financial Services Inc., this move illustrates his positive outlook on the government market.

''We believe that interest rates will remain steady in the short term, then gradually work their way lower,'' he said. ''Consequently, we've increased our GNMA weightings for the time being to lock in yields which are currently 135 basis points above seven-year Treasuries.''

Collecchia added that the foreign bond component of the portfolio has added significant value so far this year, particularly in terms of total return.

Intermediate-term government securities account for approximately 59 percent of the fund's portfolio, mortgage-backed securities comprise approximately 35 percent of the portfolio and foreign bonds total approximately 6 percent of the portfolio.

The three largest foreign positions are from Belgium, Spain and The Netherlands. Most of the foreign bonds in the portfolio are hedged to help protect against currency losses. The fund has an average maturity of approximately 8-1/2 years.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - The three major liquid rocket engine companies in the United States have agreed to pursue the formation of a teaming arrangement to develop the propulsion system for the U.S. Air Force/NASA Advanced Launch System (ALS).

Under a memorandum of understanding (MOU) signed June 28, Aerojet, the aerospace segment of GenCorp, United Technologies' Pratt & Whitney and the Rocketdyne division of Rockwell International will work together to produce a teaming agreement and organizational structure to implement the MOU.

All three companies are recognized leaders in the development and manufacture of rocket propulsion systems and supporting hardware for the Space Shuttle and unmanned space launch vehicles. The teaming arrangement is designed to reduce the cost and risks of the ALS engine development program.

Details of the agreement are still being negotiated. The arrangement was requested by NASA, the agency charged with developing the ALS propulsion system.

The MOU outlines the following objectives:

CHICAGO (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Kemper High Income Trust (NYSE:KHI) Monday declared a monthly dividend of 10 cents per share, payable July 31, 1990, to shareholders of record, on July 13.

The initial offering of the fund was April 21, 1988.

Approximately 98 percent of the fund's portfolio is in high-yield securities. U.S. Treasury securities comprise approximately 2 percent.

According to Moody's Investors Service, the ratings breakdown for the long-term fixed income securities in the fund is approximately as follows: 5 percent Ba, 73 percent B, 11 percent Caa, 5 percent non-rated and 6 percent private placement.

The four largest holdings in the portfolio are RJR Holdings, TW Food Services, Talley Industries and Kroger. The fund's average maturity is approximately 12 years.

As it has since mid-February, the high-yield market once again exhibited positive price performance in June, illustrating that investor psychology is continuing to improve.

According to portfolio manager Ken Urbaszewski, senior vice president of Kemper Financial Services Inc., the current high-yield environment represents an attractive buying opportunity. Since the wide yield spread of approximately 7 percentage points between high-yield bonds and treasury securities is still evident, we believe that this wide spread continues to create exceptional values in the high-yield market, and more than compensates for the additional risk associated with these securities.

Kemper High Income Trust, one of six closed-end mutual funds managed by Kemper Financial Services Inc., is listed on the New York Stock Exchange and the Midwest Stock Exchange Inc.

SCOTTS VALLEY, CA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Marking the beginning of the true global user group, the Association of PC User Groups (APCUG) conducted the first-ever direct user-to-user international BBS teleconference involving the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Canada and the United States of America.

At the teleconference, data was sent real-time over a microcomputer link from the USSR to the United States. The USSR had dial-up access to APCUG's BBS while Canada connected to APCUG's BBS via a direct connection to the TYMNET network. Post and pre-teleconference participation included Japan, Australia and England who accessed the BBS via direct BT Tymnet connections.

Utilizing GLOBALNET, APCUG's worldwide user group BBS system, Dr. Jim Moody of Borland International manned a terminal in Russia. The demonstration was held in conjunction with the Soviet International Computer Forum in Moscow. There, Moody connected to the United States and APCUG's BBS and was the first person in recorded history to send an open public user-to-user electronic communication out of the USSR.

Moody's terminal was projected on a large screen as over 200 Soviet PC users watched the teleconference. The messages were receive by Paul Curtis, the GLOBALNET Sysop in Scotts Valley.

''The Soviets were just amazed at what was going on,'' said Moody. ''The average Russian just can't believe the extent of our communication infrastructure here in the United States. It was a very moving moment for everybody and especially for us. It was our first step toward realizing the dream we had of creating a truly international BBS.''

Many of the Soviets who observed the demonstration commented that contrary to what has been reported in the United States about perestroika and glasnost, they believe that the invention of the microprocessor in 1970, which has brought the USSR better telecommunication information technology is the impetus for the recent state liberalization.

As one of the original sponsors of APCUG's BBS, BT Tymnet is one of four companies that comprise APCUG's Consortium of Corporate Sponsors. The other companies include Borland International, Intel PCEO and Dell Computer Corp. BT Tymnet provides APCUG with a complementary network connection, an asynchronous host interface, modems and a BT Tymnet communications processor. The Association of PC User Groups (APCUG)

CHELMSFORD, MA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - In response to a lawsuit served from the U.S. District Court of Massachusetts by Dr. -Ing. Rudolf Hell,

GmbH, a Siemens company, on June 21, against Optronics of Chelmsford, and its parent corporation, Intergraph Corp. of Huntsville, Ala., Optronics and Intergraph announce their intentions to vigorously defend their rights to continue using Optronics' proprietary halftone screening technology incorporated in multiple products in their line of laser-based imagesetters.

The Hell legal action is for pecuniary and injunctive relief for patent infringement with regard to a ''method for the electro-optical reproduction of halftone pictures'' (Hell patent 4,084,183), otherwise described as a rational screening technology, widely used in the graphic arts and PostScript printing worlds.

Optronics and Intergraph contend that the patent which Hell is attempting to enforce is not infringed upon by Optronics and is invalid.

Optronics had sought expert legal opinion and had received clearances from patent attorneys prior to introducing to market imagesetters utilizing the rational screening technology in question.

In addition, in papers soon to be filed in court, Optronics contends that the patent mentioned in the suit is an unlawful attempt to extend the life of a patent covering screening technology (Hell patent 3,657,472) which expired and is now in the public domain.

''Optronics takes exception to the continuing public smear campaign by Hell which is an undisguised attempt to unfairly monopolize the typesetting and imagesetting markets both in Europe and in the United States,'' commented Bruce Harrison, Optronics' general manager.

''Optronics believes these actions are unprincipled. We are seeking advice on approaching the U.S. Justice Department in order to pursue anti-trust action aimed at restraining the newly combined Linotype-Hell conglomerate from destroying fair competition in the world imagesetting market,'' Harrison concluded.

Optronics believes it is being singled out by Hell in this legal action because the aggressive price/performance characteristics of its imagesetters, combined with their high quality attributes, threaten the dominance of Hell's much higher priced products.

Optronics and Intergraph Corp. provide indemnification to all of their customers against any costs that may arise as a result of Hell's action.

The Optronics division of Intergraph Corp. manufactures and markets precision imaging systems, including laser imagesetters, photoplotters, scanners, and film recorders, for computer graphics applications in engineering, manufacturing, scientific analysis and electronic publishing

PORTLAND, ME (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Vincent E. Furey Jr., president and chief executive officer of The One Bancorp (NASDAQ:TONE), a $2.3-billion-asset, Maine-based bank holding company, announced Friday that Arthur M. Burton Jr. has resigned, effective immediately, from his position as chairman, president and chief executive officer of Southstate Bank for Savings, a $325-million-asset, Brockton, Mass.-based subsidiary of The One.

Furey said that Burton and the Southstate board of directors held differing views as to the future direction of Southstate. Burton stated that since Southstate has been offered for sale by The One Bancorp as part of the holding company's capital recovery plan, it seemed an appropriate time for him to seek other opportunities.

Southstate's board has appointed Dr. Thomas J. Whalen, a director since 1976, as chairman, and has formed a search committee to identify a successor to Burton. Whalen, 66, was formerly superintendent of public schools for both Brockton and Weston, Mass.

Burton, 49, joined Southstate Bank for Savings in 1985 as its executive vice president. He was elected a director, president and chief executive officer in January 1986 and chairman of the board in 1988. Prior to joining Southstate, Burton was active in senior executive roles in two banks in Maine and in 1976 served as Superintendent of the Bureau of Banking for the State of Maine.

Chartered in 1881 as Brockton Savings Bank, Southstate converted from mutual to stock form in 1987 and changed its name to Southstate Bank for Savings. Southstate operates seven banking offices in Brockton, Hingham and East Weymouth, Mass. It was acquired by The One Bancorp in October 1988, along with East Weymouth Savings Bank, which was merged into Southstate.

The One Bancorp is a $2.3-billion-asset, Maine-based bank holding company with banking subsidiaries in Maine, Connecticut and Massachusettts.

MENLO PARK, CA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - As part of its expansion into the international marketplace, Hybrid Fax Inc. Monday announced the appointment of John H. Harris as vice president of international operations.

Hybrid Fax manufactures the popular JetFax product line, which delivers plain-paper facsimile documents onto office laser printers.

Harris will be responsible for identifying appropriate and promising international markets for the JetFax products, setting up distribution channels, obtaining PTT approvals and establishing an international sales and support infrastructure. Initially, Harris is concentrating on the Western European and Australasian marketplace.

To date, Hybrid Fax has established JetFax distributors in Australia, Austria, the Benelux countries, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Ireland, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and West Germany, and seeks distributors in other Western European countries.

Harris previously served as Western Hemisphere & Far East sales manager for Digicon Inc., and regional sales manager for Landmark Graphics Corp. John operates out of Hybrid's corporate headquarters in Menlo Park.

The 2''-wide JetFax connects to any Hewlett-Packard LaserJet-compatible printer, enabling users to receive faxes on plain bond paper rather than curled, expensive thermal fax paper. The JetFax does not impact other printing operations; if a fax is received while the printer is in use, the fax is stored in the JetFax internal memory until the printer is available.

Used in conjunction with the new JetFaxPC fax transmission software, the JetFax also enables users to send PC files as fax documents directly through the JetFax, without the need for internal fax hardware and phone lines at the PC.

Hybrid Fax Inc., was founded in February 1988, to develop, manufacture and market unique, affordable plain paper fax products. The JetFax, introduced in November 1988, is sold domestically through a nationwide dealer network. The JetFax is one of the few desktop fax products manufactured in the United States.

PORTLAND, OR (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Norman Perry, chairman of the shareholders committee to Rejuvenate CompCare, announced Monday that the committee will ask the shareholders of Comprehensive Care Corp. (NYSE: CMP) to consent to the removal of the entire board of directors of that company and to elect seven nominees of the committee as the new board.

The committee's slate of nominees is headed up by James Carmany, formerly executive vice president of hospital operations for Comprehensive Care Corp., who left the company in May of last year following a dispute over his opposition to the First Hospital Corp. merger plan.

The committee tentatively has selected Carmany as chief executive officer and is developing plans to curtail costs and restore the company to profitability.

Other committee nominees include Stan Groth, a hospital management engineer whose specialty is turning around troubled health care organizations and Harvey Felsen, chief executive officer of Enseco Inc., a company he founded which was sold to Corning Glass early last year.

Felsen also has turn-around experience with Foodways International. Experience in turn-arounds and the intensified competition associated with deregulation is also provided by committee nominees Michael O'Toole, executive vice president of Burlington Air Imports.

O'Toole was formerly associated with WTC International N.V., which was acquired by Burlington in 1987. The slate of nominees is rounded out by two experienced businessmen from Washington state, Charles Moore and Robert Miller, and Norman Perry, a lumberman and investor from Portland.

Three of the nominees, Perry, Felsen and O'Toole, were previously invited to join the board but declined, believing a change in control is necessary to achieve the results which shareholders are seeking.

This committee action has been triggered by losses reported by the company in every quarter of this fiscal year; the failure of the board to call an annual meeting in 1989 (the incumbent directors were elected in October 1988); and attempts by the board to entrench itself with restrictive bylaw provisions and a poison pill plan.

The committee has three goals: (1) To elect a board of directors which is responsive to shareholders and will keep them informed, (2) the restoration of profitable operations, and (3) a redeployment of assets and liabilities to enhance the value of the company.

The committee has retained D.F. King & Co. Inc., New York, to assist with the consent solicitation.

DENVER (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - First Interstate Bank of Denver Monday announced that it has completed a major underwriting that will make the dream of home ownership possible for more than a thousand Orange County, Fla., families.

Bob Lewis, vice president of Capital Markets for First Interstate Bank of Denver, explained that the rapid expansion of the service economy in the Walt Disney World area has created a great need for first-time homebuyer programs in Orange County.

First Interstate Bank of Denver, the nation's fifth largest housing bond underwriter, joined forces with Disney Cos. and the Orange County Housing Finance Authority (OCHFA) to make over $78 million in low-cost mortgages available for 1,200 families with incomes below $34,000.

The loans will be offered at an 8.3 percent interest rate, which is 2 percentage points below conventional rates.

First Interstate Bank of Denver completed a $78,680,000 tax-exempt mortgage refunding, and a $60,015,000 taxable collateralized mortgage obligation for the Orange County Housing Finance Authority so that OCHFA could offer the low-income mortgages. A collateralized mortgage offering allowed OCHFA to sell the assets under its 1980 Single Family Program, and issue new taxable/tax-exempt bonds that would provide the funds for new mortgages.

As senior underwriters, First Interstate Bank deferred all management fees and out-of-pocket expenses to complete the transactions that will help resolve critical affordable housing problems in Orange County.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, CA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - In a sluggish toy retail environment, sales of Sega of America's 16-bit Genesis video game system have exceeded expectations for the first six months of the year, the company reported Monday.

Genesis became the ninth highest selling toy in the United States, according to the June issue of Toy and Hobby World, the noted toy industry trade publication.

''Despite the slowdown of traditional toy sales, the video game industry is growing faster than ever,'' said Michael Katz, president, Sega Consumer Products Division. ''According to retailers, Genesis, as the only true 16-bit system, is the hottest new video game product on the market.

''We have aggressively gone against Nintendo and have over 85 percent of the 16-bit video game market; we expect to capture an increasing share this year. Our warranty response card surveys indicate that 60 percent of Genesis buyers owned a Nintendo and have traded up.''

Genesis, introduced in fall 1989, is noted for its superior 16-bit technology and game play. More than 500,000 units have been sold to date and over 1 million systems are expected to be in homes by the end of 1990.

Hot new Genesis games include Michael Jackson's Moonwalker, Joe Montana Football, Pat Riley Basketball, James ''Buster'' Douglas ''Knockout'' Boxing, Dick Tracy and Mickey Mouse. In addition, over 15 third party software companies are now creating games for Genesis. In total, more than 50 games will be at retail by December.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Nantucket Industries, Inc. (ASE:NAN) Monday announced results for the first quarter of its 1991 fiscal year.

For the thirteen weeks ended June 2, 1990 net sales were $9,783,550, down 19.5 percent from $12,146,332 in last year's first quarter. The reduction was predominantly due to the completion in August 1989 of a low margin white underwear program which accounted for more than $2 million in sales during last year's first quarter, partially offset by an 88 percent, or $700,000 increase in sales by the sock division.

In light of the slowdown in the economy and the financial difficulties encountered by various apparel retailers, Nantucket's credit insurance carrier has taken a more conservative view for establishing various customer credit lines, somewhat restricting Nantucket's shipments.

Despite the decline in sales, the current first quarter gross profit margin of 25.2 percent approximated last year's. The company anticipates margin improvements in future quarters to be derived from our 60,000 square foot plant expansion in Cartersville, Ga., which was completed at the end of May 1990.

Net income for the current first quarter was $272,383 or 11 cents per share as compared to $615,629 or 25 cents per share one year earlier.

Commenting, George J. Gold, Chairman of Nantucket, stated, ''Considering current economic conditions, we are very satisfied with the results of our first quarter. Last year's first quarter was atypical since our third quarter is historically our strongest.

'' With the launch of three new brands later this year, McGregor for men's undergarments, Danskin socks, and Thermos brand thermal underwear, plus a major private label program for Avon, we anticipate excellent results for fiscal 1991.''

Gold further reported, ''Our balance sheet is stronger than ever. Working capital at the close of the first quarter stood at $15,452,664, up $1,316,334 at 1990 fiscal year end and our current ratio was 6.2:1 up from 5.1:1 at the end of fiscal 1990.''

DALLAS (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Zfax Image Corp. (NASDAQ:ZFAXF) Monday announced financial results for the fiscal year ended March 31.

The increase in the weighted average number of shares outstanding in fiscal 1990 was the result of the company's initial public offering of 1,150,000 shares of common stock completed in September 1989.

The increase in revenues in the year ending March 31, is the result of increased sales at the company's Dallas facsimile equipment and supplies retail store. The net loss in fiscal 1990 increased due to costs associated with the public offering, increased efforts at the retail store and research and development costs associated with the company's portable facsimile machine, the PF 4003.

Harmon Hardy, chief executive officer, commented, ''During fiscal 1990, Zfax made significant progress in the development of our ruggedized, lightweight portable fax machine. COLUMBIA, SC (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Robert K. King, president of Wells American Corp. (ASE: WAC), Monday announced the company's fourth quarter and year end results for fiscal 1990.

The company indicated that its fourth quarter and fiscal 1990 results were adversely impacted by the suspension of microcomputer manufacturing and sales activities in January of 1990. The company had no sales for the fourth quarter ended March 31, 1990, and incurred a net loss of $4,325,000 or 88 cents per share.

This compares to sales of $5,141,000 and a net profit of $2,034,000, or 40 cents per share for the like period in fiscal 1989. (Fourth quarter 1989 results included a favorable litigation settlement.)

Total sales for the year ended March 31, 1990 were $6,206,000 compared to $13,178,000 for fiscal 1989. The company incurred a net loss of $7,071,000, or $1.43 per share for fiscal 1990 compared to a net loss of $102,000, or 2 cents per share in fiscal 1989.

The company stated that fiscal 1990 fourth quarter losses included approximately $1,743,000 which was incurred because of inventory write-downs associated with the suspension of manufacturing and about $1,183,000 which was related to the reduction of certain real estate and surplus personal property to estimated net realizable value.

In announcing its year end results, the company stated that the suspension of marketing and production of its CompuStar I and II microcomputers followed a prolonged period during which it was engaged in a dispute with a major trade magazine publisher. The dispute, which is currently in litigation, has resulted in the company being unable to advertise in industry publications which have historically been the most effective for generating sales.

King stated that in response to the company's increasing losses it has laid off personnel, closed field offices and reduced operations to essential services only.

The company has also formed a new subsidiary to develop a new product line that will be distributed to a different market. The company's new products will be Apple Macintosh compatible and can be sold directly to Macintosh users nationwide.

Development of these new products has been ongoing during the entire fourth quarter. The company plans to begin production of the first of these new products later this month.

King acknowledged that Wells American's revenues must soon be restored to a level which prevents further operating losses if the company's capital resources are to be sufficient to maintain ongoing operations.

He indicated that Wells management is exploring the availability of additional capital, studying ways to reduce expense levels further and investigating other initiatives.

Wells American's common securities are traded on the American Stock Exchange under the ticker symbol WAC. For further information on Wells American and its products, contact Robert K. King, president, at the company's corporate headquarters. The address is suite 122, 121 Executive Center Drive, Columbia, S.C. 29210; facsimile: 803/794-0810.

CLEVELAND (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Compared to other states, Ohio does not fare well in providing quality infrastructure services yet the state ranks in the top five as a leader in infrastructure policy, Society Corp.'s chief economist reports.

Studies show that more than $2.1 billion must be invested in Ohio's infrastructure to bring up to standard its highways, bridges, railroads, airports, ports, mass transit system, sewers, waste treatment facilities and public utilities, Kenneth T. Mayland, Society's chief economist said.

In Society Corp.'s quarterly ''Regional Review,'' Mayland writes that as the Midwest economy becomes more service- and export-oriented, the demand will continue to rise for infrastructure services as airports, communication systems and port facilities. Efforts to clean up the environment will increase the demand for wastewater treatment and hazardous waste plants.

''As the gap between infrastructure demand and supply widens,'' Mayland reports, ''additional financial resources are required for new construction, rehabilitation and maintenance.'' On the other hand, the move away from heavy industries toward lighter and more technology-oriented industries will slow the demand for infrastructure components such as railroads.

In their research, Mayland and Sociey's economics department found that the condition of Ohio's infrastructure ranks 23 among the 50 states, that 12 percent of its rural and urban highway system is deficient (ranking it 38 in this category), that 21 percent of the bridges in Ohio are considered deficient and that $304 for every Ohioan must be spent to meet the state's unmet sewage treatment needs. (Ohio ranks 38 in sewage systems.)

That's some of the bad news. Among the good news is that members of the state government and Ohio business leaders are well aware of the situation and have been working to correct it. Ohio ''earned an honor grade, 'A,' in the infrastructure and amenities (amenities include state parks and other recreation areas) policy category issued by the Corporation for Enterprise and Development,'' Mayland reports.

The Society Survey Board, made up of more than 1,000 Midwest business leaders, rated the quality of the infrastructure serving their firms as ''adequate,'' Mayland said.

''Not a single category was voted to be 'good to excellent' or 'in need of significant improvement,' '' Mayland said. The categories that received the lowest ratings were commuter transit, bridges, solid waste plants and highways.

The inadequacies of this region's highway network, according to the survey are most evident in central Ohio: Columbus, Lancaster, Zanesville. Southern Ohio highways -- including those serving Cincinnati, Dayton, Portsmouth, Springfield -- were judged best.

The majority of Ohio business owners reported they have not suffered any loss in productivity because of infrastructure deficiencies but believed that existing deficiencies have caused them to be less profitable.

Society Corp. is one of the largest bank holding companies in the Midwest with assets of $15.5 billion at March 31. The holding company has 360 offices in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Florida. INDIANA, PA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Biocontrol Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:BICO), recently concluded a successful clinical trial in animals of its vascular access device, according to company management.

The company plans to apply to the Food and Drug Administration immediately for approval to beign clinical studies in humans.

Biocontrol's vascular access device, known as the Bio-Port, is a drug delivery receptacle which is implanted beneath the skin with a catheter placed in a vein between the receptacle and the heart.

Drugs are injected through the skin and into the receptacle, from where they are then carried into the patient's vascular system. The purpose for using the device is to eliminate damage which can be caused to blood vessels when repeated injections are administered in chemotherapy or other treatments requiring multiple injections over a period of time.

David L. Purdy, president of Biocontrol, said that the company believes their Bio-Port design is superior to designs currently on the market because of its unique features, including a swivel connection of the catheter to the port to facilitate placement in the body, a special two-way valve located at the end of the catheter to prevent clotting and blockage of the patient's blood, and a catheter ''disconnect'' which allows the surgeon to cut the catheter to a desired length for a custom fit.

The company's market research has indicated a $50 million annual market for vascular access devices worldwide.

ROCHESTER, NY (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - The Ginna nuclear power plant marked 20 years of service to the greater Rochester community on Sunday, (July 1).

In that time, the plant has generated more than 64 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity. The plant meets about 50 percent of RG&E customers'needs.

The Ginna facility has historically been one of the top performing nuclear plants in the nation. In its 20-year lifetime, it has been available about 77 percent of the time. The industry average is 61 percent. Because of annual shutdowns for scheduled maintenance, power plants are almost never available 100 percent of the time.

The Ginna unit also aids the environment. Since it went on line in 1970, its use of nuclear fuel has avoided the burning of 25 million tons of coal of 100 million barrels of oil.

Ginna has saved RG&E customers about $700 million over the cost of burning coal, or $1.4 billion over the cost of burning oil.

The plant was built by the Westinghouse Corp. for $88 million. Construction was completed in three years.

RG&E began planning for the Ginna facility in 1964, although the company's participation in nuclear energy research had begun in the early 1950s. The plant is named for Robert Emmett Ginna, the former RG&E chairman and chief executive officer who led the company into the nuclear era. He retired in 1967.

MURRAY HILL, NJ (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Dun & Bradstreet Business Credit Services and MCI Communications Corp. Monday announced a co-marketing agreement that gives MCI fax customers a special introductory offer on D&B Express, a service that delivers D&B credit reports on a pay-as-you-go basis by calling 1-800-Try-1-DNB.

''We wanted to give our customers the opportunity to see D&B Express for themselves,'' said Gerald H. Taylor, president of MCI's mid-Atlantic division. ''It's one more way to turn their fax machines, teamed with MCI, into powerful business tools.''

Under the agreement, MCI fax customers nationwide can call D&B's toll-free number and access their first Business Information Report via D&B Express for $45, a considerable savings compared to the regular D&B Express price of $60. D&B will then transmit the requested report within minutes via MCI fax.

With D&B Express service, introduced earlier this year, companies can order D&B reports, without an upfront contract, by simply calling 1-800-TRY-1-DNB. They can later choose to ''roll over'' their D&B Express account into a regular D&B contract.

''This agreement provides a way for MCI's customers to see how easy it is to use their fax machines to access valuable, detailed business information from D&B,'' said William Bak, executive vice president of D&B Business Credit Services.

MCI's Gerald Taylor commented further, ''The agreement with Dun & Bradstreet is yet another example of MCI's innovative approach to satisfying te market's needs while delivering additional value and opportunity to our MCI fax customers.''

The D&B Business Information Report, the most widely accepted information tool for commercial credit and risk-management in the U.S. and available on millions of U.S.-based companies, contains data such as payment information, financial information, background and history on a company and its principals, public filings, and other relevant data.

The special introductory offer is being promoted directly to MCI fax customers in a promotional mailing that began the week of June 25. The agreement also provides special incentives to MCI's dealer network whenever a customer orders a D&B Express report via MCI fax service.

D&B Business Credit Services, a company of The Dun & Bradstreet Corp., is the nation's leading supplier of business information. Its products support the needs of credit management and also a variety of specialized industries such as banking, insurance underwriting and the apparel industry.

MCI is the world's second largest long-distance provider, supplying a full range of voice and data telecommunications services to business and residential customers, as well as to a growing number of government agencies.

MCI's long-distance services enable customers to call throughout the United States and dial direct to 170 nations representing 99 percent of overseas calling from the United States.

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Eagle Telephonics Inc. (NASDAQ:EGLA) Monday announced that it has introduced the first on-hook eavesdrop-proof electronic telephone, trademarked ''Safe Set''.

The company is the first to have received the highest level U.S. Government approval for any electronic telephone on the market when the instrument is ''not in use.''

The company believes that there are substantial unmet government mandated requirements that the ''Safe Set'' can fulfill.

The U.S. Government approval is designated Class X1B type acceptance and was received from the Telephone Security Group of the Government after successful completion of testing at the Interagency Test Laboratory of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Eagle will market the product through its traditional marketing channels and directly to various military, government and defense industry institutions that require on-hook audio security telephones.

According to Alex Wenger, Eagle vice president of engineering, ''We believe that the Safe Set is the only electronic telephone instrument on the market today that has been granted this accreditation level. Ordinary phones, when not in use, can be accessed by sophisticated electronic equipment to intercept minute electronic signals generated by the human voice in the vicinity of the telephone instrument. The Safe Set prevents the generation of such electronic signals which can be intercepted by an electronic eavesdropping device.''

Eagle Telephonics currently offers products to the audio security market. The single-line Safe Set is an important addition to Eagle's current offerings of security products because it will operate with virtually any telephone central office and PBX equipment.

Eagle Telephonics Inc. produces business electronic telephone keyset systems that are unique in their compatibility with standard ''1A2'' type telephone equipment (traditional electro-mechanical style electronic business phones), and unique in their ability to interface with Centrex services networks of the Regional Bell Operating Companies as well as switchboards that handle conventional phones.

In conjunction with today's announcement, the company has lowered the price on the Dell System 425E(TM), its 25-megahertz, i486-based personal computer announced in March 1990. The $1500 reduction, effective immediately, affects all standard configurations of the System 425E. The System 433E will be offered at the same price as the Dell System 425E prior to today's price reduction.

The System 433E offers the highest level of i486 performance at a price that is significantly lower than the Compaq Deskpro 486/25, an i486-based personal computer running at 25-megahertz. It also offers 25 percent to 30 percent processor performance increases over the Deskpro 486/25.

The System 433E is targeted toward the power user with high-performance applications needs such as software development, large spreadsheets for financial analysis, CAD/CAM/CAE, single and multiuser UNIX(R) applications and high-end network server applications.

FAIRFIELD, NJ (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Prime Motor Inns Inc. (NYSE:PDQ) announced Monday that it had completed the previously-announced sale of its Howard Johnson and Ramada franchise businesses to an affiliate of Blackstone Capital Partners L.P. for $170 million in cash.

Proceeds of the sale were used primarily to pay down bank debt, although a portion will be invested in further development of the company's AmeriSuites and Wellesley Inn chains. The sale will result in a pre-tax gain, estimated to be approximately $60 million, which will be recognized in the company's first fiscal quarter ending Sept. 30, 1990.

Prime said that it had entered into an amended bank credit agreement providing for the waiver and modification of certain provisions under Prime's bank facility and extension of the maturity of $60 million of demand loans to March 25, 1991. Effectiveness of the agreement is subject to certain conditions which Prime expects to satisfy shortly.

In addition, the company announced that, in conjunction with its previously-announced strategic restructuring, it was establishing additional reserves and writing down assets. The aggregate amount of these reserves and valuation adjustments, which will be reflected in the company's results of operations for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1990, will be approximately $150 million, of which approximately $80 million relates to Prime's investment in certain securities of Servico Inc. and other transactions with Servico.

As a result, the company anticipates a substantial after-tax loss for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1990. Prime said that it is continuing to work with Servico to effect a recapitalization of Servico and to realize cash from the sale of certain Servico's assets. However, in light of current market conditions, there are no assurances that any such transactions can be completed in the near future.

Prime Motor Inns owns, operates or manages 136 properties with approximately 20,400 rooms under the AmeriSuites, Wellesley Inn, Howard Johnson, Ramada, Holiday Inns, Sheraton, Hilton, Marriott and Days Inns.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Lotus Development Corp. Monday filed separate suits in Boston's U.S. District Court against two California software companies, charging copyright infringement of the company's best-selling software, Lotus 1-2-3.

The suits charge that products marketed by Borland International Inc. of Scotts Valley, Calif., and The Santa Cruz Operation Inc. (SCO) of Santa Cruz, Calif., violate Lotus' copyrights in the user interface of Lotus 1-2-3. The specific products named in the suits are Quattro and Quattro Pro from Borland International and SCO Professional from SCO.

Federal District Court Judge Robert Keeton last week ruled that Paperback Software International of Berkeley, Calif., and Stephenson Software Ltd. of Vancouver, British Columbia violated Lotus' copyright in Lotus 1-2-3 by copying substantial elements of the software program's user interface.

''Lotus 1-2-3 is our most significant product, in which we have invested considerable resources to meet the evolving needs of our customers,'' said Thomas Lemberg, Lotus' vice president and general counsel. ''We have a responsibility to our customers, employees and shareholders to protect our product from unlawful copying.

''Among other things, we believe that in developing Quattro and Quattro Pro and SCO Professional, Borland International and The Santa Cruz Operation have copied the Lotus 1-2-3 commands and menu structure virtually in their entirety,'' Lemberg added. ''These are specific elements of Lotus 1-2-3 that the Court last week ruled cannot be copied. This suit has nothing to do with customers, resellers or add-in developers of either Borland or SCO.''

In his 113-page decision last Thursday, Judge Keeton said that the user interface of Lotus 1-2-3, including the structure, sequence and organization of the program's menus, are copyrightable.

''I conclude that a menu command structure is capable of being expressed in many if not an unlimited number of ways, and that the command structure of 1-2-3 is an original and nonobvious way of expressing a command structure,'' Judge Keeton stated in the opinion. ''The user interface of 1-2-3 is its most unique element, and is the aspect that has made 1-2-3 so popular,'' the Court wrote.

''The software industry has thrived because of the innovative creations of hosts of developers,'' Lemberg said. ''As last week's decision makes clear, the copyright law protects such innovative expressions as the menus in Lotus 1-2-3. Lawful competition is based on innovation, not imitation. One effect of seeking to enforce our copyrights is to protect software innovators everywhere from illegal copying, which ultimately leads to advances in technology that benefit customers.''

NORTH CANTON, OH (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Belden & Blake Energy Co. (AMEX:BBE) Monday announced that it has completed the acquisition of all of the assets of 15 Enterprise Energy limited partnerships in exchange for 588,246 BBE units.

At a meeting held in Cambridge, Ohio, the limited partners of the Enterprise partnerships voted to approve the sale of the assets and liquidation of the partnerships.

In aggregate, Belden & Blake Energy Co. acquired the majority interest in approximately 196 wells located in southern Ohio. The wells are estimated to have remaining proved natural gas reserves of 3.3 billion cubic feet (Bcf) and oil reserves of 101,000 barrels.

''Reserves of the magnitude acquired in the Enterprise purchase will more than replace the company's expected production for 1990. As we stated at the beginning of the year, our goal is to add at least $10 million in present value to the company's reserve base in 1990. The Enterprise transaction, coupled with reserves acquired earlier this year, achieve more than 60 percent of this stated goal,'' said Henry S. Belden IV, co-general partner.

Belden & Blake Energy Co. is a limited partnership traded on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol ''BBE.'' The company operates exclusively in Ohio, New York, and Pennsylvania, and is a major producer of oil and natural gas in the Appalachian Basin.

LOUISVILLE, KY (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - ICH Corp. (ASE:ICH), a Louisville-based insurance holding company, Monday announced that it has successfully closed a $225 million senior bridge loan facility with Chase Manhattan Bank and Barclays Bank and has received a commitment regarding the conversion of that facility into a 3-1/2 year, $250 million term loan.

The term loan is expected to be in place by the end of the third quarter. The proceeds of the facility were used to repay fully ICH's prior senior credit facility and to repurchase a 15 percent subordinated note from Tenneco Inc. at 84 percent of its face amount.

ICH also announced the closing of the previously announced sale of an indirect wholly owned subsidiary, Marquette National Life Insurance Co. (''Marquette'').

Commenting on the new facility and term loan commitment, John A. Franco, chief executive officer of ICH said: ''I am very satisfied with the new lending arrangements. This is another step in the strategic repositioning of the company.

''We are delighted that two of the leading lenders to the insurance industry haved joined together in this banking relationship. This is an excellent combination of Barclays, a member of our previous bank group, and Chase Manhattan, a bank outside that group.''

Marquette has been sold to Robert T. Shaw (chairman of ICH) and Consolidated National Corp., which is controlled by Shaw.

During the first half of July ICH expects to complete a related reinsurance agreement ceding to Marquette certain insurance business and related assets, including a substantial portion of high yield bonds and other volatile investments it currently holds.

The transactions have been structured in the manner previously disclosed by ICH and provide for ICH to receive value believed to be equivalent to the market value of the assets transferred, as well as significant participation in any future improvement in the values of the transferred business and assets.

As a result of the sale and the related reinsurance agreement when consummated, ICH is reducing, by approximately $925 million, liabilities for certain insurance products not considered strategic in nature. It is also increasing the statutory surplus of its operating companies by approximately $25 million and is reducing ICH's exposure to future volatility in the high-yield bond market.

No material gain or losss is expected from the transactions and future earnings are not likely to be reduced as a result of the transactions.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Bolt Beranek and Newman Inc. (BBN) Monday said that Delta Air Lines, Inc. (Delta) has purchased BBN's remaining supply of Christian Rovsing network equipment for $7 million.

BBN assumed responsibility in August, 1988 to complete a network development contract between Delta and Christian Rovsing, a Denmark-based company owned at that time by Alcatel N.V. In connection with the assumption of the contract, BBN received cash, as well as certain Christian Rovsing technology and equipment which BBN originally recorded at a nominal value.

BBN substantially completed the Delta contract in 1989. The hardware Delta is currently purchasing represents all of the remaining Christian Rovsing equipment received by BBN in its transaction from Alcatel. The sale to Delta was completed in two phases, with BBN recording approximately $2 million of the sale in its quarter ended June 30, 1990, and the remainder in the following quarter. BBN will realize a gain which approximates the proceeds from each phase of the sale.

Headquartered in Cambridge, Mass., Bolt Beranek and Newman is a diversified high technology corporation. BBN develops, manufacturers, sells and suppports products including private wide-area communication networks, data analysis software, and parallel processing computers; provides research and development services in the computer and physical

QUINCY, MA (JULY 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Excel Bancorp Inc. (OTC:XCEL) announced Monday that it will add approximately $4.2 million to its allowance for possible loan losses and reserve for other real estate owned for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990.

The combined allowances after the additions and net of charge-offs at June 30, 1990, will be approximately $9.9 million.

In making the announcement, Chales R. Simpson Jr., president and chief executive officer of Excel Bancorp Inc., stated that the additional reserves are the result of the continuing deterioration of real estate values, an increase in non-performing loans and the Massachusetts economy.

''As a result of the additional reserves, it is anticipated that Excel will report a net loss for the quarter ended June 30, 1990, of approximately $2 million,'' said Simpson, ''the specific amount and detailed financial results for the second quarter will be released on or about July 18, 1990. Nevertheless, Excel and its subsidiaries, Quincy Savings Bank and Lincoln Trust Co., continue to exceed all capital requirements of the Federal Reserve Board and the FDIC.''

Further, in a related matter as previously reported, future cash dividends are expected to be predicated primarily on whether the economy deteriorates further or stabilizes. Simpson stated that although the second quarter will produce a loss, the previously announced cash dividend payable on July 20, 1990, will be paid.

On May 31, 1990, Excel Bancorp Inc. had assets of $915 million and stockholders' equity of $107.9 million.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (JULY 2) UPI - The use of chemicals to kill insects, weeds, and other pests affecting U.S. crops dates to the years just after World War II, when technology developed for chemical warfare was transferred to agriculture.

In the years since - during just one generation - commercial pesticide use increased dramatically, creating a $4 billion industry by 1990.

As the use of pesticides grew, U.S. farmers became the envy of producers around the world and hungry nations increasingly looked to the United States for food aid and guidance in increasing their agricultural production.

During this boom period for U.S. agriculture, there was little recognition that pesticides could be harmful until Rachel Carson's disturbing ''Silent Spring'' was published in 1962.

Nearly 30 years later, the national debate on pesticides continues, intensified by last year's Alar scare and a ban on Chilean fruit resulting from fears about poisoned grapes.

In the center of the debate over pesticide use are farmers like Shorty Carlile.

Carlile, who devotes his 2,000-acre farm near Pleasant Hill, Mo. to corn and soybean production, said the public often forgets that farmers share consumers' health concerns.

''We don't even want to use anything out there's out there that's going to be harmful to us,'' he said. ''We use it and our children use it, our hired hand uses it. If it's something that's going to be harmful to us, we don't want it.''

David Pimentel, an entomologist at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., estimates annual returns from pesticide use at $16 billion, or $4 to every $1 invested.

While the figures indicate the benefits of pesticide use outweigh the costs, that does not include the environmental and social costs of using pesticides,'' he said.

The annual cost to society from pesticide use is about 21,000 cases of poisoning, 6,000 cases of cancer, and 35 deaths, based on figures from the Environmental Protection Agency and U.S. poison control centers, Pimentel said.

A national conference on ''Advances in Pesticide Medicine'' last August at the University of California-Davis estimated the number of pesticide poisoning cases much higher at 73,000, and deaths at an average of 26 a year.

As concerns about health and the environment mount, farmers, environmentalists, and the agricultural chemicals industry increasingly agree that pesticide use must be reduced.

But they face another difficult question: How much can pesticide use be reduced to maintain U.S. agricultural production levels?

Recent studies on the effects of lowering pesticide use have stirred controversy because of their conclusions about production and farmers' profit levels.

A September 1989 report on sustainable agriculture by the National Research Council concluded that well-managed alternative farming systems use less pesticides and other farm chemicals.

Sustainable agriculture refers to a variety of practices, the report said, including crop rotations and the use of natural predators to control pests.

But a column in the December 1989 issue of Farm Journal magazine criticized the report, saying the case studies cited were ''a science nightmare.''

The column said the NRC report omitted results of a long-term Nebraska study that showed net returns to farmers were 70 percent higher from a conventional farming method that included pesticide application.

The alternative that brought a lower return rotated corn, soybean, and oat crops, eliminated chemicals, and substituted manure for chemical fertilizer.

''Fanatical notions that rotations, manure, livestock and small farms will match current production and economic results don't fit the facts,'' wrote Farm Journal staff economist John Merten. ''The 17 scientists who approved this book took a detour. Our car was putting out too much smoke, so they got us a horse!''

The National Agricultural Chemicals Association, an industry group based in Washington, estimates that eliminating all pesticides and fertilizers would raise food costs 45 percent and cut the supply of fruits and vegetables 50 percent a year.

David McCarthy, NACA vice president for scientific and regulatory affairs, said farmers generally use chemicals judiciously and properly.

''There's a picture that's been painted that farmers don't care and just go out and dump chemicals on the field,'' he said. ''They don't just put chemicals on for the sake of putting them on. They put them on because they have a problem.''

John Ikerd, coordinator of the Center for Sustainable Agriculture at the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, said the use of pesticides and other farm chemicals has been more productive for farmers through the years.

''It's been more profitable, and I think the farms and the chemical supply firms were doing things that made sense based on the best information we had at the time,'' Ikerd said.

I''in general, the farmers and the agribusiness firms are now responding to the concerns that are being raised about the environment.''

David Houghton, director of new technology for the agricultural subsidiary of Monsanto Co. in St. Louis, said crop protection products under development will be more environmentally friendly.

At Monsanto, about 50 percent of the company's development costs, an undisclosed amount, is spent to determine a product's safety to the environment, users, and consumers, he said.

Monsanto considers three things in developing a new crop chemical, Houghton said: its efficacy; how it affects the environment and its toxicology.

''That is a significant change, not so much as we did not do it in the past, and do now, but rather, we are doing more in terms of the environmental and toxicology profile,'' he said.

He said such tests are conducted early in the development of a product to help decide ''whether it's proper to go ahead with that product.''

Houghton said farm chemicals being developed at Monsanto must meet certain criteria.

A chemical must degrade within a specified period and must not leach, but remain at or near the soil surface and degrade into its component parts.

Another criteria is ''higher unit activity,'' meaning that a small amount of the chemical is needed to do its job.

''Basically, what we're saying is that chemical innovations will enable farmers to use these new products at a fraction of an ounce per acre instead of a pound per acre,'' Houghton said.

New crop chemical formulations also will be target-specific, meaning they will attack specific insects or diseases without harming beneficial insects or organisms.

Chemical formulations of the future also will leave no organic solvent on the ground and may be dry compounds packaged so that minimal mixing is required before the products are applied, he said.

Products involved in research trials today will reach the marketplace in the year 2000, Houghton said.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (JULY 2) - The deep frozen body of a 30-year-old Australian man was flown Monday to the United States, in keeping with his dying hope that medical science might one day bring him back to life.

A funeral parlour here said that Rocco (Roy) Schiavello, who died after an unsuccessful operation on a brain tumor, was the first Australian to have had his body cryogenically frozen.

A spokesman said that Mr. Schiavello had made a provision to pay the 125,000 U.S. dollar cost of having his body stored in a state of cryonic suspension at the Alcor Life Extension Foundation in Los Angeles.

Mr. Schiavello's mother, a brother and a sister accompanied his body, which was packed in a special insulated box, on a Qantas flight which left here Monday for Los Angeles.

Mr. Schiavello, single, a computer programmer and keen amateur astronomer, discovered almost a year ago that he was suffering from a brain tumour but did not tell his family until shortly before his death on June 22.

A sister, Frances, said the family was uncertain of the ethics of cryonics -- the practice of freezing a human corpse in the hope of restoring it to life later. But she said, "It wasn't up to us to pass this judgment. ... It was what Roy wanted."

A source close to the family said they did not believe medical science could ever bring Mr. Schiavello back to life, but they could not go against his dying wish.

"It wasn't just for himself," the source said. "He (Mr. Schiavello) said that 'even if my brain's no good with a tumour, the body might be good for someone else.' "

The Los Angeles foundation was chosen because there are no facilities for storing cryogenically frozen bodies in Australia.

The funeral parlor spokesman said the body had been kept here at a temperature of minus 79 degrees centigrade (minus 110 degrees Fahrenheit) pending the arrival from London of a special crate used for Monday's flight.

The spokesman said that in Los Angeles the body would be kept head down in liquid nitrogen for up to 100 years awaiting advances in medical technology.

NEW DELHI (JULY 2) - The Indian government has adopted a liberal industrial policy, pledging to free industry from a host of stifling bureaucratic controls and calling for a major export drive to reduce the debt burden.

At the same time, the federal cabinet on Sunday sought to scotch fears in some quarters that liberalisation would amount to a carte blanche for multi-nationals to enter the Indian market.

It said foreign investment would "continue to be allowed within the framework of national priorities, especially for the purposes of modernisation, meeting critical gaps in technology and production, and for boosting exports."

The policy was aimed at building a "strong, self-reliant economy," said a statement released to the press Sunday night after a five-hour meeting of the cabinet chaired by Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh.

The statement affirmed the government's commitment to "move away from discretionary and detailed bureaucratic regulation of industrial investment which has become counter-productive."

"This must be replaced by non-discretionary controls, which can adequately reflect the government's priorities and at the same time enable decisions to be made quickly," it said.

It called for a concerted drive to boost exports to manage external payments and reduce debt, saying: "Strong export growth is essential for self-reliance and for protecting national economic independence."

Some observers saw the stress on self-reliance as a bid to silence critics who have slammed recent liberalisation moves -- including near-automatic approval for 40 per cent foreign equity -- as "foreign-inspired."

Critics include members of Mr. V.P. Singh's own Janata Dal (People's Party), the senior partner in the ruling five-party National Front alliance.

TOKYO (JULY 2) - Japan's holdings of gold and foreign exchange reserves grew 92 million dollars from the previous month to 73.65 billion dollars at the end of June, the Finance Ministry said Monday.

The modest increase in reserves, comprising gold, convertible currencies and special drawing rights with the International Monetary Fund, followed a rise of 533 million dollars in May.

Japan's reserves fell sharply in the first four months of the year as the Bank of Japan sold dollars to support a weaker yen.

KATHMANDU (JULY 2) - Trade along the Indo-Nepalese border has returned to normal after a 15-month dispute between Kathmandu and New Delhi virtually sealed off the landlocked Himalayan nation and ravaged its economy.

Officials said traffic had resumed by Sunday through the 22 tourist and 15 trade transit points along the 1,040-kilometer (650-mile) border, all but two of which were closed by India.

Their closure after bilateral trade and transit pacts expired on March 23, 1989, triggered serious economic hardship for the Nepalese, particularly those in the lowland tropical region of Terai bordering the Indian states of Bihar and Uttar Pradesh.

India crimped Nepal's trade routes with foreign sources, imposed customs duties ranging from 100 per cent to 145 per cent and cut off fuel supplies.

Nepalese exports -- especially to India -- plummeted and industrial production declined, while inflation soared.

For the past 10 months of the current fiscal year ending July 16, Nepal's trade deficit was 2.87 billion rupees (100.9 million dollars). Its 3.01 billion rupees (105 million dollars) in imports outstripped exports by a factor of nearly 29 to one.

But in early June, Nepalese Prime Minister Krishna Prisad Bhattarai and his Indian counterpart Vishwanath Pratap Singh met in New Delhi and restored trade relations to the status prior to April 1, 1987.

India has now lifted all trade embargoes on Nepalese exports to Indian markets, apart from withdrawing the customs duties.

The two countries also agreed to swap petroleum and oil products under a five-year agreement starting Sunday.

Nepal is to import 250,000 metric tonnes of such products, particularly diesel and kerosene, in large quantities from Singapore and the Gulf countries, and supply them to the state-controlled Indian Oil Corp.

The Indian corporation in return would deliver the goods to the government-controlled Nepal Oil Corp. (NOC) from eight oil depots spread along the Indo-Nepalese frontier.

Under the agreement, IOC is to resume the supply of liquid petroleum gas, which should allow some upscale restaurants and hotels to expand their menus, a Nepal Hotel Association spokesman said.

India would also increase the supply of petroleum and oil products annually by 10 per cent from July 1991 to July 1994.

As part of the normalisation of trade, Nepal is to waive additional duties of between 15 and 55 per cent that were levied on selected Indian products, particularly daily consumer goods, during the dispute.

The normalisation of trade and scrapping of the retributive duties are expected to send prices tumbling in Nepal, bringing much-needed relief especially to the poor, hard hit by the conflict.

Prices of basic consumer goods jumped as much as 45 per cent immediately after India imposed the blockade.

However the agreement has drawn some criticism in Nepal.

A spokesman for the extreme-left Nepal Communist Party (Flaming Torch) said the pact was "unequal and it must be abrogated."

Political observers said that if Mr. Bhattarai's coalition government fails to control the market and lower prices, it could hurt his Nepali Congress party in general elections planned for May 1991.

BEIJING (JULY 2) - Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas held a second day of talks Monday with on the restoration of diplomatic relations between China and Indonesia.

He met Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen after visiting the Asian Games village, which will house athletes when China hosts the games in September.

Qian Qichen said on Sunday that the time for restoration of Sino-Indonesian diplomatic relations was ripe. Talks between the two have focused on normalisation of ties and the issue of Cambodia.

The two countries established diplomatic ties in 1950, but these were suspended in the mid-60s when the Indonesian government accused China of backing a communist uprising in Indonesia.

Since the early 1970s, trade exchanges have gradually increased, as have official visits. The normalisation process picked up in February 1989 when Indonesian President Suharto and Qian Qichen met in Tokyo.

The visit by Ali Alatas is the first to Beijing by an Indonesian foreign minister in 23 years.

BAGHDAD (JULY 2) - Iranian opposition leader Massoud Rajavi said Monday that at least 150,000 people died in the earthquake last month in Iran, more than three times the toll announced by Teheran.

Mr. Rajavi, leader of the Mujahedeen-e-Khalq party, also claimed the quake caused 50 billion dollars damage in the northwestern provinces of Gilan and Zanjan.

A day earlier, the official Iranian news agency said the quake killed 40,000 and left 60,000 injured.

Mr. Rajavi, in a statement released to Agence France-Presse in Baghdad, said that according to "reliable information received from inside Iran," rescue workers pulled 74,310 bodies from the rubble in Gilan and 28,000 in the Zanjan area.

He quoted Iranian Government sources as saying the quake, which measured 7.3 on the Richter scale, flattened more than 1,500 villages.

Conservative estimates put material damage at 30 billion dollars, but some Iranian experts have put the price tag at more than 50 billion dollars, he added.

IRNA reported two aftershocks Monday measuring 4.8 and 4.6 on the Richter scale 200 kilometers (125 miles) northwest of Teheran.

On Sunday, the agency said two aftershocks -- one measuring 5.1 degrees -- shook Gilan province. Experts said the aftershocks could continue for up to two months.

JOHANNESBURG (JULY 2) - South Africa's first pay television company M-NET announced Monday that it is to be listed on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange (JSE).

An M-NET statement said it would make a preferential offer Monday of 20 million shares at 100 cents (37 U.S. cents) per share of which 15 million shares would be offered to subscribers and five million shares to selected business associates.

Since the company's start five years ago, its subscriber base has grown from zero to about 430,000 households around the country.

M-NET is awaiting government permission to broadcast television news, which has up to now been a state-run monopoly.

The company has forecast a profit growth of 60 per cent to 31.6 million rand (11.9 million dollars) for the financial year ending March 1991.

NAIROBI (JULY 2) - Kenyan police have raided shops suspected of selling "subversive music" and arrested several people found listening to it, newspapers reported here Monday.

Police impounded hundreds of cassettes, cassette recorders, dubbing machines, guitars and saxophones from music shops in Nairobi and western Kenya's Nakuru town on Sunday.

In one shop, Kamaru Studios, police impounded about 1,500 music cassettes and other equipment, the reports said.

Cassettes impounded were in the Kikuyu (Kenya's most populous ethnic tribe) language featuring titles like "Who killed Dr Ouko?" Kenyan Foreign Minister Robert Ouko was found brutally murdered early this year and his death still remains a mystery.

Among others seized were "Matiba's tribulations" - Kenneth Matiba is a former cabinet minister who has openly criticized Kenya's one-party system - and "Problems that befell the poor people of Muoroto" - a song about the controversy surrounding recent slum evictions.

On Saturday, Attorney General Mathew Muli warned private transport operators that they risked losing road licences if they continued to play subversive music and also warned the public that it was illegal to buy or be in possession of it.

Meanwhile music retailers have complained that they were in a dilemma as the government had not declared which music was subversive or banned.

The Music Composers' Association met Thursday to seek assurances from the government that they would not be harassed as "musicians' work is a mirror of social, political and economic life."

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (JULY 2) - Chile's largest foreign investment project and potentially the world's third largest copper operation, the Australian-run Escondida mine, is to open in December, its owners said here Monday.

Jim Curry, chief executive of the mineral arm of Broken Hill Proprietary Co. Ltd. (BHP), told a seminar that the first shipments from the world's largest known copper ore body could be expected eight months ahead of schedule.

The Australian mining and industrial giant expected its 57.5 per cent-owned mine in Chile's Atacama Desert to be a major profit earner in the 1990's.

"With annual production of copper concentrate estimated at 320,000 tonnes, Escondida will become one of the world's largest and lowest-cost copper producers," he said.

The newly elected government in Chile -- after 16 years of military rule -- should provide a stable environment for the project, he said.

"Chile has made a peaceful and smooth transition to a democratic government during the past few months, and no major changes in the direction of the general economic and business environment are foreshadowed."

He added, "The project has potential to grow further through added concentrate production and other value-added projects, provided the copper industry and Chilean conditions continue to encourage investment."

Brian Loton, BHP's deputy chairman, said Escondida would provide Australia's largest company with its "most significant lift in earnings" this decade.

"The mine ... will produce around four per cent of the world's copper supplies," he said.

Escondida was discovered in 1981 and came into BHP's possession in 1984 when it bought Utah International Inc. of the United States.

The mine, 160 kilometres (100 miles) southeast of Antofagasta, boasted reserves of 662 million tonnes averaging 2.1 per cent copper plus minor quantities of gold, silver and molybdenum, BHP said.

"Once the mine is fully operational, 760,000 tonnes of concentrate will be shipped each year from Chile to buyers in the Far East, Europe and North and South America," Mr. Loton said.

While BHP is moving towards production at Escondida, fellow Australian miner CRA Ltd. still has its giant mine on the rebel-held Papua New Guinea island of Bougainville in mothballs.

Bougainville Copper Ltd., 54 per cent owned by CRA. Ltd., was closed in May last year because of attacks by secessionist rebels who now control the island pending negotiations with the Papua New Guinea government.

The government has a 19.1 per cent stake in the Bougainville mine, the world's largest open cut copper mine.

MOSCOW (JULY 2) - Armenian nationalists took six security force members hostage over the weekend and armed men surrounded the interior ministry headquarters in the capital, Yerevan, over the weekend, Radio Moscow's Interfax news service reported Monday.

The moves were in retaliation for the arrest of an Armenian nationalist leader, identified only as Markarian, said to have been found in possession of a large quantity of arms.

Immediately after the arrest, six interior ministry troops and police were taken hostage in various locations throughout the capital, while men carrying automatic weapons and explosives surrounded the interior ministry building demanding Markarian's release.

Government troops were put on a state of alert and security around other government buildings was tightened.

Various Armenian militia groups negotiated with Armenian Interior Minister Ruben Galstian, who refused to free Markarian but eventually won the release of the hostages and the return of their weapons.

Five of the hostages had been severely beaten and were hospitalised, Interfax said.

In another incident, rival factions of the Armenian militia clashed Saturday. Three people suffered gunshot wounds and one died later in hospital when the headquarters of the Armenian National Army was attacked.

SYDNEY (JULY 2) - Building societies around Australia closed ranks Monday to assure investors their funds were safe in the wake of the Pyramid group's collapse in Victoria.

The Pyramid group was placed in receivership on Sunday, freezing the funds of some 220,000 investors with average deposits of 10,000 Australian dollars (7,900 U.S. dollars).

The administrator appointed last week by the Victorian Government, Ken Russell, told the Melbourne Age newspaper that Pyramid's main creditors were owed about 900 million dollars (702 million U.S.) and held mortgages worth 1.4 billion (1.09 billion U.S.)

Banking sources said that investors might recover only 30 cents in the dollar from the failed building companies run by the Farrow Corporation.

But although the state Government has said it will not make good Pyramid's losses, Mr. Russell told the Age that he was negotiating with "a major organisation" and hoped to be able to pay secured creditors, mostly banks, in full.

Unlike building societies elsewhere in the country, Pyramid and its associated Geelong and Countrywide societies were privately owned and run.

In Sydney, New South Wales Premier Nick Greiner said there was zero risk of the same thing happening in his state where building societies are run as cooperatives.

In Brisbane, Queensland Association of Permanent Building Societies secretary David Thorpse said that investors in the state's nine building societies would not lose money even if all on-call funds were withdrawn.

Building societies, which advance funds for house purchases, are a favourite haven in Australia, usually offering a higher rate than banks for on-call funds.

The Reserve Bank of Australia said Monday it was not responsible for supervising building societies or for protecting their depositors.

Governor Bernie Fraser said in a statement that the central bank did not believe other Victorian building societies would suffer the problems currently facing the Farrow financial group.

WELLINGTON (JULY 2) - The statutory manager of the collapsed New Zealand merchant bank, Development Finance Corporation Ltd. (DFC), announced Monday that senior creditors would eventually be paid the face amount of their claims.

The bank collapsed in October when bad debt provisions outstripped assets. Japanese banks were the main creditors, owed more than one billion New Zealand dollars (580 million U.S).

The collapse soured New Zealand's relations with international financiers, who criticised the Reserve Bank's decision to place DFC under statutory management, which prevented litigation.

But statutory manager Sandy Maier said in a statement Monday a restructuring framework would be put to creditors despite an after tax loss of 1.02 billion New Zealand dollars (591.6 million U.S.) for the year ended March 31, 1990.

"Features of the proposal are that senior and subordinated creditors with debt claims totalling 2.2 billion New Zealand dollars (1.27 billion U.S.) would, as a result of the restructuring, recover the face amount of their claims over time and in most cases in the currency in which they originally lent," the statement said.

"Payments to the bulk of senior creditors would progressively occur over a period of up to seven years. However, subordinated creditors would have to wait longer."

The restructuring proposals will be put to creditors next month.

LONDON (JULY 2) - British jewellery retailer Ratners on Monday announced the agreed acquisition of U.S. counterpart Kay Jewelers in a deal worth around 420 million dollars, along with a 130 million pound (228 million dollar) rights issue to help finance it.

Ratners, which claims to be the world's biggest jewellery retailer, will become the second biggest in the United States if the deal goes through, adding Kay's 500 stores to its existing 450 there.

The deal offers one new U.S. convertible preference share in Ratners for each share in Kay Jewelers common stock, and involves Ratners' taking on an estimated 200 million dollars of Kay debt.

The 130 million pound (230 million dollar) one-for-four rights issue is to be made in two tranches. The second 100 million pound tranche can be cancelled if the deal fails to go through.

"This is an acquisition which is so good it just has to be done," Ratners chairman and managing director Gerald Ratner said in a television interview here.

Kay makes 28,000 dollars profit per store, compared with Ratners' 127,000 dollars, Mr. Ratner said. "There is no reason why we can't inject our skills into those businesses and achieve similar results" he said.

The acquisition will give Ratners a 4.5 per cent share of the U.S. market, adding Kay to its acquisition of Sterling in 1987 and Weisfield last year. Mr. Ratner has said that he aims to eventually reach 1,500 stores and 10 per cent of the U.S. market.

Analysts said that Ratners have knocked the price down from an original offer for sale earlier this year. Ratners is paying some 850,000 dollars per store in the deal, against an average 970,000 dollars per store for its previous U.S. purchases.

Ratners made 121 million pounds (212 million dollars) pre-tax profit in the 12 months to end January this year, up 41 per cent on the previous year, from total sales of 898 million (1,576 million).

Shares in the company were marked down immediately after the announcement, but rallied from worst levels to stand down nine pence at 266 pence at mid-session.

Kay Jewelers, which reported an unaudited net loss of 5.6 million dollars in first quarter 1990, has most of its stores in shopping malls concentrated on the U.S. East Coast, California and Texas.

An aggressive British acquisition programme by Mr. Ratner since he took over the running of the company from his father in 1984 has seen the number of Ratners outlets here shoot from just over 100 to more than 1,000 giving the company a 25 per cent share of the British market.

The company's success story has been put down to its radical shake-up of jewellery marketing techniques.

Ratners high street shops cut prices drastically and introduced bright window displays, sales and special offers to remove the mystique from the industry and attract ordinary people.

NOORDWIJK, NETHERLANDS (JULY 2) - The 42nd annual conference of the Internation Whaling Commission (IWC) opened in Noordwijk an Zee on Monday faced with one major question: should the 1985 moratorium on commercial whaling be extended?

For four days in this windy seaside town, experts from organizations such as Greenpeace, the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) and the Envronmental Research Agency will field a barrage of questions from whaling countries wanting an end to the "zero option" policy on whaling.

The three main countries who want to continue whaling are Japan, Norway and Iceland.

At the conference opening, Netherlands Fisheries Minister Gerrits Braks said that the Netherlands was once a whaling nation, but he was strongly in favour of extending the moratorium introduced in 1982 and implemented in 1985.

The minister said nature was unforgiving "because if we fail, there is no possible going back." He also condemned the use of giant fishing nets which annually cause the deaths of thousands of sea mammals inadvertently.

Any change to the moratorium should not be considered while studies on whale populations have not been completed, Mr. Braks said.

Dr. Sydney Holt, a leading specialist in sea mammals and a member of the IWC scientific commission, says it is still too early to consider lifting the moratorium.

ISLAMABAD (JULY 2) - Sultan Mehmood Chaudhry, president-designate of Pakistan-administered Kashmir, said Monday he was leaving later in the day for London for talks with British government officials on the Kashmir issue.

Mr. Chaudhry, 35, told reporters here that he was expecting to have meetings with British Foreign Office officials and representatives of Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group.

He will also hold talks with MPs to seek diplomatic support for the Moslem-led movement in Indian-held Kashmir against New Delhi's rule.

Mr. Chaudry is chief of the Azad Muslim Conference (AMC), an ally of the government -- led by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party -- in the territory known as Azad (free) Kashmir.

He was nominated state president after May 21 elections.

Mr. Chaudry said the purpose of his visit was to inform the British about the "atrocities the Indians were committing to crush Kashmiri Moslems' struggle for their right to self-determination."

More than 700 people have been killed this year in violence related to the separatist movement in Indian-held Kashmir.

Mr. Chaudhry said he had been formally briefed by the foreign office on the Kashmir issue and was confident that Pakistan was committed to a 1948 United Nations resolution that recommended holding a plebiscite in Indian-held Kashmir on the preference for Indian or Pakistani rule.

Indian and Pakistani foreign secretaries are scheduled to meet here July 18 to discuss ways of defusing border tension, after both sides massed their forces amid fears of a fourth Indo-Pakistan war.

Mr. Chaudhry said he was confident that Pakistan would insist at these talks on the Kashmiris' right to determine their future freely.

He also said that freeing Kashmir from India was the "top priority" of the new government in Pakistan-controlled Kashmir, and said the Kashmiri movement would bear fruit "within the next few months."

OSLO (JULY 2) - The Norwegian government, citing the severe economic repercussions, Monday ordered 4,000 striking North Sea oil and gas workers back to work and their pay demands to be resolved through mediation.

Local Government and Labour Minister Johan Jakobsen said the cabinet decision was made in view of the unions' threat to carry out a long strike, which began on Sunday to press demands for a 4.25 per cent wage increase.

Jakobsen said the strike would have cost Norway up to 200 million krone (31.25 million dollars) in lost revenues per day.

Beyond this, he said, Norway was in the midst of important negotiations on North Sea gas deliveries to other countries, and so the country's reputation as a reliable supplier should not be endangered, Jakobsen said.

Prior to Monday's order, various Norwegian governments over the past decade had forcibly ended strikes in the oil and gas industry on five occasions.

These moves drew severe criticism from the International Labour

Organisation in Geneva, which sided with Norwegian unions in their complaint that Oslo was ilgoemhzzotued Norway's oil production in the North Sea had been running at 1.6 to 1.7 million barrels daily prior to the strike.

COLOMBO (JULY 2) - Sri Lanka is seeking to crush Tamil terrorism, a senior minister said Monday, as Tamil guerrillas cut off water lines to a major army garrison in a bid to starve some 200 soldiers and policemen to death.

Minister of State for Defence Ranjan Wijeratne said here that the military offensive against the Tamil Tigers was aimed at exterminating terrorism in this Indian Ocean island.

"It is a fight to the finish. The winner takes the lot," he said.

He said the government was willing to resume talking to the powerful Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) if they agreed to lay down weapons, but warned that the LTTE would eventually face destruction.

Military officials here said that 17 LTTE guerrillas were killed in fresh fighting with government troops on Sunday that also left two army soldiers dead.

The LTTE, in a statement received here from London, again accused the government of napalming Tamil areas in the northeast of the country, burning to death one civilian. It also charged the navy with gunning down 40 Tamil refugees on the sea.

Both allegations were immediately rejected by Colombo.

The LTTE said that the air force on Saturday bombed at least four places in northern Killinochchi district with napalm.

Defence Secretary Cyril Ranatunga said Monday that Killinochci was bombed Saturday, but Mr. Wijeratne said Colombo had not used napalm in the area, which lies south of the LTTE stronghold of Jaffna.

The LTTE, meanwhile, cut off water lines to the Jaffna fort, where 201 soldiers and policemen have been besieged since June 11, a military spokesman here said.

Mr. Ranatunga said the guerrillas were seeking to starve them to death.

"That's their attempt. They have no mercy," he said.

Military officials said the 89 soldiers and 112 policemen were very low on food and medicine, and Colombo's repeated attempts to air drop food and weapons into the fort have mostly failed due to heavy rebel fire.

Mr. Wijeratne said Monday that 17 of the trapped men were wounded and required evacuation, and asked the Tigers to show mercy if they desired fresh talks with the government.

Mr. Wijeratne said his message had been conveyed to a Tamil party thought close to the LTTE.

He spoke with open contempt of the LTTE.

"They (LTTE) are finished. The end of the road has come for them," he said.

The military spokesman said at least 10 guerrillas and two soldiers were killed in fighting when troops came under fire near a wildlife sanctuary in the island's northwest on Sunday.

Six more LTTE fighters were killed by elite Special Task Force commandos on Sunday in eastern Ampara district and another elsewhere.

The LTTE accused the navy of gunning down 40 Tamil refugees fleeing the eastern Trincomalee district in a boat, but did not say when. The military spokesman denied the charge.

Mr. Ranatunga said government forces had 318 men at the hands of the LTTE from June 13 to July 1 -- more than a third of the security personnel killed by Tamil guerrillas between 1983 and 1987.

Among the latest victims were 157 soldiers, three air force personnel and 158 policemen, he said, adding the Tigers had lost at least 300 cadres.

But official and unofficial sources put the death count in 22 days of fighting at some 1,200, including a large number of non-combatants. No official civilian casualty figures are available.

Mr. Wijeratne also said that an all-party delegation, led by Sri Lanka's parliament speaker, would visit India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, the Maldives and Bangladesh to inform their heads of state about the renewed Tamil separatist conflict.

Sri Lankan Foreign Secretary Bernard Tilakaratna is currently visiting India on a similar mission.

In a related development, a Tamil party on Monday called upon Colombo and the LTTE to immediately cease fighting "and save the people from further bloodshed and agony."

TOKYO (JULY 2) - Japanese industries were asked Monday to cut their supply and use of ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) by 10 per cent in a year.

International Trade and Industry Minister Kabun Muto made the request in a meeting with 54 representatives of Japanese manufacturing companies and industrial organizations.

At an international conference Friday in London, 53 nations agreed to stop using nine kinds of CFCs by the year 2000 to stop further erosion of the earth's ozone layer.

Japanese makers and users of CFCs were asked to cut the annual domestic CFC supply of 120,000 tons by 10 per cent in 12 months.

They slashed the annual supply by 30 per cent in the year that ended on June 30 in response to a request by the trade and industry ministry in 1989.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (JULY 2) - An agency that promotes casual sexual affairs found its switchboard jammed Monday after burglars stole personal files on more than 2,000 customers.

"At least half of our clients are married. There is an extremely large group of worried people sitting at home at the moment, biting their nails " she said.

Senior Detective Julie Walsh of the Criminal Investigation Bureau said the files contained credit card numbers that could be used for fraud.

"Some of the details might be embarrassing because a client might ask for something specific, like a big-chested woman," she said.

OSLO (JULY 2) - King Olav V of Norway, the world's oldest reigning monarch, was 87 on Monday.

King Olav celebrated his birthday with family members, including his heir 53-year-old Prince Harald, at his summer residence at Bygdoe Kongsgaard where he was recuperating after a stay in hospital that ended on June 21.

King Olav was born on July 2, 1903, at Sandringham, one of the British royal family's residences in England, and succeeded his father Haakon VII as king in 1957. King Haakon, born Carl of Denmark, was chosen by Norwegians as their king in 1905 after the country's separation from Sweden.

King Olav, who has been a widower since 1954, was an olympic champion yachtsman in his youth. Because of his poor health, the king was unable to participate, as he has every year, in the Hankoe regatta near Oslo, nor could he receive friends aboard the royal yacht.

The king was admitted to hospital on May 29 after a stroke and is currently undergoing therapy to regain full use of his left arm and leg. He can stand up with support, and his doctors say his cardiac and respiratory functions are satisfactory.

BEIJING (JULY 2) - The promoters of the Beijing Asian Games, eager to defray the colossal expenses of the event, have enlisted giant pandas to carry advertising billboards during the opening ceremony.

But foreign businessmen are not snapping up the high-profile space, saying the rates asked by the State Sports Commission are prohibitive.

One businessman said the commission wanted 80,000 dollars to put his product's name on the back of a "Pan-Pan," as the Games' black-and-white mascots are called.

Giant pandas are an endangered species found in the wild only in China.

The businessman said the bears are to be led around Workers' Stadium on September 27, the day of the opening ceremony expected to be watched by millions of television viewers across Asia.

Japan's NHK television network announced in May it had bought the Games' broadcast rights for 900,000 dollars, while the West German firm Adidas has signed an exclusive one-million-dollar contract to supply clothing and shoes.

The Games are officially budgeted to cost 600 million yuan (126 million dollars).

BONN (JULY 2) - The West German cabinet was set to approve the fiscal 1991 budget foreseeing a 3.9 per cent rise in spending, a slowdown in new borrowing, and a first-time-ever cut in defence expenditures, the German Press Agency dpa learned here Monday.

At the same time, Finance Minister Theo Waigel on Tuesday will be unveiling the government's fiscal planning for the 1992-1994 three-year period, in which Bonn will be aiming for a steady three per cent annual rise in expenditures, dpa learned.

Under the 1991 budget draft, total Bonn spending is to rise 3.9 per cent to 324 billion marks (196.3 billion dollars).

Bonn expects to have borrow 31.34 billion marks in 1991, just slightly higher than this year's 31.01 billion marks. But in the years ahead, under Waigel's planning, new borrowing will drop off sharply to just 11.6 billion marks in the year 1994.

While the largest budget item, labour and social welfare spending, is to rise in 1991 by 3.1 per cent to 71.8 billion marks, defence expenditures are to cut for the first time ever. Military outlays will be reduced two per cent to 52.6 billion marks.

COLOMBO (JULY 2) - The Sri Lankan government Monday decided to send a delegation representing all political parties in parliament to member countries of the South Asian Association of Regional Co-operation (Saarc) to brief them on latest developments in the troubled north-east.

The delegation, headed by the speaker, M.H. Mohamed, is expected to include the main opposition party, the Sri Lanka Freedom Party (Slfp), and representatives of Moslem and Tamil parties in parliament.

The decision was taken at a meeting presided over by President Ranasinghe Premadasa where the deputy minister for defence Ranjan Wijeratne briefed the opposition on the north-east where fighting broke out between government troops and the Tamil-dominated Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) on June 11, ending a 13-month ceasefire.

The delegation is expected to visit India, Pakistan, Bangladesh Nepal, Maldives and Bhutan.

The move to send the delegation came as government troops continued mopping-up operations in eastern Sri Lanka and were planning to rescue security personnel from Jaffna fort, 396 kilometres from here, which has been under siege for 21 days.

Wijeratne told reporters that the east would be cleared of rebels within the next 10 days while operations would be launched to rescue the north from the Ltte.

He said troops would also launch an operation to rescue 17 security personnel who have been injured and trapped in the Jaffna fort, built 350 years ago by the Dutch.

He said attampts to send food to the north had been hampered as the rebels are firing at food ships.

Government troops and Tamil rebels have been engaged in fierce confrontations in the north-east in which more than 1,000 persons have been killed in the past three weeks.

MOSCOW (JULY 2) - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev made a spirited defence of perestroika here Monday, and urgently warned against moves that could split the Communist Party.

In a three-hour address to 4,600 delegates attending the opening session of the party's week-long 28th national congress, he said current problems had been inherited from the pre-perestroika past.

Perestroika - the term used to describe the restructuring process during Gorbachev's five years at the Soviet helm - had helped people regain a sense of dignity, but had also made them expect more.

''The Soviet citizen of today no longer accepts what he meekly tolerated in the past,'' he said. But it had to be remembered that perestroika was still not complete.

There was still a strong need for ''spiritual rebirth and ideological renewal'', he said, recalling that it was the party which had initiated the lifting of ''absurd bans on intellectual life''.

It was now important that the party should not let itself get bogged down in internal strife, and that the different republics' parties be allowed to develop independently.

On the other hand, the recent abolition of the party contitutional right to a power monopoly meant that members must respect the majority decisions on which the party now based all its actions.

Referring to a congress decision to demand that all Politburo members and Central Committee secretaries for the first time report on their activities, Gorbachev warned the congress not to try to put senior members ''on trial''.

At the same time, the party had ''neither the political nor the moral right to absolve itself from the responsibility for the destiny of the reform programme''.

Turning to the ''extremely difficult situation'' in food supplies, he said: ''We cannot exist further with the old economic system. We need a new system based on various forms of ownership.''

He added: ''What we are talking about is establishing a basically new model of the economy: a multi-sectoral model with diverse forms of ownership and management, with a modern market infrastructure.''

Gorbachev countered claims that Moscow's foreign policy had let to socialism fail in Eastern Europe: ''Then we are permitted to pose a counter question - what kind of socialism was it? It was an authoritarian system which we ourselves have rejected.''

Moscow's new thinking in foreign policy had made the international climate ''considerably healthier''. Never before in Soviet history were there such good relations with the nations of Europe, and the relationship with the United States was now a partnership.

Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov painted an ''extremely tense'' picture of the food supply problems, with stores having one third less supplies than they needed, in turn meaning a need to import.

He warned that the trend towards ''economic separatism'' as individual republics sought independence, would lead not just to conflict among states but among individual production plants.

While admitting his government had plenty to be criticised for, he objected that ''every step we have taken has been met by negative opinion'', yet the past five years had seen not just mistakes.

BEIJING (JULY 2) - China said Monday that 10 people had been sentenced to death for murder, theft or slave trading in coastal Jiangsu and southwestern Sichuan province. Four of them were executed.

The condemnations were the latest in a nationwide crackdown on crime that has already seen hundreds of executions.

The Chengdu intermediate people's court passed the death sentence on five people convicted for the slave trade of women, a traditionally booming business in China. Chengdu is the provincial capital of Sichuan.

Zhu Zezhong was sentenced to death for a "big theft on a train," the official Sichuan Daily said. It did not say if the sentences were immediately carried out as is the custom in China.

The Legal Daily in Jiangsu reported that four convicted murderers and thieves, who were sentenced at a public rally, were executed.

Sentencing is often held in public in China as a deterrent.

Shares in Glaxo climbed 11 pence to 829 pence on the stock market here after the news.

Glaxo believe that the drug acts by constricting cranial blood vessels.

LONDON (JULY 2) - West Germany's inflation rate will remain below three percent this year, the country's central bank president Karl-Otto Poehl said here Monday, a day after German monetary union.

"On present indications, the inflation rate in Germany will remain below three percent per annum in 1990, as it was in 1989," Mr. Poehl told the Institute of Economic Affairs in London.

Annual inflation stood at 2.3 percent in June, according to the latest figures, and "I am confident that home-made price and cost pressures will remain well under control even in the more difficult circumstances confronting us," Mr. Poehl said.

"I do not see any likelihood of a sharp price acceleration in 1991."

The Bundesbank president showed little concern over inflation prospects in West Germany in the wake of economic and monetary union with East Germany which took effect Sunday.

In fact, the difference in West Germany's favour between its inflation rate and that of many of its partners "may even grow somewhat wider again" as "inflation rates tend to rise here and there," he said.

Inflation is running at between two percent and 18 percent within the European Economic Community (EEC) and between two percent and seven percent for countries which have fully entered the European Monetary System (EMS), Mr. Poehl noted.

He said that West Germany's current high interest rates "should not be a matter for undue concern."

The Bundesbank president also expressed serious doubts over Britain's proposal for developing the European Currency Unit (ECU) as a full-fledged European currency, stressing the inflationary risks involved in creating an extra currency.

BERLIN (JULY 2) - The East German monopolies office on Monday approved a series of West German takeovers of large East German firms, but opposed a plan to buy up the whole of the country's energy sector.

The recently-established office, modelled on West Germany's monopolies body, gave the green light to five takeovers in the insurance, bank and retail sector, the ADN news agency quoted monopolies office vice president Reinhold Wutzke as saying.

They included a plan by Allianz, Europe's leading insurance concern, to acquire 51 per cent of the former East German insurance monopoly Deutsche Versicherungs-AG.

Deutsche Bank was given the go-ahead to acquire 122 branches of Deutsche Kreditbank AG, and Dresdner Bank to acquire 72 branches of the same bank, while a cooperation accord between WestDeutsche Lanndesbank and Deutsche Aussenhandelsbank was also approved.

Finally, the West German retail group Kaiser-Kaffee will be able to take over outlets of the former East German network responsible for state-run trade.

Mr. Wutzke said that the desire to save jobs in East Germany played a major role in the monopolies' office decisions.

For example, if the Allianz move had been vetoed some 12,000 jobs would have been seriously threatened.

But the office turned down plans for a West German consortium to take over the East German energy sector because it would have undermined competition Mr. Wutzke said.

If the plan by RWE, PreussenElektra and Bayernwerk had been approved, no other company would have been able to operate in the sector, he said.

The consortium had not officially put in a request to be allowed to take over the energy sector, Mr. Wutzke said. The plan had aroused strong protest in East Germany.

Environment and Energy Minister Karl-Hermann Steinberg said recently that East Germany's energy supply could not be ensured for long without West German aid, although he added that anti-monopolies rules would be respected.

But the Social Democratic party, which is part of the coalition government, opposes the West German plan.

TEHERAN (JULY 2) - A newspaper close to hardliners in Iran on Monday condemned Washington's assistance after last month's earthquake and criticised those it said were supporting the "return of the American Great Satan."

The editorial in Kahyan was the latest blow in a war of words in the press and parliament over the government's decision to accept aid from the United States, Saudi Arabia and other countries with which Iran has frosty relations.

On Monday, President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani sent messages to the leaders of more than 70 countries thanking them for their contributions.

But according to Teheran Radio, the United States, Saudi Arabia and Gulf war enemy Iraq, which all sent aid despite having no diplomatic relations with Iran, were not among those to whom Mr. Rafsanjani expressed gratitude.

Anti-Western hardliners fear that acceptance of such an outpouring of aid will lower Iran's guard against foreign influence and lend weight to Mr. Rafsanjani's advocacy of a more flexible attitude to the outside world.

Kahyan criticised "those who through innocence, fear or premeditated action favour the return of the American Great Satan" and said it was "vital" for them to "recall the crimes committed by the Americans and Saudis."

"The United States which claims to share the distress of the earthquake victims sent a million and a half dollars in cash and material wrapped in American flags," the newspaper said.

"Certain pens are dripping ink in their eagerness to say that since the disaster touched the hearts of those in the White House, (Iranians) should welcome with open arms the American humanitarian gestures," it added.

Kahyan indirectly attacked an editorial last week in its English-language sister newspaper Kahyan International, which had denounced another hardline paper, Jomhoori Islami, for condemning the U.S. assistance.

"Using the pretext of the victims' pain, a journalist attacked a colleague who had revealed the fallacious face of America, and tried to pretend that radical journalists had brought the isolation of Iran," Kahyan said.

PARIS (JULY 2) - A three-day strike by French air traffic controllers to begin Tuesday is expected to cause serious disruptions, especially for domestic and medium-haul flights.

The striking controllers will offer minimum service at the Athis-Mons regional air traffic center, the largest in France, which serves Paris' Charles-de-Gaulle and Orly airports.

The strike will affect all airlines flying into the area. The French domestic carrier, Air Inter, has cancelled 60 percent of its flights but has maintained flights to the French Mediterranean island of Corsica.

Air France said it will offer 40 percent of its medium-haul flights and all long-distance flights as well as those to Corsica.

The controllers are demanding better bonuses to take into account high-frequency air traffic at the Athis-Mons control center.

BELGRADE (JULY 2) - The parliament of Slovenia on Monday declared its sovereignty over its own affairs in what appeared to be a direct challenge to the Yugoslav federal authorities in Belgrade, Tanjug news agency said.

The Slovenian MPs passed a resolution declaring sovereignty by a large majority saying the decision was based on the "constitution and laws of Slovenia".

The republic's constitution only recognises the federal Yugoslav constitution in matters where it does run counter to the Slovenian constitution.

The Yugoslav constitution on the other hand states that federal laws issued from Belgrade take precedence.

Monday's resolution was drawn up by all political parties in the Slovenian parliament which was elected in the country's first free elections since World War II in April.

The communist party which had ruled the country until then were defeated in the April elections.

Slovenia, in the north of the country bordering Austria, is one of six republics and two autonomous provinces making up the Yugoslav federation.

TOKYO (JULY 2) The European table linen industry can expect to increase its sales to Japan by five percent annually over the next 10 years, an industry official said here Monday.

The Paris-based International Confederation for Linen and Hemp (CILC) expects Japan to buy between 1,500 and 2,000 tons of European linen in 1990 and about 2,500 tons in 1991, said Robert Franck, the CILC's Japan and Asia office director.

Japan bought 850 tonnes last year, 4,000 tonnes in 1988 and 6,200 in 1987, he said.

"The market will rediscover its stability," he said, adding that the wild fluctuations were due to "an error of judgement" by large Japanese businesses which imported too much several years ago.

"Stocks have now been reduced and purchases are returning to normal," he said.

Japan must therefore account for between 10 and 15 percent of European production, compared with the current seven to eight percent, Mr. Franck said.

He said it was always possible that Japan might absorb 50 percent of European sales over the next 10 years.

Japan, an important and growing market because of its large population and purchasing power, shares with West Germany the position of the world's third largest consumer of linen after the United States and Italy.

The CILC is currently concerned about the emergence of strong competition in Eastern Europe and China, and to a lesser degree on Southeast Asia, Mr. Franck said, who puts his stakes on the quality of European linen.

Eighty percent of Europe's producers of linen are based in France, while 15 percent are in Belgium and five per cent in the Netherlands. Mill owners and weavers are mainly concentrated in Italy, Belgium and Northern Ireland.

TOKYO (JULY 3) - A Japanese Air Self-Defense Force (ASDF) F-15 fighter jet crashed in the Pacific off Ibaraki Prefecture north of here late Monday, killing its pilot, the Defense Agency said Tuesday.

The ASDF fighter, part of a four-plane squadron on nighttime maneuvers, crashed into the sea about 70 kilometers (43 miles) east of Hyakuri ASDF base in Ibaraki Prefecture around 7:25 p.m. (1025 GMT) Monday, agency officials said.

GUATEMALA (JUNE 2) EFE - Dozens of people were killed and injured in Guatemala over the weekend in violent clashes and a human rights expert Monday denounced the harrowing state of fear that people were being forced to live in.

"Most people in Guatemala live in a climate of total insecurity and are only protected by the hand of God," said prosecutor Cesar Alvarez Guadamuz of the attorney-general's office, commenting on weekend violence that left 46 people dead and 55 injured in shootings and knife attacks.

The security forces and the army fail to protect the fundamental rights of Guatemalans and it was up to the government to put an end to the violence, Alvarez said.

"As long as there is no political will to confront the misery and ignorance, nothing will change," the prosecutor added.

Government Minister Col. Garlos Morales has blamed random violence in Guatemala on unemployed illegal immigrants from other Central American countries who turn to crime.

TEGUCIGALPA (JULY 2) EFE - Widespread strikes throughout Guatemala entered their third week Monday with more unions threatening to join in and labor leaders denying that the crisis was close to resolution.

While government sources said that they were on the point of reaching agreement with the strikers, other unions were discussing whether to join striking public health sector employees and workers at the transnational banana plantation run by the Tela Railroad Company.

"This morning we are consulting with our branches to decide if we will join the stoppages," United Federation of Honduran Workers (FUTH) vice president Carlos Reyes said Monday.

The government-opposed FUTH controls workers in the crucial electricity and water sectors.

The health workers started their strike 20 days ago, paralyzing hospitals and health care centers, to demand job security and to oppose public health service privatization plans.

The Tela workers want pay increases and compensation for earnings lost through the strikes but the company pay offer of an extra dlrs eight monthly was dismissed as "offensive" by union leader Rene Ayestas.

Escalating strikes are the principle challenge currently faced by the government of Honduran President Rafael Leonardo Callejas, who took office January 27.

LA PAZ (JULY 2) EFE - Bolivia's accumulated rate of inflation for the first six months of 1990 was 4.25 percent, officials said Monday.

Almost half the total was accounted for by June's figure of 2.01 percent, the highest monthly figure this year, which officials attributed to the 25 percent hike in fuel prices announced on a week ago.

The Bolivian government hopes to end the year with less than 10 percent inflation, underlining Planning Minister Enrique Garcia's recent boast that the country's inflation rate was the envy of Latin America.

The accumulated rate of inflation in 1989 was 15.5 percent, 6 percent down on the year before. In 1987, prices rose 10.5 percent.

MIAMI (JULY 3) EFE - American Scott Heimdal arived in the United States Monday, three days after his release by leftist Colombian guerrillas who he said had treated him well throughout his 61-days of captivity.

"They always treated me with respect and gave me good food," said Heimdal, released Friday after his family had collected a dlrs 60,000 ransom with the help of friends and family members, and by appealing for donations from the U.S. public.

+I only feared for my life during the first days of my imrisonment,+ 27-year-old Heimdal added as he arrived in Miami on a flight from Quito with his mother.

Thanking those who donated money to help pay the ransom, Heimdal said, "I have a debt with them I shall never be able to repay."

Before leaving Quito earlier Monday, Heimdal refused to name the group that abducted him April 28 as he traveled up the Bermejo river separating Ecuador and Colombia.

But he did say his captors were not drug traffickers.

Officials believe the People's Liberation Army (ELP) was likely responsible.

+I was very scared and we were constantly on the move to avoid detection by the Army,+ said Heimdal, adding that they had remained in Ecuador throughout the nine-week ordeal.

Ecuadorean Interior Minister Luis Felix Lopez has said Heimdal was held captive in the Colombian sector of the Amazonian jungle region that straddles both countries' borders.

Heimdal said he thought he was chosen at random by the rebels, and that any U.S. employee working for the same company, the U.S. gold mining company IMINCO, might as easily have been singled out.

TOKYO (JULY 2) KYODO - A TOP LABOR LEADER URGED THE GOVERNMENT MONDAY TO JOIN EFFORTS WITH LABOR AND MANAGEMENT TO TRY TO REDUCE PRICES BY AROUND 10 PERCENT BY 1992 TO NARROW THE WIDE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN DOMESTIC AND OVERSEAS PRICES.

AKIRA YAMAGISHI, CHAIRMAN OF RENGO, JAPAN'S LARGEST TRADE UNION FEDERATION MADE THE APPEAL TO PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU WHEN HE SUBMITTED TO HIM AN INTERIM PRICE REPORT WORKED OUT JOINTLY WITH THE JAPAN FEDERATION OF EMPLOYERS ASSOCIATIONS (NIKKEIREN).

NIKKEIREN PRESIDENT EIJI SUZUKI JOINED YAMAGISHI IN SUBMITTING THE REPORT AFTER THE TWO ENDORSED IT AT THEIR MEETING EARLIER IN THE DAY. SUZUKI AND YAMAGISHI HAVE MET REGULARLY SINCE LAST JANUARY TO DISCUSS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

YAMAGISHI TOLD REPORTERS THAT 1992 WILL BE ''A TURNING POINT FOR THE WORLD ECONOMY'' BECAUSE OF MARKET INTEGRATION OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY (EC) AND OTHER GLOBAL CHANGES EXPECTED THAT YEAR.

''WE MUST REDUCE PRICES BY SOME 10 PERCENT BY THEN AND IN THIS CONNECTION ASKED THE PRIME MINISTER TO SET UP A NATIONAL COUNCIL TO DO SO,'' HE SAID.

IT WAS THE FIRST TIME FOR NIKKEIREN AND RENGO TO MAKE JOINT POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE GOVERNMENT. THE TWO GROUPS PLAN TO ADVANCE PROPOSALS ON SKY-HIGH LAND PRICES AND OTHER PROBLEMS IN THE FUTURE.

THE NIKKEIREN-RENGO REPORT URGES MANAGEMENT AND LABOR TO HELP CHANGE JAPAN'S INDUSTRIAL STRUCTURE FROM BEING INDUSTRY-ORIENTED TO CONSUMER-ORIENTED.

AS PART OF SUCH EFFORTS, IT CALLS FOR A SET OF MEASURES TO RECTIFY PRICE GAPS BETWEEN THE DOMESTIC AND OVERSEAS MARKETS AND THUS LOWER OVERALL PRICE LEVELS.

IT ALSO RECOMMENDS THAT THE GOVERNMENT, BUSINESSES, LABOR UNIONS, AND CONSUMERS EACH TAKE SPECIFIC STEPS WITH A VIEW TO REVIEWING PRICING MECHANISMS THAT HAVE CREATED UNFAIRLY LARGE DIFFERENTIALS IN THE PRICES OF THE SAME GOODS AT HOME AND OVERSEAS.

THE NATIONAL ORGANIZATION MENTIONED BY YAMAGISHI IS TO CONSIST OF GOVERNMENT, LABOR, AND BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVES. ITS MAIN OBJECTIVE IS TO WORK OUT A NUMBER OF MEASURES FOR PRICE REDUCTIONS, THE REPORT SAID.

IT CALLED ON THE GOVERNMENT TO STEP UP DEREGULATION EFFORTS, CONDUCT A WHOLESALE REVIEW OF THE TAXATION SYSTEM, AND STREAMLINE THE DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM.

FOR BUSINESSES, THE REPORT PROPOSED THAT THEY PASS WINDFALL EARNINGS FROM CURRENCY RATE CHANGES ON TO THE PRICES OF THEIR PRODUCTS AND SERVICES, AND EXERCISE PRUDENCE IN ENTERTAINMENT AND ADVERTISEMENT SPENDING.

IT ASKED CONSUMERS TO ENHANCE THEIR PRICE CONSCIOUSNESS AND VIGILANCE IN AN EFFORT TO KEEP CORPORATE PRICING BEHAVIOR UNDER CLOSE SURVEILLANCE. IT SPECIFICALLY ADVISED CONSUMERS TO AVOID BUYING EXPENSIVE NAME-BRAND GOODS WHEN LESS COSTLY PRODUCTS ARE AVAILABLE.

TOKYO (JULY 2) KYODO - JAPAN'S FOREIGN EXCHANGE RESERVES IN JUNE ROSE 92 MILLION DOLLARS FROM MAY TO 73.65 BILLION DOLLARS, THE FINANCE MINISTRY SAID MONDAY.

IT WAS THE SECOND CONSECUTIVE MONTH-ON-MONTH GAIN, FOLLOWING THE INCREASE IN MAY. THE COUNTRY'S FOREIGN EXCHANGE RESERVES OF CONVERTIBLE CURRENCIES GOLD AND SPECIAL DRAWING RIGHTS (SDRS) HAD EARLIER MARKED FOUR CONSECUTIVE MONTHS OF DECLINE UNTIL APRIL.

AS A MATTER OF POLICY, THE FINANCE MINISTRY DOES NOT DISCUSS THE DETAILS OF CHANGES IN JAPAN'S RESERVES. BUT AN ABSENCE OF THE BANK OF JAPAN IN THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKET IN JUNE AMID RELATIVELY STABLE MOVES IN THE YEN-DOLLAR EXCHANGE RATE APPARENTLY ENCOURAGED THE INCREASE IN FOREIGN RESERVES.

THE YEN MOVED IN A NARROW RANGE AGAINST THE U.S. DOLLAR, HOVERING IN THE LOWER HALF OF THE 150 YEN LEVEL THROUGHOUT JUNE. THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE YEN'S HIGHEST AND LOWEST VALUE AGAINST THE DOLLAR WAS 3.65 YEN DURING THE MONTH, COMPARED WITH A MARGIN OF 10.11 YEN IN MAY, MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID.

NARROWING DIFFERENCES IN INTEREST RATES BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES ENCOURAGED STABILITY IN THE MARKET, THEY SAID.

AT THE END OF JUNE, THE LATEST MONTH FOR WHICH RESERVE DATA ON OTHER COUNTRIES IS AVAILABLE, THE U.S. REMAINED ON TOP AS THE WORLD'S LARGEST FOREIGN EXCHANGE HOLDER, WITH 77.16 BILLION DOLLARS.

JAPAN CAME SECOND WITH 73.02 BILLION DOLLARS, FOLLOWED BY WEST GERMANY WITH 65.89 BILLION DOLLARS, THE OFFICIALS ADDED.

TOKYO (JULY 2) KYODO - SOVIET OIL PRODUCTION HAS ENTERED A LONG-TERM DOWNWARD TREND, A PHENOMENON THAT MIGHT TRIGGER A WORLDWIDE SPIRAL IN OIL PRICES, A PRIVATE RESEARCH INSTITUTE SAID MONDAY.

THE INSTITUTE OF ENERGY ECONOMICS SAID IN A REPORT THAT OIL OUTPUT BY THE SOVIET UNION, THE BIGGEST OIL PRODUCER IN THE WORLD, HAS BEEN RAPIDLY DWINDLING IN RECENT YEARS, DROPPING BY 300,000 BARRELS PER DAY (BPD) IN 1989 AND PLUNGING BY 500,000 BPD THIS YEAR.

THE DOWNTREND IS LIKELY TO ACCELERATE IN THE COMING YEARS, FALLING BY AS MUCH AS 1-1.5 MILLION BPD BY 1995, IT SAID.

THE EXHAUSTION OF LARGE OIL FIELDS, SURGING COSTS OF EXPLORATION, AND REDUCED INVESTMENT IN THE ENERGY SECTOR AMID THE ECONOMIC CRISIS IN THE SOVIET UNION ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DIMINISHING OUTPUT, IT SAID.

THE REPORT, BASED ON A TWO-WEEK SURVEY BY THE INSTITUTE IN THE SOVIET UNION FROM APRIL 18, SAID THIS POSES SERIOUS PROBLEMS FOR ENERGY SUPPLY AROUND THE WORLD, WHEN PROSPECTS ARE EQUALLY GRIM FOR THE PRODUCTION OF NATURAL GAS, COAL, AND NUCLEAR POWER.

ANY CONFUSION IN OIL PRODUCTION AND TRANSPORT IN THE SOVIET UNION DUE TO POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC UPHEAVALS WILL EASILY BOOST WORLDWIDE OIL PRICES, IT SAID.

THE REPORT PREDICTED THAT FEARS OF INFLATED OIL PRICES WILL NOT DISAPPEAR FOR FIVE TO 10 YEARS UNTIL THE SOVIET UNION FINISHES ITS TRANSITION TO A MARKET-ORIENTED ECONOMY.

TO AVOID ANOTHER OIL SHOCK, IT URGED, WESTERN NATIONS SHOULD PROVIDE CAPITAL AND TECHNICAL AID TO THE SOVIET UNION TO ENHANCE ITS FLAGGING CAPACITY FOR OIL PRODUCTION, WHICH MIGHT CRIPPLE ECONOMIC ACTIVITIES IN OTHER COUNTRIES, ESPECIALLY THOSE IN REFORMING EASTERN EUROPE.

FROM THE BULLS:

"To us, the stock market looks good and we are bullish," says RON SCHROEDER, managing director at J&W SELIGMAN. "The trend of the market, since the collapse of the junk bond market, is away from takeover and value stocks and, instead, toward growth stocks. I feel that trend will stay in place for some time." ("Investor's Daily", 7/2)

"I think the bias is still up," says EDDIE BROWN, sticking by his prediction of 3100 on the Dow by the end of the year. "Also, I like the action of the stock market this week. We had some disappointing news from two major companies, CATERPILLAR TRACTOR and AT&T. Both companies really got hit hard. However, the broad market did not react very much at all and I think that is kind of encouraging." ("Wall Street Week," 6/29)

"The Dow industrials made a series of new highs during the [second] quarter, which I think is good," says EUGENE PERONI JR. of JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT. "Yet many investors have remained hesitant about the market. There hasn't been a rampant bullish consensus, and for that reason I believe the stock market will move higher later this year and that participation will broaden." ("Investor's Daily", 7/2)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The market has been a little happier than I might have guessed, although it depends what day you're talking about," says JOHN NEFF, manager of VANGUARD's WINDSOR FUND. "Nonetheless, I think stocks are vulnerable to 15%-20% exposure on the downside from the Dow Industrials' recent high. I wouldn't anticipate an abrupt fall, but I didn't think the last one would be abrupt, either." (Barron's, 7/2)

"The second half will be very weak," says PETER GRANDICH, chief market strategist for AFFILIATED CAPITAL MANAGEMENT. "There's a high probability the Dow will fall to the low 2000s." ("USA Today", 7/2)

STOCK MARKET:

"You disappoint on earnings in this market and Wall Street will take you out and shoot you," says ABBY COHEN, chief investment strategist for BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD. "With valuations this high, there's no room for mistakes." ("USA Today", 7/2)

"Although, in Dow terms, we could set some nominal new highs, I don't think it will be a broad nor strong move," says PHILIP RETTEW, a technical analyst with MERRILL LYNCH. He sees the Dow reaching a low point in the late summer or early fall, "which might be several hundred points lower than where we are right now." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/29)

"USA Today" has a special midyear stocks section in today's edition, featuring a look at which stocks fared the best and worst in the first six months of the year and an attempt to predict how the market will do in the second half. MACEO SLOAN, president of NCM CAPITAL MANAGEMENT GROUP in Durham, N.C., says the Dow could climb as high as 3200, but then make a gradual move down to 2600. ERIC MILLER, chief investment officer at DONALDSON LUFKIN & JENRETTE, looks for the Dow to move higher over the next two or three weeks, but "the next three to four months, we're very cautious." BARBARA JENKINS, co-founder of THE KENWOOD GROUP in Chicago, says, "We do think the second half is going to be a difficult environment." BOB JAMES, money manager at TIMING RESEARCH AND MANAGEMENT in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., says he is "basically bullish going into the second half," but adds that "after Labor Day I'd be very cautious." ("USA Today", 7/2)

"Investors don't normally try to trade," which means that they cannot do well in a market that is not moving, says PETER GRANDICH, chief market strategist of AFM INVESTMENTS. He points out that despite the market's rally in recent months, stocks have not been as profitable as other investments. "From an investing standpoint, I still see cash as a better way." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/29)

"The second quarter did a lot better than the first," says BYRON WEIN, chief market strategist at MORGAN STANLEY & COMPANY. "Consumer non-durables and health-care issues did extremely well in the second quarter. The market seems to believe that either earnings will be better than expected or that interest rates are going lower." He continues, "The thing that's driving the stock market right now is earnings momentum. What's not driving the market is value. There is more than one way to skin a cat in this market. Everybody is focusing on growth stocks, but an investor could make it in cyclical stocks, too." (WSJ and NYT, 7/2)

ROBERT STOVALL of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS says the overall market's strength in the face of poor earnings reports by such companies as AT&T, CATERPILLAR TRACTOR, DOW and CORNING "makes you think that when these anticipated down earnings are reported by one company or the other over the next three weeks, the market may just keep inching forward right through all that, looking ahead to better earnings sometime later on this year or next year." ("Wall Street Week", 6/29)

"We're still in a selective market, rather than a broad-based rush to small-caps [stocks]," says JACK GRANAHAN, co-manager of the $300 million VANGUARD EXPLORER FUND. DAN RYCZEK, who manages the OTC INDEX FUND, which is pegged to the 100 largest OTC stocks, says the index has been "excellent" at telegraphing market moves in the past and "it's telling me to be careful here. It's telling me we're late in the day rather than in a move to the upside." (WSJ, 7/2)

Columnist JOHN CRUDELE says stock prices have begun a new tradition of rallying in the final hour of trading because of professional traders stepping in late in the day to try to move the markets. "Professional traders in the stock index futures market are trying to bully the financial markets to a level that will draw in buyers," says WILLIAM KING, an independent trader who spent many years on Wall Street and now tracks the stock index futures markets. "And if you are going to bully the market, you have to bully it as later in the day as possible." He says such a strategy is less likely to backfire in the last hour because "you want to create an emotional move and give other people less time to think." (The Washington Post, 7/1)

STOCK TIPS:

KATHLEEN MILLARD, manager of CHASE MANHATTAN's POOLED EQUITY INCOME FUND, says she is finding her favorite stocks these days in "aluminum issues and selected paper stocks." Her top picks in those categories are AMAX and REYNOLDS METALS in aluminum and INTERNATIONAL PAPER, SCOTT PAPER and UNION CAMP in paper. She also likes GENERAL MOTORS CLASS E and IBM. (Barron's, 7/2)

MACEO SLOAN of NCM CAPITAL MANAGEMENT GROUP likes regional bank stocks FIRST UNION in Charlotte, N.C. and CITIZENS & SOUTHERN in Atlanta, as well as money-center bank FIRST CHICAGO. He also likes NIKE, calling it "in a class by itself" from a marketing standpoint. ("USA Today", 7/2)

ROBERT STOVALL of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS likes companies that have debt that is less than 20% of capitalization, a pattern of rising earnings and at least 40% of their sales overseas. "That includes giants like IBM and MINNESOTA MINING & MANUFACTURING and also smaller ones like LAWTER INTERNATIONAL, LUBRIZOL and AVERY INTERNATIONAL." ("Wall Street Week", 7/2)

"The market is terrified of earnings disappointments currently," says KEN SIMONS, fund manager at NEUBERGER & BERMAN. This is why "investors are running to PROCTOR & GAMBLE, PEPSICO, COCA-COLA and McDONALD'S." (WSJ, 7/2)

THOMAS KURLAK of MERRILL LYNCH RESEARCH considers INTEL the class of the semiconductor industry and also likes MOTOROLA because of its strong cellular-phone business. ("USA Today", 7/2)

GENERAL MOTORS' oldest division, OLDSMOBILE, is facing some serious marketing problems, analysts say. One problem is consumers' inability to distinguish an Olds from a BUICK or CHEVROLET. "A brand identity has to be something people can understand," says JACK TROUT of marketing consulting firm TROUT & RIES. He says Olds is "still groping." The company's most recent campaign, "This is not your Father's Oldsmobile," was an attempt to appeal to younger buyers, but the company is unwilling to give up its base of older buyers, says JAMES MUIR, the owner of a dealership in Troy, Michigan. This cross- generational appeal "tends to muddy the waters," according to Muir. Oldsmobile sales are predicted to be around 560,000 vehicles this year, down from 1.1 million in 1986. ("BusinessWeek", 7/9)

MONEY & CREDIT:

PRESIDENT BUSH has had a dramatic effect on the markets lately. On Friday "his comments that he sees lower interest rates sent the dollar down initially," according to CHUCK SPENCE of FIRST INTERSTATE BANK. But DAN BROOKS of DAI-ICHI KANGYO BANK said that Bush's statement meant nothing. "Nothing really new came out of [Bush's press conference]. He's still posturing to say he is willing to do just about anything to get a tax package," said Brooks. (Reuters, 6/29)

INGO KULLER, chief trader at WESTDEUTSCHE LANDESBANK GIROZENTRALE in Dusseldorf, is bullish on the dollar. He believes the dollar remains undervalued against the mark and is overdue for a rally. He warns, however that forecast in the currency will be very difficult. "Who knows how the markets are going to react to [German] monetary union?" (WSJ, 7/2)

German monetary union may not have the dramatic impact that many have predicted, according to CHARLES WHEELER, foreign exchange manager at SWISS VOLKSBANK. "It could be the greatest non-event in history," says Wheeler. "Nothing might happen. The best thing to do is not to take a lot of risk over the weekend against marks." (Reuters, 6/29)

"I think part of the deficit-reduction package will be at least an implicit pledge by the Fed to lower short-term interest rates," says EDWARD YARDENI, chief economist at PRUDENTIAL-BACHE. (NYT, 7/1)

"Monetary policy is a lot tighter than people outside of the White House realize," says ERICH HEINEMANN, chief economist of LADENBURG, THALMANN & CO. "They understand that, which is why they're so upset," he says of the administration officials who are urging the Fed to ease. (Barron's, 7/2)

"I think that the primary focus of attention [at the Open Market Committee meeting this week] will be the economy," says DAVID JONES, chief economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON & CO. "The Fed will reassess its estimates of growth based on the extremely weak data we've seen. The least emphasis will be placed on deficit-cutting measures. The Fed does not want to be perceived as making deals with politicians." ("Investor's Daily", 7/2)

"It would be a misplaced assumption to decide that the Fed is completely immune from the realm of politics," says WILLIAM SULLIVAN, director of money market research at DEAN WITTER REYNOLDS. "Given the softer tone of the economy, [the Fed] must recognize that if it stays too tight for too long, there is a legitimate risk of recession. Given the current weight of opinion in Washington, a downturn ... would certainly be viewed as the fault of the Federal Reserve system." ("Investor's Daily", 7/2)

The conventional wisdom seems to be that an easing is in the works. "The Fed is undergoing a fairly deep reassessment of the state of the economy," says DAVID JONES, chief economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON & CO. Certainly by September, but probably "around the end of July, we'll ... see a cut," says Jones. DEAN WITTER REYNOLDS' KEVIN FLANAGAN agrees, saying, "If we get a bad unemployment report next week, the Fed might ease." (Reuters, 6/29)

JAMES KOCHAN, chief fixed-income strategist at MERRILL LYNCH, says that the factors that fueled the bond market's roller-coaster performance during the first half of 1990 remain in place. This makes bond-market forecasting extremely difficult. "The market begins the second half under the influence of two opposing forces -- a soft domestic economy that could prompt Fed easing and booming economies overseas that could spark central bank tightening." (WSJ, 7/2)

"We are not ready to call it a huge, dramatic rally, but you will see better overall performance" in the junk bond market, says JOSEPH BENCIVENGA, director and manager of high-yield research at SALOMON BROTHERS INC. He says that while prices have been bid higher for many junk bonds, trading has been active in a limited number of issues. (WSJ, 7/2)

"The [bond] market begins the second half under the influence of two opposing forces -- a soft domestic economy that could prompt Fed easing and booming economies overseas that could spark central-bank tightening," says JAMES KOCHAN, chief fixed-income strategist at MERRILL LYNCH. (WSJ, 7/2)

"What the '80s were about was the search for high yields and I think increasingly as the '90s wear on what will be made manifest is the desirability of low yields, that is of capital preservation," says JAMES GRANT. "The ultimate low yield investment is gold and I think gold will give a good account of itself in time. And Treasury bills. Things that preserve capital will come back into their own. ("Wall Street Week," 6/29)

THE ECONOMY:

"The fact that the sales of new homes edged upward a tiny bit does not, in anyway, indicate that the housing market is strengthening," says JONATHAN GOLDFARB of MERRILL LYNCH. Sales were up 0.4% in May. (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/29)

GIULIO MARTINI, economist at SANFORD C. BERNSTEIN & CO., expects the economy to snap back with 4.5% growth in the second half of this year from about 2% in the first half. "When the economy turns out to be stronger, the underestimation of earnings will be greatest for those companies that are sensitive to the economy," he says. (WSJ, 7/2)

"I think evidence is mounting that the broad slowdown we've seen since late last fall may quickly turn into a recession," says JOSEPH CARSON, economist at CHEMICAL BANK. (Barron's, 7/2)

MICHAEL STRAUSS, chief economist for UBS SECURITIES, expects the economy to slow so much that bonds will be a better investment than stocks. "In the second half we will get a major slowdown in consumer spending," he says, predicting a GNP growth rate of less than 1.5% for the rest of the year. (WSJ, 7/2)

There's an old joke that says if all the economists in the world were placed end to end, they still could not reach a conclusion. But SAMUEL D. KAHAN and FREDERICK W. STURM of FUJI SECURITIES think they have come up with an index that takes the uncertainty out of forecasting inflation. Combining factors such as commodity prices, dollar exchange rates, employment figures and capacity utilization, they say the index "has the uncanny ability to foretell turning points in the inflation rate," about six months in advance. Their index correctly predicted the fall of the CPI from 5.2% in January to 4.4% in May. Right now, "the index is telling us that the Fed's concern about persistent inflation is justified," says Sturm. They predict that inflation will remain around 4.5% through the end of the year and increase slightly in early 1991. ("BusinessWeek", 7/9)

"People are concerned about the fact that there are inflationary problems in Germany with this unification deal," says DAVID MARSHALL of MMS INTERNATIONAL. "And that's going to drive interest rates up in Germany ... world rates are going to have go up as well, particularly in the U.S." This rise in interest rates could slow down the world economy, says Marshall. (FNN "World Business Update", 7/2)

IN WASHINGTON:

PRESIDENT BUSH's newfound willingness to consider taxes has thrown Washington into chaos. Many Republicans have sharply criticized the plan, disappointed that the Administration has strayed from the conservative rhetoric that brought Bush the nomination. "Raising taxes is the worst of all worlds," says REP. DANA ROHRBACHER (R. - Calif.). "I will not vote for a tax increase." Others are trying to promote new tax structures that can help solve the budget crisis. "We ought to look at those groups who profited from the tax deficit of the 1980s to solve the budget deficit of the 1990s," says SENATE BUDGET COMMITTEE Chairman JAMES SASSER (D. - Tenn.). But with all this talk, there is still a serious question as to whether anything will actually be accomplished. Former Republican aide to the Senate Budget Committee STEPHEN E. BELL says, "Folks who have been around this town a long time think it has a long way to go." ("BusinessWeek", 7/9)

Along with the bombshell on taxes, PRESIDENT BUSH also announced an initiative to open up free trade with Latin American countries. Bush said he wished to make the entire Western Hemisphere into a free trade zone. While economists praised the concept, many were somewhat less enthusiastic about the plan's chances. PETER HAKIM, director of INTER-AMERICAN DIALOGUE, says in order to increase free trade, one must first increase trade. "One of the great problems is the question of confidence in Latin America," says Hakim. "The locals are shipping their money overseas, and the foreigners shy away from investments." ("The Christian Science Monitor", 6/29)

SENATE MAJORITY LEADER ROBERT DOLE says the administration's deficit solution will not include any changes in tax rates. "I think the President will not go along with an increase in tax rates. Most Americans say when you tax money out of pay check that's a tax increase, so I don't see any rate changes." (CNN "Moneyline", 6/29)

"I think there's substantial disagreement on the issue of defense," says SEN. JAMES SASSER (D. - Tenn.), chairman of the SENATE BUDGET COMMITTEE. Democrats want to cut $16 billion, while Republicans are more comfortable with figures around $9 billion. Either way, defense is likely to be slashed, according to Sasser. "... All agree that defense has to take a substantial reduction." (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/29)

"Both the Bush Administration and Congress would like to extract a monetary policy quid pro quo from the Federal Reserve in exchange for their new enthusiasm for fiscal restraint, especially in the context of a shaky economy," says RICHARD BERNER, a senior economist at SALOMON BROTHERS. "Barring conclusive signs of further economic weakness, however we expect the Fed to resist these pressures." ("Investor's Daily", 7/2)

Budget analyst STANLEY E. COLLENDER of PRICE WATERHOUSE & CO. says the budget agreement, whatever form it eventually takes, is likely to upset everyone from defense contractors to senior citizens. "All of the solutions to the deficit are a lot more painful than the deficit," says

Collender. But he qualifies that judgement, saying, "At least in the near term." ("BusinessWeek", 7/9)

SAN FRANCISCO (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Transcisco Industries (AMEX: TNIA, TNIB) today announced that its international subsidiary, Transcisco Trading Co. together with Haka Corp. of Finland, signed letters of intent to establish two joint venture railcar leasing companies in Poland. The first joint venture will be between Transcisco Trading Co., Haka Corp. and Siarkopol, a sulphur producer. The second joint venture would be between Transcisco Trading Co., Haka Corp. and the Transportation Users Association of Poland (TUA).

Siarkopol is Poland's largest producer of sulfur with production in excess of five million tons per year. Siarkopol is also the second largest exporter of sulfur in the world, second only to Canada, with exports approaching four million tons per year. It is expected that the joint venture would modify Siarkopol's fleet of more than 1,800 molten sulfur tank cars with Transcisco's proprietary Uni-Temp heating system. Siarkopol would be the major lessee with a smaller number of cars leased to various Eastern and Western European companies. In addition, the joint venture would cooperate with Siarkopol to develop a special railcar for the movement of prilled (granulated) sulfur.

The TUA is the largest tank car owner in Poland with a fleet of over 12,500 cars in service. The joint venture proposed would modify TUA's fleet of over 3,000 heated tank cars with the Uni-Temp heating system and TUA is expected to be the venture's primary lessee of the modified cars.

Transcisco Trading Co. owns 20 percent of the SOVFINAMTRANS railcar leasing joint venture in the U.S.S.R., and sees the aforementioned potential joint ventures in Poland as a natural extension of business opportunities in Eastern Europe.

Mark C. Hungerford, chairman of Transcisco, said, "The signing of the two agreements is the first step for Transcisco to broaden its market for Uni-Temp equipped tank cars in Poland and several Eastern European countries. Our very positive financial and operating results in the U.S.S.R. can now be augmented in these other large markets of tank car users. There are no western-style railcar leasing companies in Eastern Europe so our logical partners are the state-owned enterprises, in this newly opened part of the world where rail transportation is more important than any other mode of transportation, and where our proprietary technology and our unique financial and organizational skills provide Transcisco real market leadership."

Transcisco Industries operates rail car maintenance and retrofitting operations through its Transcisco Rail Services division, and its wholly owned subsidiary, Transcisco Tours, operates a dinner train in San Antonio Texas. Transcisco owns 36 percent of PLM International, an AMEX-listed diversified equipment leasing company and Transcisco also owns 20 percent of SOVFINAMTRANS, a U.S.S.R. railcar leasing company that operates tank cars with Transcisco's Uni-Temp heating system. Transcisco expects to diversify its exposure, both in equipment-types and geography, to proprietary transportation equipment, parts and operating businesses using its own unique technologies and its proven financing skills.

LOS ANGELES (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Westwood One, Inc. (NASDAQ: WONE) today reported operating income of $1,721,000 for its second quarter ended May 31, 1990, as compared with a second quarter operating loss of $3,241,000 last year, representing a $5 million improvement.

It reported a 42 percent reduction in its net loss to $3,817,000 or a loss of $.26 per share in the second quarter of this year, from a loss of $6,553,000 or a loss of $.45 per share reported a year ago. Revenue increased during the quarter by 27 percent to $37,378,000 from $29,461,000 in the comparable quarter a year ago.

William J. Battison, president and chief financial officer of Westwood One said that the improvement in the company's second quarter was primarily attributable to the success of programs implemented over the past three years.

"We have seen good improvement in our business this year," Battison said. "The networks, the radio stations and 'Radio & Records' are all making good progress.

"In every case but one, the properties we have purchased over the past three years have been turnaround properties. Maximizing their value required extensive and costly restructuring and redirection."

Battison said, "We are extremely pleased that despite an increase in both interest expense and goodwill amortization, we were able to generate a significant improvement in both our pretax and net loss for the quarter," he stated. "As these properties become more productive, we expect to see continued improvement in both sales and profits."

Westwood One is the largest producer and distributor of radio programming and the parent company of the Mutual Broadcasting System and the NBC Radio Networks. The company owns and operates radio stations in New York City and Los Angeles, and is the owner of the radio trade publication, "Radio & Records".

NEW CANAAN, CT (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Smith Corona Corp.'s (NYSE: SCO) Chairman and Chief Executive Officer G. Lee Thompson announced today that earnings for the fourth quarter ending June 30 are currently expected to show a small loss. Through the first nine months, the company reported net income of $34.4 million, or $1.14 per share.

Thompson stated, "The expected loss for the quarter is attributable to charges relating to inventory writedowns and non-recurring provisions for major overhead expense reduction programs being implemented throughout the company designed to reduce expenses commensurate with current projections." The final results will be available later this month.

In addition, he stated: "As much as management would like to continue paying the dividend at the current rate, management will recommend to the board of directors that the quarterly dividend be reduced to approximately five cents ($.05) per share after the 15 cents ($.15) per share payment is made July 6, 1990.

"We believe this is in the best interests of our stockholders for the long term, considering the continuing sluggish economic conditions and competitive pricing actions by Far Eastern manufacturers targeted at our U.S. market.

"Smith Corona continues its leading industry position in the U.S. and we are pleased with the growth of our international business as we enter our new product year."

Thompson continued, "Management has taken and will continue to take action to help position the company for a return to growth when the market and economy improves."

DALLAS (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Hallwood Realty Partners, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership and affiliate of The Hallwood Group Incorporated (NYSE: HWG), will begin an exchange offer for all of the limited partner interests in 11 limited partnerships sponsored by Equitec Financial Group, Inc. (NYSE: EFG).

Under the terms of the exchange, newly issued limited partner interests in a single new partnership into which the 11 will be consolidated, will be exchanged for presently outstanding limited partner interests in the Equitec partnerships, provided that a majority of the interests held by investors in each partnership approve the exchange and certain other conditions are met. The newly issued interests will be listed on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol "HRY."

As a result of the exchange, Equitec will withdraw as the general partner of the participating Equitec partnerships. The new partnership will become the indirect owner of the real estate and other assets of the Equitec partnerships, and Hallwood Realty Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of HWG, will be the general partner of the new Partnership.

The 27 properties in the partnerships include office, industrial and retail space in a variety of geographical areas, with an aggregate fair market value, as of Dec. 31, 1989, as appraised by Cushman & Wakefield, of $534,740.000.

The present general partner, Equitec, has recently defaulted on significant debt obligations. Any further financial deterioration could have adverse effects on the partnerships, including rendering Equitec unable to provide services or advance funds required by the partnerships.

"We believe this proposed exchange and consolidation offers Equitec limited partners a significant opportunity," said William L. Guzzetti, president of Hallwood Realty Corporation.

"Hallwood has considerable experience in 'corporate rescue financing' situations like this in real estate and other industries, which will better enable us to meet the objectives of the proposed transaction: substantial annual cost savings and operating efficiencies, regular cash distributions a change in the operating management, liquidity, asset diversification, access to capital sources and potential for growth."

"Furthermore," he said, "Hallwood views this consolidation as the first in a 'new generation' of consolidations, where an outside, experienced entity replaces a sponsor and general partner, and intends to aggressively grow and manage the portfolio of properties, emphasizing cash distributions to the limited partners and the long-term enhancement of the properties."

VINEYARD, UT (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Geneva Steel (NYSE: GNV) reported net income of $12.2 million for the third quarter ending May 31, 1990, or $.87 per common share. This compares with net income of $15.2 million, or $1.14 per common share for the same quarter of the previous fiscal year.

Sales and tons shipped for the period totaled $133.6 million and 361,000 tons, respectively, compared with $137.3 million and 360,000 tons in the same quarter of fiscal year 1989. Net income for the third quarter of 1990 increased substantially, up 67 percent over the previous three months, but still below the same quarter a year ago.

Joseph A. Cannon, president and chief executive officer, said, "Unlike the third quarter of 1989, this past quarter was characterized by decreased demand and excess capacity which substantially depressed pricing. However, due to the flexibility of Geneva Steel's rolling mill operations, the company continues to be successful in shifting a significant portion of its production to higher and less volatile priced plate products."

"The operating flexibility limited the reduction in overall price realization to three percent," Cannon said. "This favorable price realization, in conjunction with improved efficiencies from our major manufacturing divisions, has resulted in improved net income over the previous quarter and exceeds management's expectations for the period," he added.

During the nine months ended May 31, 1990, net income was $31.3 million, or $2.51 per common share on sales of $386.9 million. This compares with net income of $40.4 million, or $3.03 per common share of $379.3 million for the same period of fiscal year 1989.

LOWELL, MA (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Wang Laboratories Inc. (AMEX: WAN) today set new price/performance standards in its industry-standard PC product line with two powerful systems based on Intel Corporation i486 and i386 microprocessors.

The Wang PC 480/25C delivers the power of a 25-Megahertz (MHz), 80486 processor at a price that compares with Compaq Computer Corp.'s 33MHz, 80386 offering. The Wang PC 350/33C, which offers a powerful 33MHz, 80386-based central processor (CPU) housed in a small-footprint chassis, is priced on a par with many 80386-based 25MHz systems on the market.

"These new models give users a great deal of flexibility in tailoring PC solutions to their high-end processing needs," said John C. Smith, program manager and director of Microsystems at Wang.

"The PC 480/25C offers outstanding performance and expansion capabilities for some of the fastest-growing areas in today's PC market - local area network (LAN) servers, hosts in UNIX(R) multiuser environments, technical workstations, and standalone systems for power-user applications.

"The PC 350/33C will be particularly attractive to individual users as a unique power platform that offers very high performance in a small-footprint package," Smith added. "It is one of the most competitive systems on the market today in price, performance, and flexibility, compared to similar products from other major vendors."

The PC 480/25C provides the computing power needed to meet the processing demands of mulituser environments like UNIX and the flexibility to accommodate large-capacity disk drives and other options that may be required by UNIX users.

By teaming the PC 480/25C with industry-standard PC LAN operating systems, users can create a sophisticated, powerful operating environment for client/server-based applications.

In addition, the PC 480/25C is an attractive platform for the MS-DOS power-user market (for instance in financial services, where large financial models require high-performance engines), as well as for CAD/CAM and scientific environments.

The PC 350/33C offers an ideal solution for individuals who need computing power in a space-saving, standalone desktop package for desktop publishing CAD, and database applications.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Asbestos abatement policies are changing from the "hype and hysteria" of the 1980s to a more rational process today according to Kenneth Y. Millian, a vice president of W.R. Grace & Co. (NYSE: GRA), who recently spoke to a group of independent reinsurance underwriters.

Noting that the risk of injury from exposure to asbestos inside of a building is negligible, Millian said society must weigh the possibility of exposure to asbestos with other more dangerous risks, such as smoking and motor vehicle accidents. "I am asking that we compare the risks we face every day and make scientifically sound, informed judgments about asbestos in buildings," he said.

Millian referred to several recent scientific studies -- one by Harvard University's Energy and Environmental Policy Center and the other recently published by Science magazine. Both state that in-place asbestos does not pose a significant health threat to building occupants and should not be removed. Millian noted that asbestos in building air is so small that "It is typically less than or equivalent to the amount of asbestos we find in the air outdoors, where asbestos occurs naturally."

Millian also mentioned new guidelines proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for handling and maintaining in-place asbestos. Millian noted in his speech that the EPA in recent testimony before committees in both the House and Senate to set the record straight on asbestos in buildings, stated, "Prevailing asbestos levels in buildings...seem to be very low...Accordingly, the health risk to building occupants...also appears to be very low," and "Removal is often not a building owner's best course of action to reduce exposure."

The draft rulings also call for protecting the health of service and maintenance workers and reducing building occupants' potential exposure to asbestos. EPA also suggests asbestos-containing material be removed only if it has been seriously damaged.

"Until recently, asbestos removals were running amok," he said, noting that school districts spent millions of dollars on unnecessary asbestos removals. "The important distinction between occupational exposure and building occupant exposure became blurred by emotion and rhetoric," he stated.

"Asbestos in buildings does not equal health risk," concluded Millian. "Asbestos in buildings should be handled through comprehensive operations and management programs that protect the health and safety of building maintenance workers. Only through this approach can we safeguard both the fiscal and physical health of our future."

INDIANAPOLIS (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE -- MCI Telecommunications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC) today announced an expansion of its PrimeTime long distance calling plan to include Indiana in-state calling.

The plan will now offer Indiana residential customers substantial savings and convenience on both in-state and out-of-state long distance calls.

The newly expanded calling plan offers average savings of up to 32 percent on a 10 minute in-state evening call when compared to AT&T's standard rates for Dial 1 service in Indiana. In addition, the new plan begins at 5 p.m., five hours earlier than the 10 p.m. starting times for AT&T's in-state only and out-of-state only calling plans.

"This new expansion of MCI's PrimeTime plan allows Indiana customers to pay one flat rate for both in-state and out-of-state calling, thus minimizing confusion over billing rates," said Bob Froetscher, director of marketing for MCI's Midwest Division.

"And with PrimeTime, customers can make long distance calls during more convenient evening and weekend hours," Froetscher added.

Under the new PrimeTime plan, Indiana customers pay only $9.85 for the first hour and only $6.50 for each additional hour of both in-state and out-of-state calling.

Reduced-rate calls on the new plan can be made from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday, 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Sunday and from 11 p.m. Sunday to 8 a.m. Monday. Customers also receive an additional 10 percent discount off MCI's regular low rates on all long distance calls made during non-plan hours.

The expanded calling plan is the newest addition to MCI's line of Premier Calling Plans. Similar plans are also available in the states of Illinois Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin, among others. The company introduced the first of its Premier Calling Plans, PrimeTime and SuperSaver, in April, 1989. MCI also introduced three international calling plans (Call Canada, Call Europe, and Call Pacific) earlier this year.

MIAMI (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. (AMEX: CCL) reported net income of $54.6 million ($0.41 EPS) on revenues of $352.5 million for the second quarter ended May 31, 1990, compared to net income of $41.6 million ($0.31 EPS) on revenues of $284.7 million for the same quarter in 1989.

Carnival's revenues and net income were at record levels for its second quarter, and represented 24 percent and 31 percent increases, respectively over the comparable quarter in 1989. The increases were primarily attributed to new capacity provided by Carnival's Fantasy, which entered service in March 1990, as well as to the addition of 490 berths to Holland America's Westerdam which re-entered service in March 1990 following a six-month drydocking for lengthening. The opening of 650 rooms completed during the final phase of construction of Carnival's Crystal Palace Resort & Casino in January 1990 also contributed to the revenue increase.

Net income for the six months ended May 31, 1990, was $79.8 million ($0.59 EPS) on revenues of $611.9 million, compared to net income of $87.9 million ($0.65 EPS) on revenues of $516.4 million for the same period in 1989. The decline in net income for the six months is attributable to lower results during the first quarter when the Westerdam was out of service for the entire quarter and the Carnivale was out for six weeks undergoing a major refurbishment.

For the three months ended May 31, 1990, the line achieved an average occupancy level of 106.6 percent carrying 257,443 passengers, compared to 205,405 passengers for an occupancy level of 106.0 percent for the second quarter of 1989. This represents a 25 percent increase over boardings recorded during the second quarter of 1989. Combined with first quarter results, the line achieved a fleetwide occupancy level of 105.4 percent vs. 106.1 percent for the first six months of 1989. Passenger counts rose 11 percent to 422,474 in the first six months of 1990 from 382,236 for the first half of 1989.

Carnival is the world's largest cruise line based on the number of passengers carried. Together with its subsidiaries Holland America Line and Windstar Sail Cruises, Carnival currently operates 15 ships in Alaska, the Caribbean, the South Pacific and the Mediterranean. The company also operates Carnival's Crystal Palace Resort & Casino, a 1,550-room hotel and casino complex in Nassau, Bahamas. The Fantasy, Carnival's new 2,600-passenger ship, began service on March 2, 1990. Carnival has a second 2,600-passenger vessel under construction, scheduled for delivery in April 1991. Negotiations are underway for construction of a third 2,600-passenger vessel for the Carnival fleet. Carnival also recently contracted to construct three more ships for Holland America Line which are scheduled for delivery in late 1992, 1993 and 1994.

TORONTO (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Cineplex Odeon Corp. (NYSE,TSE: CPX) announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary, Plitt Theatres Inc., has entered into an agreement to transfer its interest in the 18-screen Universal City Cinemas of Universal City, Calif., to Universal City Studios Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of MCA INC. of Universal City, Calif.

Total consideration to be received by Cineplex Odeon for the transaction will be $45 million U.S. In addition, a Cineplex Odeon subsidiary will be retained to manage the theatre on a long-term basis, for a fee. The purchase price for the theatre complex is subject to post-closing adjustments which are not expected to be material. The transaction is also subject to U.S. regulatory approval and to the completion of certain disclosure schedules. The transaction is expected to close during the third quarter of 1990. The proceeds of the transaction will be used to reduce the corporation's debt.

The sale agreement provides that Plitt is entitled within 60 days to obtain a competing bid from another investor on similar terms but at a higher price, in which case Universal City Studios Inc. will have the option of matching that offer or, if it chooses not to do so and does not object to the purchaser becoming a tenant on its property on conditions set out in the existing lease, Plitt will be entitled to sell the theatre to such other bidder. In either case, an increased price would be achieved on the sale of the theatre. The transaction must be closed by Sept. 26.

Since this transaction involves a related party, it was negotiated on Cineplex Odeon's behalf by a special committee of directors independent of MCA. The committee received a fairness opinion from independent investment bankers in connection with the transaction.

Cineplex Odeon is one of the largest theatre circuits in North American and, after giving effect to the transaction described above and other announced transactions, includes approximately 1,530 screens in 390 locations in Canada and the United States.

TORONTO (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Cineplex Odeon Corporation (NYSE: CPX) announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary, Plitt Theatres, Inc., has entered into an agreement to transfer its interest in the 18-screen Universal City Cinemas of Universal City, Calif. to Universal City Studios Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of MCA Inc. (NYSE: MCA) of Universal City, Calif.

Total consideration to be received by Cineplex Odeon for the transaction will be US$45 million. In addition, a Cineplex Odeon subsidiary will be retained to manage the theater on a long-term basis, for a fee. The purchase price for the theater complex is subject to post-closing adjustments which are not expected to be material. The transaction is also subject to U.S. regulatory approval and to the completion of certain disclosure schedules. The transaction is expected to close during the third quarter of 1990. The proceeds of the transaction will be used to reduce the corporation's debt.

The sale agreement provides that Plitt is entitled within 60 days to obtain a competing bid from another investor on similar terms but at a higher price, in which case Universal City Studios Inc. will have the option of matching that offer or, if it chooses not to do so and does not object to the purchaser becoming a tenant on its property on conditions set out in the existing lease, Plitt will be entitled to sell the theater to such other bidder. In either case, an increased price would be achieved on the sale of the theater. The transaction must be closed by Sept. 26, 1990.

Since this transaction involves a related party, it was negotiated on Cineplex Odeon's behalf by a special committee of directors independent of MCA. The committee received a fairness opinion from independent investment bankers in connection with the transaction.

"This transaction reflects Cineplex Odeon's previously stated intention to reduce debt, while protecting our strategic position in major markets. Our continuing management of Universal City Cinemas preserves the integrity of our circuit and our strong participation in the Los Angeles market. The transaction, along with other steps we have undertaken, significantly assists in the restructuring of our corporation's debt," said Allen Karp, president and chief executive officer of Cineplex Odeon Corporation.

Cineplex Odeon is one of the largest theater circuits in North America and after giving effect to the transaction described above and other announced transactions, includes approximately 1,530 screens in 390 locations in Canada and the United States.

LONDON (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Burmah Oil (NASDAQ: BURMY) has reorganized its management and operating structure and made a number of senior management changes aimed at strengthening its position as a leading international marketer of specialized oil and chemical products. The company also proposes, subject to shareholder approval, to change its name to Burmah Castrol plc.

The main features are: -- The creation of a tighter company structure through the merging of the previously separate corporate and divisional head office functions.

-- The establishment of three international business groups -- Lubricants, Chemicals and Fuels -- in place of the former divisional structure. Shipping and Energy Investments are unaffected.

The objective of the reorganization is to eliminate duplication and speed up communications and decision-making at every level.

As a result, the following key senior appointments are announced: Jonathan Fry, a main board director and chief executive of Castrol, becomes managing director responsible for the operations of the three business groups, reporting to the chairman and chief executive, Lawrence Urquhart.

-- John Ellicock, a main board director and previously chief executive of the Speciality Chemicals division, will lead the European lubricants operations.

-- John Griffiths, hitherto deputy managing director of Castrol Ltd., has been appointed to the main board and will be in charge of the Chemicals group.

-- Brian Hardy, previously Castrol Ltd.'s finance director, has joined the main board as the new finance director in place of Roger Wood, who has resigned as a director and will be leaving at a mutually agreed date to pursue other opportunities.

-- Tim Stevenson will head the Fuels group, which will cover the key fuels operations together with car care products.

-- Michael Cooper, the main board director responsible for Shipping and Energy Investments, will continue to report directly to Lawrence Urquhart.

Urquhart, chairman and chief executive, commented: "These organizational changes are in accord with our strategy of focusing on key strengths, which we successfully pursued throughout the 1980s. The management team is a strong one, with a proven track record.

"The tighter structure will ensure resources are even more effectively concentrated on business unit needs, as well as on the company's growth and expansion.

"Changing the name to Burmah Castrol will give the company and its operations a greater visibility worldwide and assist our development strategy. The world-renowned Castrol name is a very valuable asset and should be given the greatest possible prominence. With lubricants accounting for over 60 percent of trading profit in 1989, it is also fitting that we should formally acknowledge the importance of Castrol to the company as a whole. At the same time, the Burmah name retains the goodwill, prestige and historic associations of the company, which was formed over 100 years ago, while acknowledging the importance of Fuels and Chemicals.

"We are confident that the various changes we have announced today will enhance earnings growth to the benefit of shareholders and employees alike."

NOTES TO EDITORS: 1. Overview of Burmah Castrol's New Structure The restructured Burmah Castrol company has a single head office team, which integrates the previously separate corporate and divisional head office staffs.

In addition, three international business groups have been created to replace the Lubricants & Fuels and Speciality Chemicals divisions. These new groups, which report to Jonathan Fry, managing director, are:

-- Lubricants: encompassing all lubricants and allied functional fluids operations, trading principally under the Castrol name. The Lubricants group represented over 60 percent of the company's total trading profit in 1989.

-- Chemicals: consisting of the company's businesses in adhesives, coatings, screen printing inks and sealants, and accounting for some 10 percent of trading profit in 1989.

-- Fuels: including the company's key fuels operations in the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland, Sweden and Turkey, together with the United Kingdom-based Spectra and Simoniz car care products businesses. These businesses represented some 11 percent of trading profit in 1989. The Fuels group will also act as a center of expertise and support for the fuels operations in Australia, Belgium, Chile and the Republic of Ireland, which have close links with the local lubricants operations and will report into the appropriate regional Lubricants group directorates.

Shipping and Energy Investments continue to report directly to Lawrence Urquhart. Shipping's principal activity is the transportation of liquefied natural gas in a joint venture with Mitsui OSK Lines Ltd. and Nissho Iwai Corporation of Japan. Energy Investments has interests in a number of energy companies in Pakistan and a 29.7 percent stake in Premier Consolidated Oilfields plc. These two activities accounted for some 15 percent of trading profit in 1989.

CLEVELAND (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - MCI Telecommunications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC) today announced an expansion of its PrimeTime long distance calling plan to include Ohio in-state calling.

The plan will now offer Ohio residential customers substantial savings and convenience on both in-state and out-of-state long distance calls.

The newly expanded calling plan offers average savings of up to 38 percent on a 10 minute in-state evening call when compared to AT&T's standard rates for Dial 1 service in Ohio. In addition, the new plan begins at 5 p.m., five hours earlier than the 10 p.m. starting time for AT&T's out-of-state only calling plan, and four hours earlier than the 9 p.m. starting time for AT&T's in-state only calling plan.

"This new expansion of MCI's PrimeTime plan allows Ohio customers to pay one flat rate for both in-stat and out-of-state calling, thus minimizing confusion over billing rates," said Bob Froetscher, director of marketing for MCI's Midwest Division.

"And with PrimeTime, customers can make long distance calls during more convenient evening and weekend hours," Froetscher added.

Under the new PrimeTime plan, Ohio customers pay only $8.95 for the first hour and only $6.50 for each additional hour of both in-state and out-of-state calling.

Reduced-rate calls on the new plan can be made from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday, 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Sunday and from 11 p.m. Sunday to 8 a.m. Monday. Customers also receive an additional 10 percent discount off MCI's regular low rates on all long distance calls made during non-plan hours.

"MCI is attempting to make long distance calling as easy as possible for our customers," said Froetscher. "The savings and convenient calling hours of this plan make PrimeTime the most convenient calling package available in the marketplace today, and our recently introduced billing arrangement with Ohio Bell allows our customers to pay for both local and long distance calls on one bill."

The expanded calling plan is the newest addition to MCI's line of Premier Calling Plans. Similar plans are also available in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin, among others. The company introduced the first of its Premier Calling Plans, PrimeTime and SuperSaver, in April, 1989. MCI also introduced three international calling plans (Call Canada, Call Europe, and Call Pacific) earlier this year.

MINNEAPOLIS (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - TCF Financial Corp. (TCF) (NYSE: TCB) today announced a balance sheet restructuring, including a second quarter provision for loan and real estate losses of $25 million; the closing of its Texas subsidiary, TCF Banc Savings, with a write-off of $13.1 million of Texas goodwill; and the sales of mortgage-backed securities, collateralized mortgage obligation (CMO) residuals, and loan servicing rights for combined net gain of approximately $300,000. As a result of these actions, TCF will report a second quarter net loss of approximately $32 million. TCF expects to return to profitability in the third and fourth quarters of 1990, will still meet its regulatory capital requirements, and plans to maintain its current dividend level.

According to William A. Cooper, TCF chairman and chief executive officer, "The increase in the reserves for loan and real estate losses is primarily the result of our previously announced first examination by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC). We believe that the FDIC is applying new and more rigorous standards in its examinations of financial institutions, particularly relating to commercial real estate where values have deteriorated in some sectors of the country. Our increase in reserves is primarily the result of these more rigorous standards being applied to TCF's remaining out-of-state commercial real estate loans made by prior management and some deterioration in these assets. It does not reflect a deterioration of the credit quality in TCF's other loan portfolios."

Cooper said the other restructuring moves were taken by management to strengthen the balance sheet, improve future profitability and reduce interest rate risk. He described the actions as follows:

1. The closing of TCF's Texas thrift subsidiary, and the related write-off of $13.1 million of goodwill which was largely excluded from capital under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). This Texas thrift was acquired in 1983. The thrift's closing and write-off of goodwill will improve future earnings by approximately $2 million per year. Closing the Texas subsidiary is not related to the regulatory examination but is the result of a decision to concentrate resources in the Midwest.

2. The sales of $137 million of mortgage-backed securities at a gain of $10.1 million, $28 million of interest-sensitive CMO residuals at an estimated loss of $14.4 million, and third party loan servicing rights at a gain of $4.6 million, resulting in a combined net gain of approximately $300,000. Although at current interest rate levels these sales will result in lower future net interest income, this action reduces TCF's interest rate risk.

TCF is the holding company for TCF Bank Savings fsb, the largest thrift and third largest banking institution headquartered in Minnesota. TCF Bank has 55 branches in Minnesota and 20 branches in Illinois.

The joint venture will be an American company owned 49.98 percent by Canon 49.98 percent by ECD, with the balance held by Professor Edwin O. Reischauer, former U.S. ambassador to Japan.

Under the agreement, USSC will manufacture and sell proprietary thin-film solar cell products under license from ECD and Canon. USSC's manufacturing operations will initially be in Troy.

Canon is making an initial $30 million capital contribution to the joint venture, including a credit of $8 million for canceling a previously announced term loan to ECD. SOMERS POINT, NJ (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Action Savings Bank SLA (NASDAQ: ANSL) announced today that the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) examiners have completed their field examination of the bank.

The bank had reported on May 15, 1990, that it expected the examination to result in an additional loan loss reserve. As a result, the bank will be required to provide an additional $7.4 million for loan loss reserves. The additional provision for loan losses will bring the bank's total loan loss reserves to $12.2 million, and will result in the reporting of a loss for the period ending June 30, 1990. However, the bank said it expects to recognize a $1.3 million tax refund from its 1990 federal tax return due to the increase in reserves. "Because of this loss," noted R. Glen Fenstermacher, chief executive officer, "the bank should be entitled to recover taxes paid in prior years under the loss carry-back provision of the tax law."

As a result of the increase in the loan loss reserves, the bank is not in compliance with all of the OTS regulatory capital requirements, and, therefore, will need to submit a capital plan to the OTS addressing the bank's needs for increased capital to achieve compliance in the future.

Under the applicable regulations, the bank cannot declare a dividend until the capital plan is submitted, and the bank anticipates that the suspension of its dividend will continue until capital compliance is achieved.

Fenstermacher stated, "The management of the bank continues to have confidence in the long-term prospects of the bank which has a broad base of loyal and dedicated depositors, employees and stockholders, and will continue to serve the South Jersey community in providing a spectrum of quality services as it has for the past 47 years."

"Action is concentrating on decreasing the bank's investment in real estate development loans and investments," added Fenstermacher. The bank's recent efforts have resulted in an $18.5 million, or 17.3 percent reduction in the bank's development loans as of May 31, 1990, compared to Sept. 30, 1989, the end of the bank's 1989 fiscal year. Similarly, the bank has reduced its direct investment in real estate and real estate joint ventures $1.2 million, or 8.2 percent, net of reserves established, during the same period.

Action Savings Bank SLA is headquartered in Somers Point and operates eight offices in Atlantic, Cape May and Ocean counties, N.J.

HONG KONG (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Hong Kong Telecom (NYSE PSE: HKT) today announced that Guangzhou became China's third international telecommunications gateway.

Previously all international telephone calls from China had to be routed to either Beijing or Shanghai. As China has increasingly operated its open door policy and developed its telecommunications infrastructure, the number of international telephone calls has grown rapidly.

The introduction of a third international gateway is a natural progression to cater for this growth and will enable the network between Guangzhou, Beijing, and Shanghai to be used more for domestic rather than overseas calls.

Director of Guangdong posts and telecommunications administrative bureau, Li Yi Sheng said: "Guangzhou, Beijing, and Shanghai will have greater capacity to handle both local and international calls. This will provide for a better quality of service for international calls and release otherwise heavily occupied telephone circuits for more domestic use."

"The long standing co-operation between telecommunications administrations in the PRC, especially in Guangdong, and Hong Kong Telecom International has led to the latter handling calls for the new international gateway.

"Calls to and from the new gateway will be connected to the rest of the world via Hong Kong using the Hong Kong to Guangzhou fiber optic cable and Hong Kong Telecom International's extensive telecommunication satellite and submarine cable facilities."

Fung Hak Ming, managing director of Hong Kong Telecom International said that the company's six "dish" antennae satellite earth station and its extensive network of submarine cables can easily cope with the additional telephone traffic.

Fung continued: "The existing fiber optic cable between Hong Kong and Guangzhou has an ultimate capacity of 47,000 simultaneous telephone conversations. A second cable is also being planned. Apart from telephone calls we expect to be handling telex, data, and television transmission. In fact, the full range of modern telecommunication services." Fung concluded.

Hong Kong Telecom companies have a long history of co-operation with the Telecommunication Administrations in China. John Tonroe, finance director of Hong Kong Telecom said: "We have always set out to help China develop its telecommunications infrastructure because that way we help Hong Kong too. Readily available, quality communications and economic prosperity go hand in hand."

microprocessor and the 32-bit EISA (Extended Industry Standard Architecture) bus.

In conjunction with today's announcement, the company has lowered the price on the Dell System 425E(TM), its 25-megahertz, i486-based personal computer announced in March 1990. The $1500 reduction, effective immediately, affects all standard configurations of the System 425E. The System 433E will be offered at the same price as the Dell System 425E prior to today's price reduction.

More Powerful for High-Performance Applications The System 433E offers the highest level of i486 performance at a price that is significantly lower than the Compaq Deskpro 486/25, an i486-based personal computer running at 25 megahertz. It also offers 25 percent to 30 percent processor performance increases over the Deskpro 486/25.

The System 433E is targeted toward the power user with high-performance applications needs such as software development, large spreadsheets for financial analysis, CAD/CAM/CAE, single and multiuser UNIX(R) applications and high-end network server applications.

Platform for UNIX Environments The System 433E can be used as a platform for the DELL Station, a fully integrated UNIX-based office automation system developed by Dell Computer Corp. A hardware/software solution for today's office environment, the DELL Station utilizes the Dell System 433E, 425E or 325, an 80386-based PC running at 25 megahertz, as powerful as UNIX/MS-DOS(R) workstations. The DELL Station can stand alone as a multitasking workstation or provide upward expansion to network or traditional multiuser, terminal-based environments.

The $1500 price reduction on the System 425E also applies to the DELL Station 425E. In addition, the DELL Station 325 has been reduced $1000.

Unsurpassed Price/Performance for Power Applications "The price and performance of the System 433E and Dell's top-rated service and support provide an outstanding value for applications that demand very high computation power and high-speed, large capacity storage," said Joel J. Kocher, senior vice president of U.S. sales and operations.

For industry-wide compatibility, the System 433E features high-performance 32-bit EISA bus support with six EISA and two ISA expansion slots for industry standard expansion boards.

In addition, the System 433E is fully compatible with MS-DOS, MS(R)-OS/2 and Dell UNIX System V. Dell UNIX System V is compatible with the AT&T(R) System V Interface Definition and will run most 386/ix, SCO UNIX and XENIX(R) applications. Dell also provides support for Novell(R) NOS (Network Operating System) and other network operating system environments.

EISA Bus Provides Industry-Standard Access to Expanded Capabilities

The System 433E supports the open standards EISA bus providing access to both ISA boards and the emerging market of high-performance EISA board offerings. "The System 433E is positioned as an evolutionary extension to Dell's current high-end product line," said G. Glenn Henry, senior vice president of Dell's product group. "The System 433E lets you take advantage of the highest level of power in a personal computer today with the i486 processor and the currently available EISA cards."

CHICAGO (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Major League Baseball and the Quaker Oats Co. (NYSE: OAT), maker of Gatorade Thirst Quencher, jointly announced a five-year sponsorship agreement today.

The agreement makes the Gatorade brand the "Official Sports Beverage of Major League Baseball." Gatorade will have the same designation for the All-Star Game, the National and American League Championship Series, and the World Series through the 1994 Major League Baseball season.

"We are pleased to finalize an agreement with Major League Baseball to the mutual benefit of all the 26 member clubs and Gatorade," said Quaker Oats' chairman and CEO, William D. Smithburg. "MLB and Gatorade compliment each other extremely well. The baseball season coincides with our peak selling season. It's the national pastime brought together with the nation's number-one sports beverage."

"We welcome the Quaker Oats Co. and Gatorade Thirst Quencher to Major League Baseball," said Major League Baseball Commissioner Francis T. Vincent Jr. "We look forward to a long and mutually beneficial relationship."

Smithburg continued: "The MLB/Gatorade partnership certainly benefits us by reinforcing Gatorade's leadership position in the increasingly competitive sports beverage category. This agreement also benefits MLB and baseball fans everywhere, as we've committed to supporting activities that ultimately will enhance the excitement surrounding existing MLB All-Star Game activities."

Additional highlights of the comprehensive agreement include sponsorship of the All-Star Workout Day "Gatorade Home Run Derby" beginning this year, and title sponsorship of the entire "Gatorade All- Star Workout Day" beginning in 1991.

The Gatorade/MLB sponsorship takes effect immediately. The first official title event will be the Gatorade Home Run Derby, scheduled for July 9 at Wrigley Field in Chicago, the site of this year's All-Star Game on July 10.

"We have been involved with MLB on an individual club-by-club basis in the past," said Quaker Oats' vice president of sports marketing, William D. Schmidt. "We will continue those activities, such as the Gatorade in-park promotional days. The real significance behind today's announcement is that Gatorade can now work directly with the commissioner's office in bringing value-added programs to the fans with the MLB clubs around the All-Star Game, NLCS, ALCS and the World Series. This is an agreement that's good for Gatorade and good for Major League Baseball."

DETROIT (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - MCI Telecommunications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC) today announced an expansion of its PrimeTime long distance calling plan to include Michigan in-state calling.

The plan will now offer Michigan residential customers substantial savings and convenience on both in-state and out-of-state long distance calls.

The newly expanded calling plan offers average savings of up to 37 percent on a 10 minute in-state evening call when compared to AT&T's standard rates for Dial 1 service in Michigan. In addition, the new plan begins at 5 p.m., five hours earlier than the 10 p.m. starting time for AT&T's out-of-state only calling plan, and four hours earlier than the 9 p.m. starting time for AT&T's in-state only calling plan.

"This new expansion of MCI's PrimeTime plan allows Michigan customers to pay one flat rate for both in-stat and out-of-state calling, thus minimizing confusion over billing rates," said Bob Froetscher, director of marketing for MCI's Midwest Division.

"And with PrimeTime, customers can make long distance calls during more convenient evening and weekend hours," Froetscher added.

Under the new PrimeTime plan, Michigan customers pay only $9.45 for the first hour and only $6.50 for each additional hour of both in-state and out-of-state calling.

Reduced-rate calls on the new plan can be made from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday, 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Sunday and from 11 p.m. Sunday to 8 a.m. Monday. Customers also receive an additional 10 percent discount off MCI's regular low rates on all long distance calls made during non-plan hours.

"MCI is attempting to make long distance calling as easy as possible for our customers," said Froetscher. "The savings and convenient calling hours of this plan make PrimeTime the most convenient calling package available in the marketplace today, and our recently introduced billing arrangement with Michigan Bell allows our customers to pay for both local and long distance calls on one bill."

The expanded calling plan is the newest addition to MCI's line of Premier Calling Plans. Similar plans are also available in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin, among others. The company introduced the first of its Premier Calling Plans, PrimeTime and SuperSaver, in April, 1989. MCI also introduced three international calling plans (Call Canada, Call Europe, and Call Pacific) earlier this year.

Headquartered in Chicago, MCI Midwest is an operating division of MCI Telecommunications Corporation serving Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin. The company owns and operates the world's second- largest communications network, providing a full range of global telecommunications services to businesses, residences and government agencies.

AMARILLO, TX (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Southwestern Public Service Co. (NYSE: SPS) today reported earnings of $2.70 per common share for the 12-month period ended May 31, 1990, up 22 cents from earnings of $2.48 for the comparable period last year.

W.R. Esler, SPS chairman of the board and chief executive officer, attributed the increase to recognition of $13.4 million in investment tax credits related to a previously disclosed Federal Energy Regulatory Commission order and $1.6 million in related revenues and interest, which contributed 35 cents per share to earnings in November 1989.

The electric utility reported third-quarter earnings of 53 cents per common share, down 14 cents from earnings of 67 cents for the comparable period of fiscal 1989.

In 1989, quarterly earnings were favorably impacted by the refund of $6.9 million in franchise taxes from the state of Texas. Lower kilowatt-hour sales to rural electric cooperatives and increased maintenance expenses caused by scheduled power-plant maintenance contributed to the decline in 1990 third-quarter earnings.

Total kwh sales to all classes of customers (excluding non-firm economy sales) in the 12 months ended May 31, 1990, increased 3.8 percent. These kwh sales declined 1.4 percent in the three-month period primarily due to decreased sales to rural electric cooperatives. This decline in kwh sales resulted mainly from weather-related factors.

SPS is a regional electric utility that provides electric service to a population of about one million people in a 52,000-square-mile area of the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Panhandle of Oklahoma, and southwestern Kansas. Corporate headquarters is in Amarillo, Texas.

PISCATAWAY, NJ (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - A new on-the-job computerized training system could be the next best thing to having a private tutor, only much less expensive. Bellcore's World of Intelligent Tutoring Systems (WITS) software teaches people how to use judgment and reason to quickly solve difficult problems associated with complex job functions.

According to Bellcore Project Manager Adam Irgon, "Industrial training, in contrast to academic learning, demands that information be integrated from many sources and applied directly to a student's job functions. The instructional process is further complicated by differences in each student's skill and experience. But private tutoring, much better suited to a diverse student population, can be prohibitively expensive.

"WITS has combined private tutoring techniques with a computer-based training system to create a highly efficient on-the-job learning environment tailored to the needs of each student," Irgon added.

WITS uses artificial intelligence technology as the basis for an "expert" system that can "capture" the expertise of a company's best workers. "In effect, the system is designed to use the same principles of reasoning and logic that human experts would to solve a complex problem associated with some aspect of a job," Irgon said.

As each student works on problems presented in a lesson, WITS compares his or her solutions with those of experts stored in its memory, and provides ongoing feedback to let them know how they're doing.

Unlike traditional computer-based training systems, WITS gathers its own information about students' learning proficiency as they progress through the lessons. WITS can use this information to select appropriate supplementary training material and instructional methods if needed.

WITS integrates on-screen text, video and graphics. Students can interrupt at any time to "ask" questions, switch topics, or get feedback by using a "mouse" to point to various on-screen icons. This built-in flexibility lets students learn at their own pace.

Bellcore's WITS prototype training module teaches students how to use

Bellcore's LEIS(TM) Plan system, a planning tool for outside plant engineering.

Although intelligent tutoring systems have been introduced into academic environments, this is the first time the techniques have been applied to industrial training, said Irgon. "Bellcore's WITS is the first intelligent tutoring system that can be readily adapted to a wide range of courses," he added. The company is developing "authoring" software to simplify and speed development of system curricula. Bellcore intends to make WITS available for licensing next year. WITS software runs on UNIX(R)-based workstations.

Bellcore provides technical support for the telecommunications companies of Ameritech, Bell Atlantic, BellSouth, NYNEX, Pacific Bell Southwestern Bell Corp. and U S West, as well as Cincinnati Bell and Southern New England Telephone.

GREENSBORO, NC (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Halstead Industries, Inc. announced today its plan to close its copper tubing manufacturing facility in Zelienople, Pa., on September 3. The 430 people employed at the plant and the United Steelworkers of America were notified today of the company's decision. Employment for all workers will be terminated.

"The unanticipated downturn within the construction industry and related businesses has resulted in decreased sales for the entire copper tubing industry," said Bill Halstead, chief executive officer. "Our decision to consolidate our manufacturing capabilities and close the Zelienople plant is a painful, but necessary business move."

Some of the newer, more versatile facilities can accomplish the tasks assigned to the Zelienople facility without loss of capacity. Zelienople is not equipped to make all the products assigned to the other plants.

Halstead said the decision to close the Zelienople facility is especially difficult because the company was founded in Zelienople in 1947 and experienced its early success there. Halstead Industries' headquarters was moved to Greensboro, N.C., in 1989.

The company plans to maintain its current production levels and simultaneously cut operating costs by absorbing Zelienople's workload within its newer, more versatile plants. Existing workers at the company's other plants can accommodate the extra work, according to Halstead.

"By consolidating our operations, we will be able to fully supply our customers needs in a competitive manner and cut operating costs. We will be better positioned to respond to the cyclical nature of our businesses in the future," Halstead said.

During the next 60 days, Halstead Industries will be meeting with all employees and representatives of the United Steelworkers of America discussing matters pertaining to the shutdown of this facility.

SAN JOSE, CA (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Calpine Corporation and New Orleans-based Freeport-McMoRan Resource Partners, Limited Partnership (NYSE: FRP), announced today that FRP has finalized the sale of its and Freeport-McMoRan Inc.'s (NYSE: FTX) producing geothermal energy properties in The Geysers area of Northern California to a partnership led by Calpine Corporation for $227 million in cash, a promissory note for $27 million and a residual 55 percent interest in the partnership after a defined payout of the Calpine investment. This transaction makes Calpine one of the country's leading geothermal producers.

"This is the third significant acquisition (by Calpine) in the past year and is a major step for Calpine to move from a service business to a developer, owner and operator of power generation facilities," said Pete Cartwright, president of Calpine.

Calpine and FRP formed a partnership called Santa Rosa Geothermal Company, L.P., to be the new owner of the geothermal properties. Calpine arranged a $200 million non-recourse, long-term debt financing for the partnership through Deutsche Bank AG, New York branch.

According to the agreement, the promissory note, which represents the value of a certain partnership interest being acquired by Calpine in addition to its basic partnership interest will be paid within six months after the closing if Calpine elects to sell to a third party or to retain such interest. Otherwise, the note will be cancelled, and the interest will be conveyed back to FRP, increasing its residual interest in the partnership from 55 percent to 77.5 percent.

Calpine will be the managing general partner of the new partnership and will operate and maintain the geothermal properties through its subsidiary Calpine-Geysers Plant Services, Inc.

The properties include the 20-megawatt (MW) Bear Canyon and 27-MW West Ford Flat power plants. Energy produced at these two power plants is sold to Pacific Gas And Electric Company (PG & E) under Standard Offer 4 contracts.

Also included are three steam fields with a capacity of 319 MW. Steam from these fields is sold to PG & E and to the Sacramento Municipal Utility District. One of PG & E's plants, Unit 13, is the largest geothermal plant in the world.

The majority of the 75 FTX employees located in Santa Rosa and involved in the development, operation and maintenance of FRP's and FTX's geothermal assets will be hired by Calpine.

This transaction will provide FRP with significant cash proceeds from the sale of its producing geothermal energy properties, which will be used initially to reduce debt flow and eventually to develop FRP's major sulphur/oil discovery at Main Pass Block 299, while allowing FRP to retain the opportunity to share in the benefits from the potentially higher future value of these producing properties.

Calpine Corporation, formed in 1984, is a wholly owned subsidiary of Electrowatt, Ltd. and is a developer, owner and operator of geothermal, cogeneration and hydroelectric projects.

FRP is a 62 percent owned affiliate of FTX and is primarily engaged in the production of phosphate fertilizer products; the exploration, mining and transportation of sulphur; and the mining of phosphate rock.

PITTSBURGH (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - The appointment of John H. Goodish as general manager of the USS Mon Valley Works was announced today by Thomas C. Graham, president of the USS division of USX Corp. (NYSE: X).

Goodish, 42, comes to the post here from the company's Gary (Ind.) Works, where he has been division manager of the plant's 84-inch hot strip mill.

At the Mon Valley Works, he succeeds Richard M. Wardrop Jr., who has resigned to pursue other interests. The Mon Valley Works is a consolidation of the Edgar Thomson Plant in Braddock, Pa., and the Irvin Plant at Dravosburg, Pa.

"John Goodish has established an outstanding record of steel plant leadership at Gary Works," Graham noted. "In a brief period of time, he has taken on several key assignments at Gary Works and achieved notable results. He is extremely well qualified to assume the top post at the Mon Valley Works."

A native of Greensboro, Pa., Goodish was graduated from Waynesburg College in 1970, with a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He joined the former U. S. Steel Corp. that same year as an accounting management trainee in Pittsburgh. He was promoted to his first management position as a junior auditor the following year.

In 1973, Goodish became supervisor-billing at the Irvin Plant and remained at the Dravosburg facility in a variety of accounting positions until 1977 when he was transferred to other accounting responsibilities at the former Homestead (Pa.) Works.

In 1982, he was promoted to general supervisor of line accounting at Clairton (Pa.) Works. Later that year, he went to the company's Pittsburgh headquarters, where he served in a number of accounting and financial positions.

In 1984, he went to Gary Works as accounting manager-mill analysis. He remained in that post until 1987, when he was promoted to division manager-coke and chemicals, a major move into plant operations.

Two years later, Goodish became manager-operations services for the Indiana plant, largest in the USS system. In that post, he headed all maintenance activities and plant services.

Goodish and his wife, Katherine, have three children. The family currently lives in Valparaiso, Ind., a community near Gary.

SAN DIEGO (JULY 2) PR NEWSWIRE - The sluggishness of the petroleum and mining activity over the past four years appears to be turning into a trend upward in new business for directional drilling survey instruments and systems at Humphrey Inc. (NASDAQ: HUPH). This is happening in the United States, but more noticeably in offshore areas, such as South America, the Far East and Africa.

Recent orders have come from Argentina for about $150,000, from Australia and a large one from the Far East for approximately $1.1 million; also a Los Angeles drilling company has ordered about $300,000 worth of standard downhole gyro steering tools and Surface Recording Gyro (SRG) survey systems for Africa.

In addition to the standard equipment now on order, the company has a horizontal gyro survey tool which is in production and ready for the booming horizontal drilling activity now underway both on-shore and offshore.

Backlog of the Directional Survey Equipment line of products is approximately $2 million, a new high representing about 6 percent of the company's record-high backlog of $32 million.

Humphrey Inc. is a leading-supplier of directional gyroscopes, directional survey systems and equipment to the petroleum and mining industries with sales and representation worldwide.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - Any agreement on reducing the deficit produced by White House and congressional budget negotiators must receive majority bipartisan support on Capitol Hill or it will fail, Senate leaders said.

''There are enough of us in Congress to put a package together,'' said Senate Republican leader Robert Dole, who warned that President Bush will have leverage on a final package that without bipartisan backing is ''going nowhere.''

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell said ''any agreement must be approved by a majority of both parties in both Houses of Congress.''

Mitchell, appearing Sunday on the CBS News program ''Face the Nation,'' said he told Bush at the outset of the budget talks that he would not let Republicans vote against a deficit package for political purposes and allow the Democratically controlled Congress ''shoulder the burden.''

With Bush abandoning his 1988 campaign pledge of ''no new taxes,'' it is likely that any agreement to reduce the soaring federal deficit will include new taxes. The types and combinations of potential tax hikes and spending cuts is the focal point of budget negotiations.

Dole, appearing on the ABC News programs ''This Week with David Brinkley '' said he did not think Bush would back a deficit-cutting proposal calling for new income taxes despite his statement that new tax revenues are needed.

''We are not in specifics yet,'' Dole said about the tax picture. ''But I can't see President Bush after saying tax revenue increases ... that may mean an oil import fee, may mean a gas tax or increasing sin taxes.''

The defict threatens to top $250 billion, but the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law requires that figure to be $64 billion in 1991. If that figure is not reached through negotiations by Oct. 1, the budget law will trigger across-the-board cuts that neither Congress nor the White House favors.

Although Dole outlined possible areas for tax increases, neither he nor Mitchell would say if cutting entitlements like Social Security was a certainty to meet spending cuts. Both said everything will be discussed.

''We will negotiate in good faith and reach an agreement that will certainly include spending cuts in many programs which Democrats favor,'' Mitchell said.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., and budget summit negotiator Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., appearing on CNN's ''Newsmaker Sunday,'' said the budget summit must take a hard look at entitlements, but agreed that Social Security should not be cut.

''From my standpoint, I don't believe we ought to tamper with the cost of living index,'' said Domenici, who proposed a $9 billion cut in defense spending. ''I believe we ought to look at all the other entitlements vs. ... and let them take their fair share, but no to the cost of living.''

Sasser said he believed entitlements will play some part in a negotiated plan, but saw ''no justification'' for reducing Social Security cost of living adjustments since the program this year will take in about $70 billion more than it will pay out.

''I think the stakes are very high for this economy ...,'' Sasser said. ''Either we get our fiscal house in order in the next year or two or we are all going to suffer dire consequences.''

The pilots of both planes died in the crash. NEITHER plane had filed a flight plan and authorities did NOT immediately know the destination of either craft.

City officials in Miami are trying to determine how to salve tense race relations between the area's Hispanic and Haitian communities. Venom between the two ethnic groups boiled over Friday and Saturday following allegations that Hispanic employees roughed up a Haitian man and then had him arrested Friday. (JULY 2) UPI - Luis Salazar's return to San Diego was highlighted by fond memories of his playing days for the Padres as well as game-winning home-run power for the Cubs.

Salazar, whose played for San Diego on three seperate occasions since 1980 smashed a three-run homer Sunday to cap a four-run eighth inning that lifted Chicago to an 11-10 victory over the Padres.

''I still hear the cheers (here),'' said Salazar. ''It's very nice. They've remembered me for a long time. I have good memories and I miss this place a lot.''

Trailing 10-7 in the eighth, Doug Dascenzo and Ryne Sandberg singled with one out and both runners advanced on a groundout. Dascenzo then scored on Andre Dawson's single.

Salazar followed by belting a 0-1 pitch from Craig Lefferts, 5-3, over the left-field wall to send Chicago to its season-high fifth straight win and hand the Padres their fifth straight loss.

''When you're in a situation like that, you just want to make contact, especially when you know the game is on the line,'' said the veteran infielder of his fifth home run of the season. ''I was looking for a pitch I could handle and he came in with a slider inside.''

Les Lancaster, 7-4, pitched 3 1-3 innings in relief of starter Greg Maddux to pick up the win. He allowed three runs and three hits. Bill Long worked the final 1 1-3 to notch his first career National League save.

''Who knows, maybe they'll bring me back a fourth time,'' said Salazar. ''That would be a record.''

Salazar, who had six hits in 12 plate appearances in the three-game series against the Padres, also was the hero in Saturday's contest by driving in three runs with a triple in the fourth inning. He got a fourth RBI Sunday, drawing a bases-loaded walk.

Since returning to action June 28 after being out nearly two weeks with an ankle sprain, Salazar has gone 8-16. He has batted .455 by getting 20 hits in his last 44 times at bat.

''If you if told me we're going to score 10 runs, I have to figure we're going to win,'' said Tony Gwynn, who had three hits and two RBI. ''That's two straight Sundays in a row (that the Padres have dropped 11-10 decisions).''

''You couldn't have asked any more of our offense today,'' said San Diego Manager Jack McKeon. ''It just didn't work out because of our pitching. This isn't the end of the world. We just have to keep battling.''

(JULY 2) UPI - Andy Hawkins' no-hitter wasn't greeted with the usual hugs and high-fives from teammates. Instead, he received consoling words and pats on the back.

Falling victim to two outfield errors that helped Chicago to a 4-0 victory over New York Yankees Sunday, Hawkins became the third pitcher this weekend to toss a no-hitter and set a major league record for largest margin of defeat in a complete-game no-hitter.

Following his performance, Hawkins was shaking his head.

''I don't know. I'm stunned,'' Hawkins said. ''I really am. You dream of throwing a no-hitter. The thought of a loss never crossed my mind. You expect to walk off that field and shake everybody's hand like you've seen a thousand times before.''

Hawkins was the first major leaguer to lose a complete game since Ken Johnson of the Houston Astros lost a 1-0 game to Cincinnati on April 23, 1964.

Hawkins, nearly banished to the minors in early June, pitched the major leagues' sixth no-hitter this season.

Hawkins, pitched eight innings and allowed no earned runs in hurling the ninth no-hitter in Yankee history and first since Dave Righetti blanked Boston July 4, 1983.

The White Sox did not bat in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Hawkins, 1-5, entered the game having gone eight straight appearances without a win. His last victory came on May 6 at California.

''They've been talking about how hard-luck it's been for Hawkins,'' White Sox Manager Jeff Torborg said. ''That's the ultimate right there.''

''You can't put it into words,'' Yankees Manager Stump Merrill said. ''The guy gives you that kind of performance, and you end up giving up six outs in the inning.''

That inning was the eighth in which three Yankee errors helped Chicago spoil Hawkins game.

With two outs, Sammy Sosa reached on an error by third baseman Mike Blowers and stole second. Hawkins then walked Ozzie Guillen and Lance Johnson to load the bases.

Merrill went to the mound but left Hawkins in. ''Not until he gives up a hit. No way,'' Merrill said.

Left fielder Jim Leyritz then dropped a slicing line drive by rookie Robin Ventura for a three-base error.

''I made the wrong move to the wrong side,'' said Leyritz. ''It got caught up in the wind a little bit, and I didn't think I could catch up to it. When I did, I dropped it.''

Ivan Calderon then flied to right but Jesse Barfield lost a battle with the sun and the ball fell for the inning's third error.

Barry Jones, 10-1, pitched the eighth inning for the victory that moved Chicago percentage points ahead of Oakland for first place in the American League West.

''I pitched well enough to win my last four starts, and I've got one loss to show for it. That's kind of the way it's going for us,'' Hawkins said.

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston routed Texas 15-4, Cleveland downed California 5-3, Toronto edged Oakland 4-3, Detroit clocked Kansas City 9-4, Seattle edged Milwaukee 6-5 in 12 innings and Minnesota nipped Baltimore 4-3.

In the National League it was: New York 3, Cincinnati 2; Montreal 5, Atlanta 1; Philadelphia 8, Houston 4; Pittsburgh 8, San Francisco 5; Chicago 11, San Diego 10 and St. Louis 6, Los Angeles 5.

Red Sox 15, Rangers 4

At Boston, Jody Reed, Ellis Burks and Carlos Quintana each drove in two runs during Boston's season-high eight-run second inning to pace a 17-hit attack. The 15 runs was a season-high for Boston. Tom Bolton, 1-0, retired the first 18 batters he faced en route to his first win since July 20, 1988. Kevin Brown, 9-6, took the loss.

Indians 5, Angels 3

At Cleveland, Chris James drove in three runs with two hits, including a bloop double that broke sixth-inning tie. Greg Swindell, 3-5, went 8 1-3 innings to pick up his first win since April 29. Doug Jones notched his 23rd save. Mark Langston, fell to 4-9.

Blue Jays 4, Athletics 3

At Toronto, Fred McGriff bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the eighth inning snapped a 3-3 tie and helped Toronto end a six-game losing streak. Willie Blair, 1-5, picked up the win and Todd Burns, 2-2, took the loss. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

Tigers 9, Royals 4

At Kansas City, Jack Morris scattered six hits over seven innings and John Shelby contributed two hits and two RBI to lift Detroit. Morris, 7-9, picked up the victory, allowing four runs. Paul Gibson pitched two innings for his second save. Tom Gordon, 5-5, absorbed the loss.

Mariners 6, Brewers 5, 12 innings

At Seattle, Matt Sinatro drew a two-out bases-loaded walk from Tom Edens in the bottom of the 12th inning to lift Seattle to its fifth straight win. Paul Mirabella, 2-2, took the loss. Keith Comstock, 4-2, worked 2 1-3 innings of one-hit relief for the victory.

CHEYENNE, WY (JULY 2) UPI - The Peace Corps volunteer kidnapped by communist guerillas in the Philippines spoke the local language and was friendly with all area residents, including the rebels, his friends and family said.

American and Philippines officials said guerrillas of the communist New People's Army kidnapped Timothy Swanson, 26, an agricultural extension volunteer, on June 13 from his house in the mountainous municipality of Silay on Negros island.

Reached at his home in Cheyenne, Swanson's father, Leonard Swanson, who attended his son's wedding May 29 in the Philippines and has not seen him since, said Sunday that his son was not afraid despite reports of growing tension between the government and the communist insurgency.

''He has known who some of the NPA people are and, because of his remote location, has done his best to be friendly with all of the village people '' Leonard Swanson told the USA Network.

The father said he had no idea where his son might have been taken.

''No, we do not and we don't care to speculate at all on that. I guess primarily at this time I pray for his safety. That's the paramount consideration,'' he said.

Swanson said his son joined the Peace Corps because ''he felt that he wanted to be involved in a humanitarian cause and to help some people who needed some help.''

A fellow Peace Corps volunteer who arrived in the Philippines with Swanson in February 1988 said in a telephone interview Swanson was a fluent Ilango speaker.

''That should help him. He's also a very easy person to get along with, and the communists respond to that,'' said the former volunteer, who asked not to be named. ''My hope is that everything will work out and he'll just be released.''

The Seattle volunteer returned soon after the end of his two-year stint. He said Swanson came to see him just before he left and told of his impending marriage to a well-educated, native Filipino woman. ''He seemed very happy.''

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said in Manila that American officials learned of the kidnapping Saturday while trying to contact 261 Peace Corps volunteers to enforce Washington's decision to recall them from the Philippines after receiving intelligence reports that guerrillas planned to kill or kidnap them.

Priests who had been in touch with Swanson's Filipino wife, Merle, were told four to eight guerrillas came to the American's home the night of June 13 and said to her, ''We will borrow your husband for questioning.''

Swanson never returned and five days later sent a letter asking that she prepare underwear, books and personal belongings. The rebels took the material during the night.

The Seattle volunteer noted that Swanson was stationed in a very remote area on the island of Negros, which he called ''one of the most oppressed places in the Philippines.''

''Negros is an abysmal island as far as living conditions, which breeds a lot of NPA activity. It's probably the most oppressive place in the Philippines. The rich are very rich and the poor are very poor, and the rich walk all over the poor - it is one of the strongest NPA areas in the country.''

(JULY 2) UPI - Dry heat parched the South and West early Monday as temperatures headed toward the century mark from Texas to Nevada, while powerful thunderstorms downed power lines in Montana and fog covered parts of the New England coast.

The National Weather Service said scattered clouds early Monday covered most of the Midwest and Great Lakes states, where temperatures were headed into the 80s and 90s.

A line of heavy thunderstorms swept from Montana into North Dakota overnight, dumping heavy rain and downing power lines with winds gusting between 60 and 70 mph near the city of Jordan in east-cental Montana, the NWS said.

Hot weather baked the Deep South, where the mercury in Savannah, Ga., rose to 104 Sunday. Augusta, Ga., and Columbia, S.C. reached 101. Severe thunderstorms rolled into the region early Monday as temperatures ranged from 81 in Jacksonville, Fla., to 77 in Atlanta and 76 in Charleston, S.C.

A strong upper-level high pressure system kept temperatures hot Monday in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico. Light showers were scattered across parts of central and north Texas and Arkansas.

Eleven days of 100 degrees-plus temperatures pushed San Antonio to its hottest June ever, with an average temperature of 87.5, more than 2 degrees higher than the previous record set in 1934.

Firefighters in California said a wave of cool, wet ocean air had them close to putting out a disastrous fire that wiped out hundreds of homes and killed at least one person. Authorities said they had expected to have the huge Santa Barbara fire controlled Monday after several hot spots flared up Sunday night.

A series of blazes erupted during a dry heat wave that engulfed the Southwest last week, sending temperatures soaring past 110 degrees. By Sunday night, fires were still burning in California, Arizona, Texas and Colorado.

Scorching desert heat caused a major transmission power line to fail Sunday afternoon in the Las Vegas Valley as temperatures climbed to 112 degrees. Power to 22,000 customers was interrupted. Southern Nevada residents were using more electricity than anytime in the region's history drawing 2,172 megawatts into air conditioners to escape the heat.

NWS forecasters said the 112-degree high was 4 degrees short of the 116 degree all-time record for the July 1.

Temperatures in the West early Monday ranged from 96 under partly cloudly skies in Las Vegas to a foggy 62 in Los Angeles. San Francisco fell to 57.

New England skies were cloudy early Monday following sudden rainstorms that pounded parts of the region Sunday. Light fog covered parts of Connecticut and New Hampshire, with haze reported in Vermont and Rhode Island.

Temperatures were unseasonably chilly, dipping to 55 degrees in Worcester in central Massachusetts. New England's hot spot was not much warmer - 64 degrees at the airport in Windsor Locks, Conn.

Partly cloudy skies were reported over most of Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and New Jersey early Monday, with fog heavy in some areas. Lows ranged in the 50s and 60s throughout most of the region, although temperatures dipped into the 40s in some parts of western Pennsylvania.

TOKYO (JULY 2) UPI - Mitsubishi Trust and Banking Corp. said Monday it has agreed to provide a new loan to China, the first move by a Japanese commercial bank to resume lending frozen since the bloody suppression of pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing in June 1989.

The loan of $126 million will be extended to Air China jointly with Britain's National Westminster Bank to help the Chinese international airline purchase aircraft, a spokesman for Mitsubishi said.

Mitsubishi will provide one-third, or $42 million, of the loan and the British bank the remaining $84 million, the official said.

The Mitsubishi official declined to disclose further details.

Kyodo News Service, quoting industry sources, said the Finance Ministry approved the loan to see how the United States would react to it.

Kyodo said the 12-year loan will carry an interest rate about 1 percentage point above the inter-bank rate or slightly higher than the rate prevalent before the Tiananmen massacre.

Japan joined Western nations in imposing sanctions against China to protest the military crackdown on reform-seeking demonstrators at Tiananmen Square in Beijing last June.

Japan has since frozen a $5.3 billion five-year aid package pledged to China over the 1990-95 period.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu earlier said he will discuss resumption of Japanese aid to China with Western leaders attending the economic summit in Houston this month.

The summit will be attended by leaders of the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Italy, West Germany and Japan.

Seven other people died in other fires in the West- six firefighters in Arizona, and one in another arson blaze near Palm Springs, California.

The biggest Arizona fire, covering 28-hundred acres in the Tonto National Forest... was surrounded by fire lines last night. Officials say it will be July 10th before it's put out.

(JULY 2) UPI - The 28th Soviet Communist Party Congress opened in Moscow today amid danger the party will suffer its first split after seven decades of monopoly rule.

A potentially divisive crisis is taking shape between reformers led by Soviet President Gorbachev and anti-reform conservatives.

Gorbachev, who's also head of the Communist Party... delivered the opening address. He announced that the nearly 47-hundred delegates had been elected from across the Soviet Union and urged them to stick to the agenda.

In a break with tradition, voting machines were installed in the Kremlin's Hall of Congress so delegates could vote privately on various proposals.

But in its first vote, the conservative Congress defeated a proposal to include on the agenda a debate on making the party accountable to the people.

More than 34-hundred delegates voted against accountability and slightly more than one-thousand in favor.

During a second vote, the delegates killed a proposal for a referendum this year among the country's 19-Million Communists on the party's future in the emerging multi-party system.

The Congress presents a hard-line challenge to Gorbachev's five years of rule. Dissatisfied conservatives are urging the Soviet president to give up his post as party general secretary and concentrate on running the country.

Gorbachev has hinted he may do just that.

The 37-nation International Whaling Commission opens a week-long meeting in The Netherlands today to consider lifting the ban on commerical whale killing.

The ban was placed into effect only four years ago after studies found many species on the verge of extinction.

Japan, the Soviet Union, Iceland, and Norway are expected to lead the campaign for removing the ban. They contend certain species of whales are sufficiently large enough to be hunted again.

U-S officials say they will oppose any commercial whaling for at least one more year. But they add they may reconsider the ban if on-going studies indicate limited kill quotes would NOT endanger any threatened segment of the whale population.

A marine mammal biologist with the U-S Marine Mammal Commission says American officials believe the I-W-C needs to develop better methods for handling whale populations before whaling can resume.

But the whale campaign coordinator for the international environmental group Greenpeace, Sally Shoup, says- ''to lift the moratorium now or in the future would spell disaster for whales.''

(JULY 2) UPI - Pilot Jeana Yeager faced another crisis in the air during the weekend, but she escaped UNhurt.

Yeager and co-pilot Shirlan Dickey were flying an experimental aircraft in a race yesterday over Nevada when the plane caught fire. They made an emergency landing at Jackpot, near the Idaho state line.

Officials say NEITHER of them was hurt.

The plane's brakes were burned in flight. When it landed, the craft rolled off the airstrip and into a gravel area where other fliers put out the blaze.

The two economies merged yesterday, with the strong West German mark becoming the single unit of currency for the two couuntries. The move brought cheers in East Germany, where thousands of people lined up to trade their nation's nearly worthless money for West German marks.

Forest Service officials in Santa Barbara, California, say the weather is cooling off... and that's good news for firefighters battling the Santa Barbara wildfire. Officials say the blaze is expected to be fully controlled sometime today. It's the worst of a series of fires that erupted during a dry heat wave that baked the Southwest last week, sending temperatures soaring past 110 degrees. Other fires are still burning in California, Arizona, Texas and Colorado.

(JULY 2) UPI - The drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry resumes today. Defense lawyers plan to push their argument that Barry was enticed into smoking crack cocaine by his former lover, Rasheeda Moore. During cross-examination Friday, Moore admitted that Barry apparently ''DIDN'T have drugs on his mind'' when he met her at a Washington hotel on January 18th.

Closing arguments begin today in Los Angeles... in the re-trial of the McMartin Pre-School molestation case. Former pre-school teacher Raymond Buckey is being re-tried on eight molestation counts. The charges stem from the alleged sexual abuse of three girls at the defunct Virginia McMartin Pre-School in suburban Manhattan Beach from 1978 until 1983.

Sources in Lebanon say unknown gunmen ambushed a patrol of Syrian-backed Moslem militiamen today in the southern port city of Sidon , killing four militiamen. The gunmen were in a speeding car and opened fire at the People's Liberation Army militiamen at the eastern entrance of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut. Two victims died at the scene, and the other two died en route to the hospital.

TOKYO (JULY 2) UPI - Peruvian President-elect Alberto Fujimori, the son of a Japanese immigrant, met Monday with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and Emperor Akihito and received Japan's pledge to help rebuild Peru's shattered economy.

Kaifu announced he would send a fact-finding mission to Peru soon after Fujimori's July 28 inauguration to study possible aid projects.

Fujimori had strongly implied during his presidential campaign that his connection to Japan may help win financial assistance for Peru.

''I hope my visit to Japan will serve as first step in establishing deep ties between our two countries,'' Fujimori said after his meeting with Kaifu.

Kaifu stopped short of offering a specific amount of aid and said any package would have to be discussed with other nations.

Peru was the largest recipient of Japanese aid until 1984, when Peruvian President Alan Garcia stopped repayment of part of its external debt and Japan froze some of its loans to the country.

''We cannot offer something concrete to him,'' said a Foreign Ministry official who requested anonymity. ''But we will listen with sympathy because obviously he's facing a difficult situation.''

Peru's inflation soared to 2,775 percent last year and the country is weighed down by a nearly $20 billion foreign debt.

Japanese aid to Peru totalled $28 million in 1988, the last year for which figures are available.

Fujimori, 51, the son of a farmer who left Japan to search for employment in South America, began his day with an audience with Emperor Akihito at the Imperial Palace.

While the government says it will show no favoritism to Fujimori, the media and public have not been bound by such constraints. Fujimori is the first Japanese descendant to be elected president of a Western nation and the Japanese are not hiding their feelings of pride.

Fujimori arrived to a hero's welcome Sunday and he has been invited to exchange views Tuesday with leaders of the Federation of Economic Organizations, Japan's most powerful and prestigious business club.

Fujimori's visit will reach a climax Wednesday when he returns to Kawachi, a farming town on Japan's southernmost main island of Kyushu, where his parents were born. They left in 1934.

Heavy rains and floods in the area Monday killed at least 11 people and may cast a pall over his visit. But officials of the farming community of 8,500 have planned a hero's welcome.

Fujimori will be invited to stroll down the newly-renamed Peru Street and to gaze at the new President Tower. He will be offered honorary Kawachi citizenship and $20,000 raised by residents to help save the Peruvian economy.

GENEVA (JULY 2) UPI - Global reported cases of AIDS rose by 3,047, 1.16 percent increase, in June to a total 266,098 as of July 1, the World Health Organization said Monday.

Monthly increases usually are two to three times that amount and the relatively small rise in June was because many most-affected countries failed to send in updated figures, WHO officials said.

As usual, the United States did supply a new figure of 133,889 cases, which was 1,453 higher than on June 1 and 50.3 percent of the global total.

WHO's AIDS division had only old figures from other most affected countries except for Brazil, which reported 11,070 known cases as of March 31. Other countries with the most cases were Uganda, with 12,444 on Dec. 31, Zaire with 11,732 on Jan. 31, and France with 9,718 on March 31.

WHO said 156 countries had reported one or more cases by July 1 since its began collecting the cumulative figures in 1980.

The true number of worldwide cases is estimated at two or even three times the reported total because of the difficulties in tracing and diagnosing Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome in African and other developing countries.

On a regional basis, the Americas led as of July 1 with 162,885 reported cases, followed by Africa with 64,828, Europe 35,493, Western Pacific 2,346, Eastern Mediterranean 444, and South-East Asia 102.

Most affected countries as of July 1 by WHO region, with old figures unless stipulated as new, were:

-Africa: Burundi 2,784, Congo 1,940, Ivory Coast 3,647, Ghana 1,240, Kenya 6,004, Malawi 7,160, Rwanda 2,285, Uganda 12,444, Zaire 11,732, Zambia 3,000 (new), Zimbabwe 2,357.

-Americas: Argentina 605, Brazil 11,070 (new), Canada 3,818 (new), Dominican Republic 1,262, Haiti 2,331, Mexico 4,416 (new), U.S. 133,889 (new).

GENEVA (JULY 2) UPI - A proposal calling for major U.S. and European Community concessions was presented Monday in an effort to break a GATT deadlock on agriculture that threatens the entire Uruguay Round trade negotiations.

A draft of the proposal was sent to participating countries by Art de Zeeuw, the independent and neutral chairman of the Uruguay Round agricultural negotiating group.

The trade talks began in 1986 within the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and are to conclude this December.

Major problems exist in several crucial sectors but especially in liberalizing farm trade and policies. All leading participants have indicated there cannot be an overall package agreement without a deal on agriculture.

GATT spokesmen said de Zeeuw, a retired Dutch government farm trade official, will be consulting with all the major parties next week after they have had time to study his proposal.

The spokesmen said GATT hopes for acceptance of the proposal by the end of July as a basis for negotiating a consensus agreement on agriculture by October. That agreement could be finalized by December.

''This is certainly one of the most important and vital proposals made at the Uruguay Round and it could very well be the most crucial because it is clear that there can be no meaningful conclusion without agriculture,'' said David Woods, GATT's chief spokesman .

De Zeeuw worked with the GATT secretariat in drawing up the proposal and Woods said they believe it ''meets the largest proportion of varying interests as possible.''

The paper calls on the EC to substantially reduce its system of massive subsidies which the United States and 14-member ''Cairns Group'' of other big farming countries charge give EC farmers an unfair export advantage.

The United States and Cairns Group members - with numerous permitted exceptions - would have to cut back on internal farm supports on the basis of an EC-proposed calculation formula.

GATT and other Uruguay Round offiicals said the de Zeeuw's compromise proposal would certainly be discussed at next week's western economic summit in Houston.

As well as proposing big cuts in export subsidies and internal supports, the de Zeeuw plan would reduce quotas and various other forms of import restrictions such as unnecessarily severe sanitary regulations.

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA (JULY 2) UPI - The prime ministers of Australia and New Zealand announced Monday an agreement designed to allow totally free trade between the two countries.

The Closer Economic Relations Agreement, reached five years ahead of schedule, was announced in a joint statement by Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke and New Zealand Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer.

''This agreement plays a major role in ensuring that our two economies are well-placed to compete in the most dynamic economic region in the world,'' the statement said. ''Both countries are benefitting.''

The balance of trade between the two countries is about equal, an Australian treasury spokesman said.

The statement said that since the two countries signed a previous trade agreement in 1983, total bilateral trade has grown to $3.6 billion from $1.6 billion, representing an average annual growth rate of about 15 percent.

''It is faster than the growth in either country's trade with the rest of the world,'' the statement said.

The prime ministers and their departmental ministers met late Monday to continue discussions on Australia's investment laws, trans-Tasman shipping and telecommunications.

(JULY 2) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange ended higher Monday after overcoming a morning slump as the strong yen triggered selective buying in thin trading.

The 225-issue Nikkei average, the market's main barometer, rose 219.99 points to close at 32,160.23. The Nikkei lost 165.95 points Friday.

The broader Tokyo Stock Price Index gained a modest 5.34 points to close at 2,348.70 points. TOPIX lost 7.04 points Friday.

Volume was only 380 million shares, down from 551.66 million traded Friday.

The Nikkei lost 96.62 yen in early trading as investors tried to evaluate how interest rates would react following the monetary reunification in Germany Sunday.

Buying interest remained sketchy in light afternoon trading, brokers said. Interest centered on stocks related to domestic demand because they are the most likely to benefit from a weaker yen, they added.

''The market's sentiment turned away from large-capital issues and toward smaller companies with low price-earnings ratios and good earnings potentials,'' said Judith Rawnsley, a stock analyst with Baring Securities.

Construction and mid-size steel issues benefited from a report of strong housing starts, she said.

''People are already digesting German reunificiation,'' Rawnsley said, adding it was just another political concern for traders already worried about the situation in the Soviet Union and the Middle East. ''The market is likely to remain in a narrow range until external factors clear up.''

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices posted sharp gains in active trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, breaking the 3,300-point mark and returning to levels set before the 1989 Tiananmen massacre.

The Hang Seng Index surged 41.23 to close at 3,319.47, its highest level in more than a year, brokers said. The rise followed a loss of 4.96 points Friday.

Volume was relatively strong at 1.99 billion units, up from Friday's turnover of 1.72 billion.

The market gained more than 12 points in the first 30 minutes of trading on heavy action by bargain hunters. Bargain hunting continued to pick up steam with the morning session closing up 26.99 points, brokers said.

The rally spilled over into the afternoon session, pushing prices over the 3,300 level, and setting a new 1990 high.

''The market started off slow, but firm. It picked up as the day went by '' said Howard Gorges, an analyst with South China Securities. ''The market was dominated by a mixture of blue chips and secondary issues.''

''I think by the end of the week the market will go higher,'' he added.

Utilities gained 37.43 points, Financials increased 34.66, Industrials added 43.98.

Properties rose 53.37 points.

Stock prices in Hong Kong plunged in the wake of China's military-led crackdown on pro-democracy protesters in Beijing's Tiananmen Square June 4 1989.

Stock prices closed lower on the Singapore Stock Exchange in light trading with many marketplayers away from the action on the eve of a public holiday.

The Straits Times Industrial Index lost 2.61 points to close at 1,524.35. The All Singapore Index fell 1.92 points to 432.28.

Turnover was a low 40.09 million units.

Analysts said activity was light in view of the Hari Raya Haji national holiday Tuesday. Markets will be closed Tuesday and trading will resume Wednesday.

Most of the interest centered around other Asian markets.

''The strength of neighboring markets in Thailand, Indonesia and even the Philippines bears testimony to the bullish outlook for these countries,'' one analyst said, adding that the Singapore market was taking a backseat.

Bank stocks remained at the center of activity following the government's announcement last week that foreign ownership in local banks would be raised to 40 percent from 20 percent.

Losers included Development Bank of Singapore Foreign, Development Bank of Singapore, Great Eastern Life, Ming Court, Shangri-la and Wearne Bros.

Gainers were Asia Pacific Brew, Thai PF (US), Prima, Singapore Airlines Foreign, Asean Fund (US), Amal Steel Mil and Far East Shipping.

Share prices ended the session lower on the Sydney Sharemarket despite a strong interest in banking issues.

The All Ordinaries index closed down 4.1 points to 1,496.6.

Volume was a low 64 million shares.

Brokers said the liquidation of the Victorian Pyramid Building Society Group triggered negative feelings among traders.

Also contributing to depressing share prices was the strong Australian dollar which hit a five-months high on international monetary markets.

The Australian dollar ended the day at 79.40 cents vs. the U.S. dollar.

In the top resource issues, BHP rose 2 cents to $9.36, while CRA fell 5 cents to $12.20.

Strong gold prices helped WMC rise 4 cents to $4.52. GMK rose 2 cents to 74 cents, Highlands Gold was up 2 cents to 84 cents, but Placer Pacific fell 7 cents to $2.58 and Newmont lost 1 cent to 90 cents.

In otherwise quiet trading, News Corp. rose 15 cents to $11.45, and in the banking sector, Westpac rose 1 cent to $4.70, NAB was up 4 cents to $6.40 and ANZ fell 5 cents to $4.92.

OKLAHOMA CITY (JULY 2) UPI - The parents wore blue and yellow and wept. The baby wore ruffled pink and slept.

Eleven days after Whitney Ryann Morse was kidnapped from a hospital nursery, she returned to Oklahoma City Sunday with her parents, Willie and Teresa Morse.

Whitney was only 3 days old when she was taken from Deaconess Hospital on June 20 by a young woman dressed as a hospital worker who asked for the child by name and said she was taking her to her mother.

The baby, the Morses' first born, was found Saturday in Bulter, Mo., and Heather Lynette Brewster, 18, was held in the Clay County jail in Missouri as a suspect in the abduction.

''There's no pain anymore,'' Teresa Morse said. ''It's all over now. It will take me a while to trust people again but we'll make it.''

The father said neither he nor his wife holds a grudge against the abductor.

''We're just glad it's over,'' he said. ''This has been so hard on us. We don't hold a grudge but she needs help.''

When the parents flew in to Wiley Post Airport in Oklahoma City, they were still wearing yellow shirts featuring their baby's photographs and name, which had been distributed in a wide area since the child's disappearance.

Friends and relatives wore pink ribbons, to replace thousands of yellow ribbons that had been worn on clothing and otherwise displayed since the child's disappearance.

The baby appeared unimpressed with the uproar. She slept through it all.

The FBI said Whitney was found Saturday in Butler, about 60 miles south of Kansas City, at a house where Brewster, an unemployed former fast-food worker, lived with relatives.

An FBI agent said Brewster was taken into custody and questioned most of the day Saturday after a tipster identified the missing infant from a photograph broadcast on Kansas City television.

FBI Agent Max Geiman in Kansas City said the tip leading to Brewster's arrest was one of many that came in after authorities distributed the child's photograph and an artist's drawing of her abductor, which ran on Kansas City television stations Friday night.

Whitney was identified by her footprints.

Geiman said he could not discuss a motive for the kidnapping but said the Brewster did not know the girl's parents. Other FBI sources said Brewster recently suffered a miscarriage and convinced her fiance the stolen baby was theirs.

TOKYO (JULY 2) UPI - Supported by brisk personal spending amid the booming economy, Japan's sales of new vehicles for the first half of this year hit a record high of 3,057,141 units, up 13.4 percent over a year ago, the Japan Automobile Dealers' Association reported Monday. The association said the previous record of 2,696,384 was set in the January-June period of 1989.

"The record shows that the domestic car market was not affected by the stock market slump, the yen's weakness and higher interest rates since the beginning of this year," said an association spokesman.

The spokesman predicted sales for this year will top the 5.93 million units projected by the Japan Automobile Manufacturers' Association earlier this year. The association said passenger car sales accounted for 2,217,224 units, up 15.5 percent over a year ago.

Notable was brisk sales of large-sized cars with over 2.0-liter engine capacity, which totaled 200,103 units, up 93.9 percent, the association indicated.

It said sales of subcompact cars surged 11.1 percent to 2,017,121 units. Sales of trucks gained 8.2 percent to 826,546 units while those of buses increased 2.0 percent to 13,371 units, the group said.

In June, the association said sales of new cars and commercial vehicles grew 5.6 percent over a year ago to 536,731 units, marking the 16th straight year-on-year increase.

BACOLOD, PHILIPPINES (JULY 2) UPI - National Police troops Monday began investigating the kidnapping of a Peace Corps volunteer three weeks ago by communist guerrillas in the central island of Negros, authorities said.

Armed Forces chief Gen. Renato de Villa said in Manila he had formed a civilian-military team headed by Negros Gov. Daniel Lacson to look for peaceful ways to recover Timothy Swanson, 26, of Cheyenne, Wyo., who was kidnapped June 13.

He said civilians would be allowed to search for Swanson before authorities would resort to military action.

''There are no military operations yet,'' Lacson told a news conference.

He said authorities were awaiting communication from the kidnappers through Swanson's Philippine wife, Merle.

A team of 15 National Police troops Monday visited the mountain village of Patag in Silay city, where Swanson was abducted, to gather information, said Silay Mayor Ramon Jison by telephone. He said they returned in the afternoon but reported no new details.

Mrs. Swanson said her husband was kidnapped by three guerrillas of the communist New Peoples Army who told her they were ''borrowing'' him for a talk in the forest for two days.

Swanson never returned but five days after he returned his wife said he sent a note asking for his reading glasses, his books and clothing. No ransom note has been received but Mrs. Swanson said she was instructed by her husband not to tell anyone about the kidnapping for fear he might be harmed.

U.S. officials said they discovered the kidnapping Saturday while they were enforcing Washington's order Wednesday to withdraw Peace Corps workers from the Philippines after reports the NPA planned to kill or kidnap volunteers.

All the 261 volunteers have been accounted for except for Swanson, U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said. He said most of them had left and the remaining volunteers were to depart ''within the next day.''

Swanson, who came to the Philippines two years ago, was the first American to be kidnapped by NPA guerrillas.

Guerrillas on May 29 also abducted Japanese rural technician Fumio Mizuno in Murcia town, also in Negros, 300 miles south of Manila. Mizuno has not been released.

The 19,000-strong NPA has been battling the Manila government for 21 years and has claimed responsibility for the slayings in May of two U.S. airmen outside the U.S. Clark Air Base near Manila. Their deaths brought to 10 the number of U.S. nationals slain in the Philippines over the past three years by guerrillas seeking the dismantling of U.S. bases.

The guerrillas have warned more Americans will be attacked unless U.S. troops leave.

President Corazon Aquino on Monday expressed concern about the kidnapping, saying in a statement her government was ''fully coordinating with representatives of the U.S. Embassy and the Peace Corps in our efforts to resolve this.''

Schrager said the embassy was sharing information with the Philippine government but was leaving the negotiations for Swanson's release to Philippine authorities.

Former Bacolod Bishop Antonio Fortich went on radio Monday to appeal to the kidnappers, saying, ''We are appealing, for the sake of humanity, release Mr. Swanson. He has done nothing wrong and he's very friendly with the people.''

Swanson speaks the local Ilongo dialect and knew some of the guerrillas operating in the village in Negros, 300 miles south of Manila.

Aquino's press secretary, Tomas Gomez, expressed doubt about the reported abduction, saying Swanson went voluntarily with the guerrillas.

''Is there such a thing as kidnapping with consent?'' Gomez said.

He said it was possible Swanson joined the NPA but added this was speculation. ''We'd like to get to the bottom of this,'' Gomez said.

Schrager however said he ''firmly'' believed reports Swanson was kidnapped.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos told reporters Monday the sequence of events involving Peace Corps volunteers was "mystifying" and he felt U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt was not being totally open with Philippine officials.

(JULY 2) UPI - Soviet leader Gorbachev opened the 28th Communist Congress in Moscow today by conceding that he's made some mistakes on his road to reform. But in a 90-minute address, he tried to put off his conservative critics by saying- QUOTE- ''in big-time politics, one must NOT indulge in trivial passions.'' Gorbachev says he took on major problems when he became Communist Party general secretary five years ago.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration Monday warned pregnant women not to use aspirin during the last three months of pregnancy except on the advice of their doctors.

The FDA said it will require all aspirin and aspirin-containing products to bear a warning on their labels alerting pregnant women to the dangers of taking the drug during their final trimester. Possible problems of taking aspirin during the last three months of pregnancy include effects on fetal circulation and uterine contraction.

The new warning must immediately follow the caution against nursing mothers using aspirin except at the instruction of a physician.

FDA said manufacturers have 12 months to implement the label changes, recommended by an advisory panel of non-government medical experts. The regulation will be published Thursday in the Federal Register.

A similar warning is already required on non-prescription products containing ibuprofen, another pain-relieving ingredient. Aspirin and ibuprofen have similar pharmacologic effects.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) UPI - The U.S. manufacturing economy showed strength in June for the third consecutive month, indicating renewed domestic economic expansion, the National Association of Purchasing Management reported Monday.

The Purchasing Managers' Index rose to 51.1 percent in June, up from 50.7 percent in May. A reading below 50 generally indicates the manufacturing segment of the economy is experiencing a decline in growth. A reading above 50 usually indicates that the manufacturing portion of the economy is expanding.

"The PMI has averaged 49.1 percent for the first half of 1990," said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the group of purchasing executives and director of materials management at Pitney Bowes Inc.

"If the June level of PMI remains unchanged for the balance of the year, then past experience indicates this would be consistent with real Gross National Product of about 1.9 percent for 1990," he added.

"This marks the third consecutive month in which this leading economic indicator has registered over 50 percent, after declining for 11 consecutive months," he added.

Purchasers' optimism was fueled by a stronger than expected demand, causing Supplier Deliveries to slow for the first time in more than a year. This, combined with a growing number of shortages, enabled prices to increase slightly for the second time in three months, the monthly report said.

New Orders rose in June for the fifth consecutive month, and at virtually the same rate of growth as in May. The New Orders Index inched upward to 54.9 percent, from 54.8 percent last month, indicating moderate growth for the months ahead.

New Export Orders rose in June for the 30th consecutive month, and at a higher rate than in May, spelling out good news for the United States' future trade balance.

The New Export Orders Index rose to 56.5 percent, up from 54 percent in May. About 77 percent of PMI members polled reported an increase in new export orders, the highest percentage of exporting activity since the indicator was first compiled in January 1988.

Imports declined in June for the second consecutive month, bringing more good news for the trade balance. The Imports Index remained on the downtrend at 48 percent, although a bit higher compared to its May level of 47.5 percent.

Production was on the upward trend for the fifth consecutive month, at 53.9 percent, compared with a reading of 56.3 percent in May. Supplier deliveries were slow in June, with the index reading 51.2 percent, the highest since April 1989's 52.6 percent. The renewed economic activity went with a slight increase in prices, with the index rising to 50.9 percent, up from 48.5 percent last month.

Employment dropped in June for the 16th consecutive month, but at a lesser rate than in May. The Employment Index rose to 45.9 percent, up from 45.5 percent last month.

The average lead time for capital expenditures in June was 149 days, the highest since September 1989. The average lead time for maintenance, repair and operating supplies in June was 27 days, down from 28 days in May.

TOKYO (JULY 2) UPI - A huge storm dumped at least 16 inches of rain on southern Japan Monday, causing widespread flooding and killing 14 people and leaving one missing, police said.

Twenty-four people were injured and authorities feared the toll would rise as the heavy rains continued.

The rains fell from a storm extending from southern Japan to north of Hong Kong, some 1,250 miles away.

In Japan, homes were crushed and cars carried away when rivers spilled over their banks.

Among the victims was a 46-year-old woman who was swept away in a swollen river, television reports from Kumamoto state on Kyushu said. At least two children were also thought to have drowned in flood waters that reached the tops of parked cars in some areas.

Other people died in landslides as walls of water coursed down hills and through valleys. Two houses were entirely washed away and 22 were others destroyed, police said.

About 5,000 homes were flooded, police said, as about 16 inches of rain fell in 24 hours. Forecasters said up to 4 inches more could fall in some areas of Kyushu, Japan's southernmost main island, and Honshu, the largest and most populous island, Monday night and early Tuesday.

LUSAKA, ZAMBIA (JULY 2) UPI - President Kenneth Kaunda sacked his army commander and appointed a new defense minister after an abortive coup attempt by an army lieutenant and days of bloody anti-government rioting, officials said Monday.

Kaunda late Sunday replaced Lt. Gen. Gary Kalenge with his deputy, Maj. Gen. Francis Sivamba, and appointed former Chief of the Air Force Hananiah Lungu to the defense post, which had been vacant since the president dismissed Frederick Hapunda last month.

Military sources said Kaunda may be right in suspecting the army is divided in its loyalty to him. ''The air force is 100 percent with K.K. but the army is another question,'' one senior officer said.

The move came after three days of riots by citizens demonstrating against a doubling in the price of the staple cornmeal and one-party rule. The violence, which began June 25 with a clash between students and riot police, left as many as 30 people dead, 200 injured and 550 detained.

Authorities moved to normalize Lusaka Sunday by opening banks and ordering stores to conduct business after the demonstrations and looting almost closed the capital down. Monday the city bore few traces of the turmoil.

Kaunda, dealing with the worst crisis of his 26-year rule, said Saturday in an emotional speech that the attempted coup by an army lieutenant who earlier broadcast hoax takeover announcements from the radio station, would not derail economic austerity policies designed to stabilize the tottering economy.

Troops Saturday arrested the renegade officer and rallied to the government, sealing off key buildings and forcing civilians from the center of the capital.

The lieutenant played out the coup bid despits a promise Friday by the besieged Kaunda to hold a national referendum Oct. 17 on whether to introduce a multi-party democracy in place of the one-party system decreed in 1972. The vote could end the president's rule, uninterrupted since independence from Brihain in 1964.

Friday, police evicted more than 1,000 University of Zambia students and closed the campus after the students staged an anti-government action.

Police cracked down on the latest protests after Kaunda insisted he would not abandon his plans, approved by the International Monetary Fund, to move the country onto an enterprising footing and end years of mismanagement and socialist experimentation.

Many of Zambia's 10 million citizens are starving as the copper-based economy struggles to become a free-market agriculture-based system.

CHICAGO (JULY 2) UPI - Jurors in the racketeering and fraud trial of three Chicago Mercantile Exchange Swiss franc traders resumed deliberations Monday after more than a week of pondering evidence without a sign of a verdict.

The panel of three men and nine women, which began deliberations June 22, returned from its second weekend off Monday morning.

Jurors spent nearly seven weeks listening to evidence in the case, in which traders Robert Mosky, Danny Scheck and David Zatz are accused of scheming to defraud customers through illegal, prearranged trades.

Mosky. 34, of Chicago, is charged with racketeering conspiracy, and multiple counts of fraud and violating commodities laws. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to 395 years in prison and fined nearly $12 million.

Scheck, 28, of Skokie, and Zatz, 43, of Chicago, both are charged with multiple counts of fraud and violating commodities laws. If convicted, Scheck could face up to 90 years in jail, and fines of up to $3 million. Zatz could face up to 70 years in prison, and fines of up to $2.1 million.

The jury foreman reported to U.S. District Judge Ann Williams late last Tuesday that some jurors were not deliberating in good faith. Williams called the 12 jurors into court Wednesday morning and instructed them to keep open minds in reviewing and discussing the evidence.

The evidence includes some 130 audio tapes secretly recorded by an FBI undercover agent who posed as a trader. The government says the agent's tape recorder caught the defendants engaging in and discussing illegal trades.

The defense says the tapes merely caught traders confirming previous - legally executed - trades, as required by exchange rules.

But many of the tapes are of poor quality - with voices drowned out by the clamor of trading in thre pits. And much of what is discernable is ambiguous - and in traders' jargon.

Prosecutors contend Mosky was part of a broker group that pressured so-called ''locals'' - traders like Scheck and Zatz who trade mostly for their own accounts - to absorb losses resulting from mistakes brokers made trading on behalf of customers. The brokers then repaid cooperating locals by steering them profitable prearranged trades at off-market prices - at the expense of customers.

Defense lawyers, however, denied there were any prearranged trades. They argued that FBI agent Randall Jannett, who spent nearly a year posing as a trader in the Swiss franc pit, had inadequate training in commodities trading and could not accurately discern what was happening around him.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Fleissner, in closing arguments, labeled that strategy the ''Wizard of Oz defense.'' He said the defense tried to portray commodities trading as something arcane, mystical and beyond the understanding of laymen.

He told jurors the government's investigation ''pulled back the curtain'' - just as the curtain was pulled back in the Wizard of Oz to reveal that the mystical Oz was a facade.

''Remember what you saw behind the curtain,'' he told the panel.

Mosky, Scheck and Zatz were the first defendants to face trial on charges resulting from a two-year FBI undercover fraud investigation at the CME and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Forty-eight people were indicted as a result of the probes. Sixteen have pleaded guilty. The trials of the remaining 29 - 16 traders from the CME Japanese yen pit and 13 from the CBOT soybean pit - are scheduled to begin in September.

KENNEBUNKPORT, MAINE (JULY 2) UPI - President Bush predicted consensus among the allies on the future role of NATO Monday and conferred with top advisers at his summer compound to prepare for this week's allied summit in London.

Before meeting with the high-level group, including Vice President Dan Quayle, Secretary of State James Baker, and Joint Chiefs of Staff Colin Powell, Bush also said that though some will view the moves in the future as ''dramatic policy changes,'' he did not.

''There will be some changes but I don't happen to believe that it's bombshell dimension,'' Bush said.

He made his comments on the Walker's Point compound where he has been spending a long Fourth of July vacation before heading Wednesday night to the NATO summit meeting in London.

He predicted confidently that ''we're in good shape'' for the meeting of the 16 allies, convened in part to contemplate the future of NATO with the collapse of the Communist bloc. ''I think our side is generally agreed on the big questions,'' he said.

The president declined comment on a number of proposed shifts in nuclear policy but said he would be discussing further a reported plan to declare that nuclear weapons are to be used in conflict only as a last resort.

''But I'm encouraged because I think we have a good position here,'' Bush said. ''What I expect is a, hopefully ... a document that is unanimously agreed to that will set the course for the future.

''As conditions have changed, NATO will change,'' he added. ''We've had broad general agreement on a lot of issues but there's still some work to be done.''

Bush said Baker was departing Tuesday morning for Brussels, where he would attend a G-24 meeting on aid for Poland and Hungary and attempt to ''iron out some of the differences before we get there.''

The U.S. proposals, capped by the shift in longstanding defense doctrine to make nuclear arms ''weapons of last resort'' in Western Europe and a plan to withdraw nuclear-tipped artillery, were outlined for the allies for consideration at the summit.

Details of the plan, crafted to reassure Moscow about NATO's intentions as East and West Germany rush toward reunification, were reported in The Washington Post and New York Times.

The Post said Bush had proposed that NATO move away from the ''flexible response'' strategy, which threatened a quick Western nuclear attack to Soviet invasion, in effect committing to no early first use of nuclear weapons.

White House officials traveling with the president declined to discuss specifics of any U.S. stances. Spokeswoman Alixe Glen said the allies also were expected to bring their own proposals to the summit gathering.

''The meeting today is to basically put our ideas into final form and review the input that we've received from the allies so far,'' Glen said. ''The details and the specifics will be discussed at greater length on Thursday and Friday.''

Asked about the shift, Bush said he did not want to overdramatize the changes that could emerge from the summit and that he was ''anxious'' to discuss it with Powell and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who also attended the meeting.

"Some will look at it as major change of position,'' he said, "Others won't."

NATO is expected to start a major review of its conventional and nuclear strategy at the summit meeting. Bush also said, ''We've got a wide array of other issues we're talking about there - economic and political dimension of NATO.''

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady also attended the preparatory session Monday. He and Quayle were to remain overnight to attend another review session on Tuesday for the economic summit.

After the London summit, Bush heads directly to Houston for a gathering of the G-7 democracies.

Bush also took time out Monday afternoon for his first-ever round of golf with Quayle, who is an accomplished golfer.

(JULY 2) UPI - A jury in New York today returned an innocent verdict in the case of former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos and Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi. They were acquitted on all counts in their racketeering and fraud trial. Mrs. Marcos had tears running down her cheeks after she heard the verdict.

Ethnic Albanian lawmakers in Kosovo Province declared independence from the Yugoslavian republic of Serbia today. The ethnic Albanians declared that they are establishing a separate Kosovo republic within Yugoslavia. The communist Serbian government promised to take unspecified measures against the rebels.

Newspaper reports from Colombia say that a police officer was wounded last night when gunmen attacked the state governor's home in the city of Medellin. It was NOT clear whether the governor was home during the attack. Reports said ony that one unidentified guard was hurt.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is attempting to keep his party intact as the 28th Communist Party Congress began today. In opening remarks, Gorbachev admitted that the Communist party leadership has made mistakes. But Gorbachev said he took on enormous problems when he became the party's general secretary more than five years ago.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (JULY 2) UPI - Ethnic Albanian lawmakers in Kosovo province declared independence from Serbia Monday in a defiance of the Yugoslavian republic's communist government, state radio said.

The Serbian government promised to take unspecified ''corresponding measures'' against the ethnic Albanians, who declared they were establishing a separate Kosovo republic within Yugoslavia.

The declaration was issued by 114 members of the Kosovo Assembly and greeted with cheers by ethnic Albanians in the streets of the provincial capital of Pristina, 200 miles south of Belgrade, the radio said.

Kosovo is a province in Serbia, one of Yugoslavia's six republics. Ethnic Albanians comprise a majority in Kosovo but Serbians have strong historical ties to the province and do not want it to break away.

The defiant move by the Albanians came on the second and final day of a referendum organized by Serbia's communist regime for approval of its political program, which calls for the adoption of a new constitution eliminating virtually all autonomy for Kosovo.

The communists hope that enactment of such a constitution will help stem their party's loss of popularity and ensure it victory in promised multi-party assembly elections by harnessing the political power of intense anti-Albanian sentiments among majority Serbs.

The communists have been exploiting mounting fears among Serbs that demands for greater autonomy by ethnic Albanians are a pretext for merging Kosovo with the neighboring isolationist Marxist nation of Albania. Some ethnic Albanians are advocating independence of Kosovo from Yugoslavia.

Kosovo is cherished by Yugoslavia's 8.5 million Serbs as the ''cradle'' of their centuries-old heritage and religion, but it has an ethnic Albanian majority of 1.7 million. There are about 200,000 Serbs living in the province.

More than 30 people were killed and hundreds injured early this year in anti-Serbian unrest by ethnic Albanians, who claim they suffer discrimination by the republic's government.

State radio said the ethnic Albanian lawmakers tried at about 10 a.m. to enter the Kosovo Assembly, which was closed and barred by police. The group held a meeting outside at which they issued a ''constitutional declaration'' making Kosovo an ''independent unit within Yugoslavia and equal to other republics,'' the radio said.

The document said that the ethnic Albanian minority of Yugoslavia ''should be considered a people and not a national minority.'' Multi-ethnic Yugoslavia is comprised of six republics and a population of 23 million people.

The Kosovo lawmakers said the declaration would be presented for ratification to the ethnic Albanian-dominated Kosovo Assembly, which was scheduled to meet Thursday.

The Serbian government issued a statement saying the declaration ''has no legal basis ... and it is another form of political violence in Kosovo by ethnic Albanian nationalists and separatists, against whom corresponding measures of the legal state will be undertaken.''

Slobodan Vucetic, one of Serbia's vice presidents, announced over the radio that ''the decision is unconstitutional, invalid and therefore, non-existant.''

He indicated the republic's government could implement measures adopted last month by the Serbian Assembly giving it the power to assume all public administration in Kosovo. Serbia has already used that power to take over all security functions in the province.

The radio said that 4.7 million out of 6.6 million qualified voters in Serbia had cast ballots by Monday afternoon in the referendum.

It gave no indication of the results, although most observers said it is virtually certain they will favor the communists because of the passions aroused among Serbs by the Kosovo crisis. An announcement of the results were expected Thursday.

MIAMI (JULY 2) UPI - Federal agents seized more than $22 million in illegal drug profits, a money mountain weighing 1 1/2-tons, during a 13-month money laundering investigation that targeted cash courriers, the U.S. Customs commissioner said Monday.

The seizure is the largest in the Customs Service's history, said U.S. Commissioner Carol Hallett.

The investigation, called Operation Greenbacks, targeted cocaine trafficking organizations in New York and Miami. Much of the seized money was destined for illegal transfer out of the United States, Hallett said.

''This record seizure should warn the drug smuggler that as each day passes we're getting closer and closer to them and their drug money,'' Hallett said. ''At the same time it should serve as a vivid example of what just one smuggling organization has at its disposal.''

The biggest single seizure came last Thursday when Guillermo Felix Hernando-Castillo, 38, was stopped while driving in Miami with $421,000 in cash in his car, Hallett said.

Hernando-Castillo was jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond, and must prove that the bond money does not come from illegal sources before he can be released.

Federal, state and local agents broke the case when they identified a network of drug-money couriers who typically left cash-laden cars in prearranged locations for pickup and unloading by accomplices. The accomplices would later return the vechicles for further deliveries, Hallett said.

Customs officials said other arrests were pending.

Hallett said the seizures totaled $22,071,975, all of it in small bills. Together it weighed more than 1 1/2 tons. She said the money would be used by law enforcement agencies to fight drug smuggling.

Joining the Customs Service in the investigation were the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. Border Patrol, the Coral Gables Police Department and the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

NORFOLK, VA (JULY 2) UPI - Eight Navy skimmers, aided by boom-wielding Coast Guard ships, worked Monday to collect 30,000 gallons of heavy fuel oil that spilled after two container ships collided during a storm.

The 635-foot, German-registered Columbus America collided at about 6:45 p.m. Sunday with the 800-foot, Singapore-registered Neptune Jade. Columbus America, which was leaving Norfolk, was apparently in the wrong area of the channel, said Capt. Eugene Johnson, commanding officer of the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Norfolk.

Weather conditions at the time of the collision included rain squalls and fog that left very limited visibility, Johnson said.

The Navy and Coast Guard early Monday were investigating the accident and had begun a massive cleanup effort covering some 12 miles of waterways. The cleanup was expected to take several days, Johnson said.

No one was injured in the collision, which occurred about 3 miles north of Norfolk and two miles east of the Hampton Roads Bay-Bridge Tunnel.

The Columbus America's fuel tank was ruptured below the water line and it spilled much of its No. 4 fuel oil while traveling to Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Corp. for damage assessment and repairs. An oil containment boom was later placed around the ship.

It was not immediately clear why the leaking vessel was allowed to travel while leaking fuel. The Columbus America was carrying an estimated 455 metric tons of fuel when the accident occurred, Johnson said.

In an effort to contain the spill, the Coast Guard Monday closed off several waterways in Hampton Roads. The southern and eastern branches of the Elizabeth River were closed to shipping.

Johnson said the two ships were carrying general bulk cargo, but also aboard were containers holding hazardous materials, including petroleum distillates, paint and potassium hydroxide solution.

The Columbus America lost six containers, all of which were recovered, either in the water or on the other vessel, the Coast Guard said.

Eight Navy skimmers were secured to assist in the cleanup and Coast Guard officials throughout the area were working to contain the spill.

''We're in a good position to start attacking the oil as we can,'' said Johnson. ''The important thing is it's all under control - there's no danger now.''

PHILADELPHIA (JULY 2) UPI - Temple University Monday officially banned smoking at all campus facilities.

The institution had been phasing in the smoking ban for a year and removed the last remaining indoor signs designating smoking areas on Monday.

''I know how hard it is to break some habits and therefore how difficult it will be for some persons to comply with our non-smoking policy,'' said Temple President Peter Liacouras, who, along with some faculty members, ceremoniously dumped ash trays and removed one of the signs.

The total smoking ban follows two years of study and recommendations by campus task forces and meetings with smokers. The university also sponsored smoke-cessation programs and gradually reduced the areas where smokers could light up.

Temple spokesman George Ingram said the smoke-free policy was generally supported by the school's 35,000 students and 1,800 faculty members.

''I think it (reaction) was pretty positive overall,'' Ingram said. ''The awareness is out there in the broad community that this is an important step. ... The goal is a truly smoke-free environment.

Ingram, who smoked three packs a day until he quit ''a long time ago,'' said campus security will be on the lookout for students, faculty or visitors who light up and will remind them of the policy.

Pennsylvania State University outlawed smoking in campus buildings and vehicles on April 1, 1989.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JULY 2) UPI - President Corazon Aquino said Monday she would not allow Imelda Marcos to return to the Philippines even if the former first lady is acquitted of racketeering charges in New York.

''Our stand has been against such a return on grounds of national interest and security, which has been sustained by the Supreme Court,'' Aquino said in a statement.

Jurors were deliberating Marcos's fate Monday after a three-month trial on charges she and her husband, the late deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, stole more than $200 million and committed fraud while investing the money in New York real estate.

Before the former president died last Sept. 28, the Philippine Supreme Court rejected a petition for his return and that of his family by an 8-7 vote. An appeal was thrown out.

''The United States government has assured us that (Imelda Marcos) will not be allowed to return to our country without the approval of the president of the Philippines,'' Aquino added.

(JULY 2) UPI - The president of Zambia today got rid of his army commander and appointed a new defense minister in reaction to a failed coup attempt and days of violent rioting. The coup attempt came from an army lieutenant. Military sources say President Kenneth Kaunda may be right in suspecting army disloyalty.

The deutsche mark did well today in its first day on the market since it became the currency for both East and West Germany. One monetary expert says ''the baby is born and has been joyfully greeted.'' Store managers in East and West Berlin report a steady stream of East German shoppers but say they are spending their new marks carefully.

A published report today quotes the wife of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry as saying she was NOT surprised by her husband's arrest. Barry's wife Effie also reportedly said that she had warned her husband that if he ever got caught- in her words- he ''would be set up with a woman.''

TUNIS, TUNISIA (JULY 2) UPI - Tunisian police said Monday they had dismantled a gang smuggling foreign currency, gold and jewelry between the Tunisian island of Djerba, southern France and Italy.

Police were able to break up the underworld organization following the arrest at Tunis-Carthage Airport of a Tunisian trying to smuggle 71 pounds of jewels into the North African nation.

A subsequent investigation led to the seizure of gold, jewels and precious stones worth $1.7 million, police said.

In all, 29 Tunisians were arrested in connection with the smuggling ring. Most of the suspects are jewelers, and five are customs officers. Interpol is pursuing 10 other people who have fled the country.

Additional detailers were not immediately available.

WARSAW, Poland (JULY 2) UPI - The World Bank opened its first office in Eastern Europe Monday and announced a $250 million loan to Poland to increase production of natural gas and promote energy conservation.

World Bank Vice President Willi Wappenhans said the office will enable the bank to provide Poland with technical assistance and help in attracting outside investment.

He said the bank is exploring whether to missions in other East European countries, but there were no specific plans.

The bank's programs for Poland over the next three years will total some $2.5 billion.

Wappenhans praised the Solidarity-led government's economic program aimed at curbing inflation and restructuring the inefficient economy.

''One can't be anything but impressed,'' said Wappenhans, but he noted that ''structural changes'' were still necessary.

The $250 million energy development loan is designed to increase natural gas production through development and rehabilitation of natural gas fields.

Poland's demand for gas and oil is expected to increase with the development of a market economy. The two sources of energy are expected to cut the use of coal, a chief cause of air pollution.

ALBANY, NY (JULY 2) UPI - A bride spent her honeymoon weekend in jail for allegedly punching a wedding guest and taking her pocketbook, police said Monday.

Sharon Mallory, 23, and her sister, Sonya Tarver, also 23, were both arrested Friday night at Mallory's wedding reception in her home, police said.

The two are charged with punching wedding guest Nettie Flowers, 30, and taking her pocketbook, which contained $2, personal papers and keys, police spokesman Lt. Robert Wolfgang said.

Flowers was treated at Albany Medical Center for a cut over her left eye.

Mallory and Tarver said at their arraignment the altercation began when they alleged Flowers took items belonging to other wedding guests.

The two sisters were sent to Albany County Jail without bail pending a Thursday court appearance.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) UPI - A jury Monday acquitted former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos and Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi on all counts in their racketeering and fraud trial.

As the jury forewoman gave the verdict, the courtroom erupted into cheers, with Marcos supporters dancing for joy and hugging each other.

Marcos, on her 61st birthday, stood before the judge appearing stunned, with tears streaming from her eyes.

In its fifth day of deliberations, the jury cleared Mrs. Marcos of racketeering, conspiring to racketeer, fraud and obstruction of justice by plotting with her late husband, ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, to divert more than $200 million stolen from their homeland's treasury into real estate and art investments in New York.

Khashoggi, 53, a former arms merchant once considered the world's richest man, had been charged with obstruction of justice and fraud by helping the Marcoses conceal the purchase of four Manhattan skyscrapers.

The verdict came after two long weekend deliberating sessions during which the jury repeatedly asked for re-reading of testimony, and U.S. District Judge John Keenan urged them to exercise their memories more.

The verdict was a tremendous birthday present for Marcos, who had been smiling and vivacious Sunday night as she greeted hundreds of fans and followers at a huge birthday party at a Philippine restaurant.

Khashoggi was one of the guests and gave Mrs. Marcos a hearty birthday kiss.

Marcos had faced up to 50 years in prison if convicted on all charges. Khashoggi faced up to 20 years.

During the trial, the government called 95 witnesses and presented thousands of documents in an attempt to show that the Marcoses accumulated a fortune from embezzlement, theft, and diversion of Philippine government funds and the receipt of bribes, kickbacks and gratuities in the form of cash and corporate stock.

Ferdinand Marcos died last September. His body remains in Hawaii awaiting repatriation to the Philippines, refused by President Corazon Aquino.

In Manila Monday, Aquino said she would not allow Marcos to return to the Philippines even if the former first lady is acquitted of racketeering charges in New York.

Aquino forces toppled Ferdinand Marcos's 21-year old regime in February 1986.

During the trial, Marcos's attorney, Gerry Spence, insisted that his client was an unquestioning wife, admittedly a ''world-class shopper,'' who knew nothing about her husband's dealings.

The government's claim was to the contrary, saying not only did Mrs. Marcos know about her husband's dealings, she was ''the driving force'' in the scheme to skim the millions of dollars from the Philippine treasure.

Khashoggi's defense was that he didn't do it.

During the lengthy trial, Mrs. Marcos, who suffers from high blood pressure, reacted emotionally to witnesses' testimonies. She suffered two attacks of high blood pressure and her physicians insisted she wear a heart monitor.

On May 31, she collapsed at the defense table and coughed up blood. She was rushed from the courtroom on a stretcher and taken to New York Hospital, where she remained for four days with an inflamation of the stomach.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (JULY 2) UPI - A Sofia newspaper urged the government Monday to tell the truth about the fate of Lyudmila Zhivkova, daughter of former hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov, whose death nine years ago was attributed to a brain hemorrhage.

The weekly Pogled said rumors that Zhivkova, who had served as minister of culture, had been murdered or committed suicide have run rampant since she died July 21, 1981.

It cited a statement from one of the doctors who attended Zhivkova's autopsy and reportedly said, ''There are certain things which should not be disclosed for the sake of the memory of the deceased.''

Various accounts of her death ranged from murder by political opponents to suicide to ''complete exhaustion as a result of following Indian diets too strictly,'' said Pogled, the newspaper of the Union of Buylgarian Journalists.

Zhivkova was the only daughter of Zhivkov, Bulgaria's authoritarian leader for 35 years until overthrown by pro-reform communists last Nov. 10.

In the last years of her life she was heavily involved in politics, becoming a member of the Communist Party Central Committee and minister of culture. Her death, reportedly by a brain hemorrhage, came a short time after she sustained head injuries in an automobile accident.

Zhivkov was arrested two months after his removal from power and is now awaiting trial on charges of gross malfeasance.

Pogled urged the government to publish all documents related to Zhivkova's death to ''clarify the truth.''

LINCOLN, Neb. (JULY 2) UPI - Ben Nelson was certified Monday as Nebraska's Democratic nominee for governor - a month and a half after the state's primary election.

The State Board of Canvassers voted 4-0 Monday to certify Nelson the winner in the Democratic race by a 42-vote margin over Bill Hoppner.

Certification came after a full recount of the ballots cast in the May 15 primary and then another partial recount of certain ballots in about one-fourth of Nebraska's counties.

Nelson, 49, advances to the November general election against Gov. Kay Orr the first Republican woman governor in the nation.

An automatic recount was triggered after the initial votes were counted because less than 1 percent separated the two candidates. After the recount, Hoppner said he was doubtful of its complete accuracy.

Hoppner won a momentary victory on June 20 when the Canvassing Board ordered 23 counties which use voting machines to tabulate results to hand-check ''undervotes'' - those ballots in which no votes for governor registered on the machines.

Before the certification, Hoppner, the former chief of staff of Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., asked the board to certify Nelson the nominee.

''This has gone on long enough,'' he said. ''I believe Ben Nelson is in fact the nominee of this party.'' He asked for the certification to ''let the Democratic Party get on to winning the election in November.''

TEHRAN, IRAN (JULY 2) UPI - Iran canceled celebrations for a major Islamic festival Monday as a mark of respect for the 50,000 killed in last month's earthquake, but planned to observe the anniversary of the U.S. Navy's accidental downing of an Iranian passenger plane which killed 290.

A Cabinet announcement said official celebrations for Eidul Qorban, or Feast of the Sacrifice, would not be held this year as a mark of respect for the earthquake victims. The Islamic festival would normally have been observed Tuesday.

Iran also had another reason to call off the celebrations - the festival was coinciding with the anniversary of the July 3, 1988 downing of an Iran Air passenger plane over the Persian Gulf by the USS Vincennes during Iran's war with Iraq.

The Cabinet of President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani made the decision because of the June 21 quake that devastated a wide area northwest of Tehran. It measured it 7.7 on the Richter scale, killed at least 50,000 people, injured three times as many and left 500,000 homeless.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, meanwhile, said two more aftershocks, measuring 4.8 and 4.6 on the Richter scale, rocked the area between the Caspian Sea and Zanjan, some 175 miles northwest of Tehran.

Aftershocks, expected to continue for two months, have made relief work in the area difficult and dangerous. But at least 880 medical and other foreign relief or rescue workers went into the quake-stricken area after the disaster, IRNA said.

Rafsanjani sent messages of thanks Monday to heads of state and governments around the world for their sympathy and assistance for the quake victims.

Conspiciously absent from the list were the United States and Britain, both of which also sent assistance for the quake victims but do not have diplomatic relations with Iran.

An Iranian official last week had suggested the United States was not being as generous with aid as other countries, leaving some Western diplomats to speculate that Iran was seeking more assistance in return for improved relations.

But at a press conference Sunday, Interior Minister Abdollah Noori said relief aid for the quake victims should not be linked to improving relations with the West.

Diplomats, however, said the political overtones to relief aid from the United States and Britain had not been lost on the Iranian government.

Tehran, meanwhile, quietly prepared to mark the anniversary of the downing of the Iran Air jumbo jet.

A total of 290 people were killed when the Vincennes fired surface-to-air missiles at the aircraft after it took off from Bandar Abbas for Dubai, in the United Arab Emirates.

A U.S. Navy investigation later said the plane was shot down by mistake because of confusion caused by new electronic instruments on board the vessel. Families of the victims gathered in Tehran Monday to mourn the dead, and complained that the United States had not yet paid compensation for the passengers killed in the incident.

In 1988, the U.S. government offered to pay compensation directly to the families of the victims, but not through the Iranian government.

Mohammed Reza Keyvani, speaking for one family, said they wanted to travel to another country to inquire about the subject at a U.S. Embassy but were unable to get visas. The United States has not had a diplomatic mission in Iran since Iranian students seized American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in 1979.

GOTHENBURG, Neb. (JULY 2) UPI - A 17-year-old youth whom police ticketed for vandalizing cars went to the police station and fatally shot a sergeant Monday, authorities said.

Sgt. Glenn Haas was shot once in the abdomen with a 30-06 rifle about 3:15 a.m. Monday, said Dawson County Attorney John Marsh. Haas was flown to Good Samaritan Hospital in Kearney where he died about 7 a.m.

Eric R. McCain was arrested in a corn field north of the city about 5:30 a.m. Marsh charged him with first-degree murder and use of a weapon to commit a felony. Dawson County Judge Lloyd Kaufman set bond at $750,000 and continued McCain's arraignment until July 11.

Because of his age, McCain would face a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Marsh declined to speculate about a motive, however he said McCain was ticketed by police Sunday night.

''He was cited earlier in the evening. Criminal mischief. He'd done some damage to cars at Simon Motors,'' Marsh said.

Marsh said McCain is the son of Jeanne and Dennis McCain, who farm outside of Gothenburg in west-central Nebraska. He was held in the Dawson County jail.

Haas had a wife and two children, Marsh said. Haas had served with the Gothenburg police department for 12 years, he said.

LONDON (JULY 2) UPI - Share prices closed slightly lower Monday on the London International stock exchange, pulled down by renewed concerns about British inflation.

The Financial Times Stock Exchange 100-share index lost 2.6 points to close at 2,372. The narrower Financial Times 30 index lost 3.3 points to close at 1,896.6.

Volume was a light 309.4 million shares, compared with 461.9 million issues traded Friday.

British retail sales figures showed revenues in the sector rose by 1.4 percent in May, adding to a 1.2 percent increase in April, which contributed to renew fears of inflation. Additional inflation concerns were raised by the possible effect of the German monetary reunion Sunday.

Brokers said the market recovered some of its losses of the day with a boost from a moderately healthy performance on Wall Street and some bargain hunting.

The biggest loss of the day was suffered by the industrial group Trafalgar House, which lost 34 cents to $5.23 after profit downgrading by Smith New Court.

P. and O. lost 29 cents to $11.15 in sympathy.

Ratners shed 17 cents to $4.56 after announcing a 129.8 million-pound or $227 million-right issue to finance its proposed takeover of Kay Jewelers Inc. of the United States.

Tate and Lyle lost 10 cents to $5.14 after announcing it would not bid for Berisford whose shares fell 21 cents to $1.72.

Parkfield, whose shares have been losing ground lately, gained 35 cents to $1.53 on reports that the company is planning to sell its subsidiaries.

Shanks McEwan jumped 72 cents to $26.83, Attwoods moved up 24 cents to $9.09 as environmental stocks firmed.

Elsewhere, in Frankfurt stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange rose broadly as it became apparent that East Germans haven't engaged in a spending spree since German monetary union took effect Sunday.

The closely watched German Stock Index was up 35.40 points to 1,915.30.

Traders said the smooth start to monetary union calmed some recent worries in the market about a rush by East Germans to spend their new West German marks on consumer goods.

Concern over the possible inflationary impact of unification and investor worry about the stability of the deutsche mark have led to widely fluctuating stock market prices and weakness in West German bond markets in recent months.

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (JULY 2) UPI - The Sri Lankan government Monday ruled out the possibility of a cease-fire with Tamil guerrillas, but said it might hold talks if rebels turn in their weapons and allow the evacuation of 17 wounded soldiers from a besieged army fort.

In New Delhi, Sri Lankan Foreign Secretary Bernard Tilakaratne met with Indian Foreign Affairs Minister Minister I.K. Gujral, briefing him on the status of fighting between government troops and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Gujral expressed India's concern about the safety of Tamils and its worry that the violence could mean a wave of refugees flowing into India.

''The Sri Lankan foreign secretary assured (Gujral) that the fight in Sri Lanka was not directed against the Tamil community, but against terrorism '' said the spokesman.

Tilakaratne also delivered a message to Gujral from Sri Lankan Foreign Minister Herald Herath, but the spokesman declined to reveal its contents.

In Colombo, Defense Minister Ranjan Wijeratne said at a news conference the government has ruled out the possibility of a ceasefire with the Tigers. But it would consider holding talks if rebels surrender their weapons and allowedthe evacuation of 17 injured soldiers and police officers trapped in a 300-year-old Dutch fort on the northern Jaffna Peninsula.

Tiger rebels, using mortars and automatic weapons, have kept the fort under attack since fighting erupted June 12, pinning down about 200 soldiers and police officers.

Although the government has managed to air-drop fresh food supplies to the fort, they have been unable to evacuate the 17 injured men, the minister said.

Fighting broke out last month when Tiger rebels staged simultaneous attacks on four different army camps in eastern Sri Lanka, killing at least 66 soldiers. Since then, more than 1,000 government troops, police, rebels and civilians have been killed.

The government and guerrilla leaders have negotiated two cease-fire agreements in the past, but both failed as fighting continued to rage in the country's northern and eastern provinces, where the Tigers want to establish an independent homeland for the nation's Tamil minority.

Tamil rebels believe a separate Tamil nation is necessary because of years of alleged discrimination by the majority Buddhist Sinhalese, who control the Colombo government.

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND (JULY 2) UPI - Steffi Graf, the reigning queen of women's tennis, Monday showed heir apparent Jennifer Capriati what it takes to earn a Wimbledon crown.

In her first meeting with the 14-year-old prodigy, the defending champion used a devastating blend of power and touch to produce a 6-2, 6-4 fourth-round victory.

Graf, one of Capriati's idols, appreciated the site and significance of their tennis introduction.

''She always wanted to play against me and I was kind of looking forward to playing her, too,'' Graf said. ''To play it on Centre Court was, I think, a great way to start. She's a favorite because she's so young and she's such a natural in the way she is.''

Graf, who went home to West Germany Friday for treatment of a sinus problem, broke the American's serve in the first and seventh games of the first set, then the fifth game of the second set. Several points produced brilliant baseline exchanges.

Capriati, seeded 12th, is the youngest player to win a Wimbledon singles match or seeding.

''I thought I played well and I had a lot of fun out there,'' she said. ''She played really great. It was just fun. It was a great experience. I thought, 'I'm playing Steffi Graf!'''

Whenever Capriati failed to keep Graf behind the baseline, the top-ranked woman charged the net, firing deep approach shots.

''I'd seen her forehand, and I finally got a chance to hit against it,'' Capriati said. ''Now I know why they call it 'The Forehand.' It was just a bullet.''

Graf's serve, which often pulled the Floridian off the court, setting up easy volleys.

''It was powerful,'' Capriati said. ''She almost aced me two times a game.''

Men's defending champion Boris Becker downed 1987 titlist Pat Cash 7-6 (7-3), 6-1, 6-4 to gain a quarterfinal berth.

In the last third-round match, top seed Ivan Lendl completed his darkness-interrupted confrontation with American Bryan Shelton, winning the final two sets for a 7-6 (7-2), 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-4 triumph.

In other fourth-round matches, No. 2 Martina Navratilova moved a step closer to the record ninth Wimbledon singles crown she covets, eliminating No. 14 Judith Wiesner 6-3, 6-3. No. 3 Monica Seles needed just 39 minutes to rout helpless American Ann Henricksson and advance to the quarters with a 6-1, 6-0 victory.

Becker survived two set points at 5-6 in the first set, Cash twice missing backhand winners by inches. In the second set, Cash squandered a 40-love lead in the second game, letting an umpire's overrule on a line call bother him, and fell behind 0-5.

The Australian, who needed a wild-card invitation to Wimbledon because of his No. 142 ranking, played superb serve-and-volley tennis in the first set. But when his concentration flagged in the second, he failed to match Becker's hard, top-spin groundstrokes.

''After I won that first set, it kind of clicked for me and not for him,''

Becker said. ''Pat can play better. In a year, he can play better than he is now.''

Cash said his lack of tournament play in recent months was a factor.

''I haven't played a big match like this in a long time,'' he said. ''... I played pretty well, I had my chances, but I just couldn't take them.''

Lendl, pursuing his first Wimbledon title, struggled with Shelton's hard serve, but his opponent, ranked No. 125, could not pull off the big shots on the crucial points.

''He was serving big, going for it, and in the end he paid for it,'' said Lendl, who broke Shelton in the ninth game of the fourth set then served the match out at 30.

Shelton said it was to his disadvantage that the match could not be completed on Saturday, when the winds were gusting to 40 mph.

''He (Lendl) was really flustered out there,'' said Shelton, who also missed a chance in the third set. After breaking Lendl for a 3-1 lead, Shelton immediately surrendered his serve.

''If I could have held that game and gone up 4-1, I think I would have had a good chance at the match,'' Shelton said.

Seles, the 16-year-old Yugoslavian who has won 36 consecutive matches and her last six tournaments, lost only six points in the second set. Only in the sixth game of the match, when Henricksson held serve, did the American win more than two points in a game.

''I would like to beat everyone like Henricksson, in 39 minutes,'' the French Open champion said. ''Then I would be satisfied.''

In other matches, No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini won 6-2, 7-6 (7-1) over Nathalie Tauziat, No. 5 Zina Garrison dispatched No. 10 Helena Sukova 6-3, 6-3; No. 7 Katerina Maleeva disposed of France's Nathalie Herreman 6-3, 6-0; No. 13 Jana Novotna ousted American Patty Fendick 6-2, 6-4; and No. 11 Natalia Zvereva eliminated Brenda Schultz of the Netherlands 6-2, 6-2.

The pairings in the women's quarterfinals will be Graf-Novotna, Sabatini-Zvereva, Seles-Garrison and Navratilova-Maleeva.

On the men's side, No. 11 Guy Forget was upset by Christian Bergstrom 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (JULY 2) UPI - Soviet troops withdrawing from Hungary have left behind live explosives and chemicals in a national park, posing a serious hazard to people and the environment, Parliament was warned Monday.

The dangerous materials are reportedly in the Kiskunsag National Park, which incorporates the undisturbed Puszta wilderness in eastern Hungary. The park is highly protected because it contains endangered plants, but it has been used by Soviet occupation troops since the end of World War II.

Under an agreement with the Hungarian government, all Soviet forces will be withdrawn by June 30, 1991. About one-third have already departed.

Parliament member Gabor Demszky of the Free Democrat Party said he had been told by a national park inspector the Soviets discarded rockets, anti-tank grenades and live heavy artillery shells in the forest. He said they also buried barrels of tear gas and chemical weapons, posing a serious threat to local wine makers and farmers.

''Unpredictable environmental damage and a future catastrophy may occur as a result,'' Demszky said.

He also warned wells could be poisoned if the chemicals, gasoline and engine oil were allowed to seep deep into the ground.

Demszky showed fellow members of Parliament an unused machine gun belt which had been found lying in the forest. He said he had begun collecting discarded explosives and live ammunition from the area.

The parliamentarian called on Defense Minister Lajos Fur to ''do your duty to the civilian population and not tolerate the irresponsible destruction of the environment''.

Demszky said he decided to speak out because both the defense ministry and environmental ministry had documented evidence in their possession but had not acted.

The evidence includes even a video tape, he said, that has been buried in the defense ministry's archives for at least six weeks.

''The defense administration is asleep,'' Demszky said.

He urged the government to station guards in Kiskunsag while the explosives and dangerous chemicals were removed.

The official Hungarian news agency, MTI, reported Monday that by midnight on July 1, at least 313 Soviet army trains had left Hungarian territory in accordance with the withdrawal agreement.

MTI said Col. Gyorgy Keleti, spokesman for the Ministry of Home Defense, said 12,068 Soviet soldiers had returned home along with 6,982 family members.

By the end of June, MTI said, 4,602 pieces of combat equipment had been shipped out of Hungary, including over 350 tanks.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - The Justice Department disclosed Monday that it has added a new facet to its "broadly based" review of possible antitrust violations by major U.S. airlines, bringing the number of current investigations to five.

James Rill, chief of the department's antitrust division, told reporters his unit is examining "a particular agreement" between air carriers, but would not elaborate.

Asked about Rill's comment, Justice Department spokesman Joseph Krovisky said a fifth airline antitrust investigation had been opened, but said he could not provide any details. Four other airline antitrust investigations already had been made public.

"I can only confirm the investigation is rather broadly based," Rill said, adding the department has committed considerable resources to the antitrust examination. Air transport "is a very important area of the economy" and deserves special scrutiny, he said.

Rill said the government is examining possible violations of antitrust law involving an industry-owned computer network, overwhelming domination of "hub" airports by single carriers, and a round of price increases just before last Christmas.

Another investigation that became public in 1988 involves United Air Lines which purchased and sold various gates at Chicago's O'Hare airport. That investigation is continuing, Krovisky said.

Overall, Rill said, airline deregulation during the 1980s generally has been "effective." "I think deregulation has, by and large, been effective " Rill said. Robust airline competition is preferable to "re-regulation," he added.

The government is examining the vast industry computer network to determine if it has been used to fix prices or subvert competition. It is illegal for companies to conspire to fix prices or attempt to do so.

The computer clearinghouse - Airline Tariff Publishing - collects and transmits prices for thousands of flights. The system is used by the airline industry and travel agents to track rapidly changing ticket prices and complex discounting rules.

There have been published reports that the government suspects some carriers have used codes and symbols to tip off other carriers about pricing and marketing strategies.

Airline Tariff Publishing is owned by the airlines and the Justice Department has issued "civil investigative demands" - subpoenas - for detailed information on how carriers set prices and make decisions on routes and schedules.

The investigation of airport "hubs" involves the dominance of particular airports or regions by various airlines, and their ability to control valuable takeoff and landing slots.

For example, American Airlines dominates the Dallas-Fort Worth airport and USAir has most flights in and out of Pittsburgh. Studies have shown that ticket prices are often higher at "hub" airports dominated by single carriers.

Last year, the Justice Department confirmed an investigation into ticket price increases by American Airlines just before the busy Christmas travel period. All other major airlines quickly raised fares to match American's increases.

Rill met with reporters to discuss a recently completed round of trade talks with Japan designed to bring that country's business practices closer to the Western model. The economic and business reforms promised by the Japanese government to eliminate so-called structural impediments are noteworthy, Rill said.

"We are very, very positive about these steps by the Japanese government," Rill said, adding, however, that "much remains to be seen." Japan has promised to reform many trade practices, Rill said, and "these are steps that are good for the Japanese consumer."

(JULY 2) UPI - New York jurors give Imelda Marcos a 61st birthday present... ethnic Albanian lawmakers vote to create an independent Kosovo state within Yugoslavia... NASA officials defend their glitch-plagued programs... and Mikhail Gorbachev fires back at communist critics.

The top news... and more... next, from U-P-I.

Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos got what she wanted for her birthday today.

On her 61st birthday, a New York jury found Mrs. Marcos innocent of charges of racketeering, conspiring to racketeer, fraud and obstruction of justice.

The jury also returned an innocent verdict for former Saudi Arabian arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi.

Marcos was accused of spending Millions of dollars looted from her country to buy New York skyscrapers and works of art.

Khashoggi was charged with helping to hide the purchases made by Marcos.

As the verdict was read in U-S District Court, the courtroom erupted into cheers, with Marcos supporters dancing for joy and hugging each other.

Marcos stood before the judge with tears streaming from her eyes.

She said... ''This is the best birthday present I ever had.''

As Marcos left the courthouse, a crowd of supporters cheered and started singing ''Happy Birthday.''

A delighted Khashoggi said ''I feel that America has won with me.''

The verdicts came in the fifth day of jury deliberations.

JERUSALEM (JULY 2) UPI - An Arab teenager was electrocuted while hanging an outlawed Palestinian flag on a utility pole in the Gaza Strip Monday, military sources said, while tensions eased in the occupied territories for a Moslem holiday.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, meanwhile, visited an Arab-owned cafe in the Moslem Quarter of the walled Old City to demonstrate that all parts of the city are safe for Jews. The visit came a day after a pipe bomb exploded in a downtown pedestrian mall, injuring a little girl.

Iyad Abu Khadayed, 16, died while attempting to unfurl a Palestinian flag on an electrical pole in the Khan Younis refugee camp in the Gaza Strip Monday, the second such incident there in a week, military sources said.

Throughout Israel and the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, Moslems began their annual celebration of the four-day Feast of the Sacrifice. The holiday begins with the ritualistic slaughter of sheep and goats in remembrance of Abraham's near-slaying of his son.

Thousands of West Bank and Gaza Strip Arabs attended prayers in mosques and visited cemeteries, carrying flags and flowers to remember those killed in the intifada, or uprising, Palestinian sources said. Masked youths participated in paramilitary marches in several areas.

In the Beach refugee camp, masked youths brought roses to the families of those killed by army gunfire.

Army helicopters crisscrossed the skies over Gaza, keeping watch on the activities, but patrols stayed away from the religious celebrations.

Early Monday, the army clamped indefinite curfews on the Jabalia refugee camp and Beit Lahia village in the Gaza Strip to prevent unrest during the holiday. The two areas have been among the most volatile in Gaza.

In Jerusalem, Kollek visited an Arab cafe and said he would establish a part-time office in the Old City's Moslem Quarter and conduct some of the city's business from there, Israel Radio reported. The outspoken 79-year-old mayor also said the increasing number of attacks on civilians in all parts of the city would be brought under control only by a political solution.

''I don't think there is a solution by police methods or by the army. There can only be a political solution,'' Kollek said.

The Old City, part of Arab East Jerusalem, was seized and annexed by Israel from Jordan in 1967. Most foreign countries, including the United States, consider East Jerusalem to be occupied territory, and many Israelis avoid it out of fear of being attacked.

''I think the apprehensions of coming here are vastly exagerated,'' Kollek said. ''Maybe my coming here gives an example that (other Israelis) can come here. If anybody would be a target for attack, it would be the mayor, first, before a normal citizen.''

On Sunday, a pipe bomb exploded near Jerusalem's crowded Ben Yehuda Street pedestrian mall, slightly wounding a 5-year-old girl. The bomb was the eighth one planted in Jerusalem in the last five weeks. Five have been safely dismantled.

Since the start of the 30-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule, at least 684 Palestinians have been killed by Israelis or in uprising-related incidents. The number does not include those killed by other Arabs.

(JULY 2) UPI - Bombings and death marred a one-day strike in South Africa that was meant to promote black conciliation.

The strike was called by the African National Congress to force authorities to act on widespread black-on-black violence in Natal province. A wide range of A-N-C rivals opposed the strike.

Police and army units went on nation-wide standby but apparently could NOT stop black groups in Natal from clashing. Independent monitors say at least five people died and 20 people were injured.

The strike paralyzed much of South Africa's transportation.

Explosions in the Johannesburg area damaged two railway stations and the house of an opponent of the work stoppage. A government spokesman said the bombs caused NO casualties but were meant to intimidate workers.

In an incident police said was NOT related to the strike... a policeman shot and killed an eight-year-old boy and injured three children. The officer's action was attributed to ''general tension'' when he fired on a group stoning a vehicle in a black township.

Like several Soviet republics before them, ethnic Albanians in Kosovo Province today declared independence from the Yugoslavian republic of Serbia.

Kosovo is a province in Serbia, one of Yugoslavia's six republics. Ethnic Albanians comprise a majority in Kosovo. But Serbians have strong historical ties to the province and do NOT want it to break away.

114 members of the Kosovo Assembly issued the declaration. Radio reports said the edict was greeted with cheers by ethnic Albanians in the provincial capital of Pristina, 200 miles south of Belgrade.

The defiant move by the Albanians came during a referendum organized by the Serbian communist regime for approval of its political program. The plan calls for the adoption of a new constitution eliminating virtually all autonomy for Kosovo.

Some ethnic Albanians advocate independence of Kosovo NOT only from Serbia but from Yugoslavia. Many Serbs fear ethnic Albanians want to merge Kosovo with the neighboring Marxist nation of Albania.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (JULY 2) UPI - NASA engineers are considering everything from misaligned fuel tanks to the remote possibility of sabotage to explain the elusive fuel leaks that have grounded the shuttle fleet, officials said Monday.

Agency managers are considering another fueling test for the shuttle Atlantis, possibly as early as this weekend, to pinpoint a tiny leak in the ship's 17-inch-wide fuel line ''disconnect'' fitting that forced NASA to cancel the ship's launch later this month on a secret military mission.

Engineers said Monday Atlantis's leak does not appear at all similar to the one that grounded Columbia and that another fueling test might show the leakage detected during a test last week showed up only because of the location of a critical sensor and a lack of wind to dilute the concentration.

In California, meanwhile, engineers are preparing to pump frigid liquid hydrogen through disconnect hardware removed from Columbia in a test Thursday to duplicate the much larger leak that forced NASA to cancel the ship's May 30 liftoff.

Regardless of what ultimately may be required to fix the grounded shuttles engineers say it will be virtually impossible for NASA to launch both Columbia and Atlantis as planned before Discovery's high-priority Oct. 5 flight to carry the Ulysses solar probe into orbit.

''We're right on the edge where two flights no longer fit before Ulysses and we'll be addressing that in the next few days,'' said William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight.

NASA managers are considering the possibility of launching Atlantis before the Ulysses mission, assuming the leak issue is resolved, and then launching Columbia after Discovery.

Columbia was grounded when sensors detected a massive fuel leak during propellant loading the night before the ship's planned launch in May.

A subsequent fueling test showed hydrogen leakage in the engine room as well as in the cavity between the two halves of the 17-inch disconnect fitting, which allows the shuttle's propellant lines to separate before the tank is jettisoned in space.

Hydrogen concentrations higher than the allowable limit of 40,000 parts per million - 4 percent - were detected in the engine compartment and up to 58 percent in the disconnect cavity.

In sharp contrast, no hydrogen leaked into Atlantis's engine room last week during its fueling test and the concentration in the disconnect cavity was around 8 percent.

There was virtually no wind at launch pad 39A for Atlantis's test and engineers could not rule out the possibility that a sensor located very close to a 4-inch hydrogen line in the disconnect fitting was picking up signs of leakage that might otherwise have been within allowable specifications.

Lenoir said five teams have been assesmbled to look into the design of the 17-inch disconnect fitting, its history, ground processing, assembly techniques and so on to find evidence of anything that could explain the leakage.

''After as many flights as we've had ... all of a sudden two in a row seems more than coincidental,'' he said. ''That seems to weigh against a generic problem that's been there lurking all along. It would seem there's something different that we've either done in manufacturing this hardware or in the way we're using it.''

A space shuttle is assembled for launch by bolting the spaceplane to giant fittings on the side of the external fuel tank where the tank's propellant lines enter the belly of the orbiter.

The attachment fittings on the tanks used by Columbia and Atlantis are out of line by a record amount and engineers are looking into the possibility that the resulting misalignment might have something to do with the leakage.

''There's always some small degree of misalignment,'' Lenoir said. ''The last two attempts, while within the ability, we believe, of the shuttle system to accommodate, they are the largest offset of all the flights to date.''

Lenoir also refused to rule out the possibility of sabotage, although he and NASA Administrator Richard Truly said that appeared to be unlikely.

''Yes, we've considered sabotage and we're not proceeding vigorously down that path,'' Lenoir said. ''We may come back down that path once we understand technically what is the problem.''

Truly said, ''If you set out to sabotage the system, you'd have to carefully design a flaw that could be introduced that would pass every pre-flight test we had but then would fail only when we filled the tank with (supercold) hydrogen. It seems like if you were a saboteur you'd find a solution that was simpler than that.''

(JULY 2) UPI - The 28th Communist Party Congress opened in Moscow today with some delegates ready to take on the top leadership of the party.

Early in the session, one delegate demanded that the party's entire 250-member Central Committee and its ruling Politburo resign immediately. The delegate did NOT refer specifically to Mikhail Gorbachev, but Gorbachev is a member of both the Central Committee and the Politburo.

Gorbachev brushed the challenge aside, saying the status of the party leaders would be dealt with later at the Congress.

Gorbachev defended himself with a 90-minute report to the Congress. His speech turned out to be a counter-attack on conservatives who have criticized his reform program.

Gorbachev said the claim that perestroika is to blame for the nation's troubles is ''nonsense.''

In his words- ''This is an inability or a lack of desire to face the facts.''

Gorbachev also warned hard-liners challenging his five-year rule- quoting now- ''NOT to indulge in trivial passions'' that could divide the party.

The debut of the East German deutsche mark was a success today, both on world money markets and in the hands of East German consumers.

Traders showed full confidence in the deutsche mark in a day of nervous but active trading that pushed the dollar down.

The German currency traded slightly higher in Tokyo on its first test on a major international market since it replaced the east mark yesterday.

A monetary expert said in Frankfurt... ''The baby is born and has been joyfully greeted. Now it will grow.''

The East German news agency said that in a survey of major shopping centers in various cities there was NO rush for the Western goods, which were first displayed in the stores today.

Department store managers in East and West Berlin reported a steady stream of East German shoppers but said most were spending carefully.

Officials said about two-point-eight-BILLION dollars worth of marks have been paid out to East Germans since the West German currency replaced the east mark yesterday morning.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - NASA is capable of conducting complex missions despite problems crippling the Hubble space telescope and space shuttle, agency managers said Monday, adding high-tech imaging might salvage exciting pictures from the telescope.

Administrator Richard Truly insisted NASA is proceeding in a safe and responsible manner, despite criticism about shuttle reliability and agency management of major projects like the space telescope.

''I believe we are doing precisely what the American public asked us to do '' Truly said, ''And that is when we run into a problem like this, we're going to stop and assess it and fix it.''

Some members of Congress have said the latest woes cast doubts on NASA's ability to carry out large, highly complex projects like the Space Station Freedom or a manned mission to Mars. Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., head of the Senate appropriations subcommittee that funds NASA programs, has asked: ''Are we going to keep ending up with techno turkeys?''

Truly told a news conference that although the proposed space station is complex, he does not view it as any more difficult than the space shuttle program. The NASA chief said he considers the shuttle effort a great achievement, noting the 10 missions flown since the Challenger disaster in 1986 have carried more payload into space than launch efforts of all other nations combined.

The shuttle program was recently grounded the discovery of hydrogen fuel leaks in both the shuttle Columbia and Atlantis.

''The current situation notwithstanding, I need to point out that the space shuttle is a safe and reliable launch vehicle,'' said William Lenoir NASA's associate administrator for space flight. ''We are confident ... that we will very shortly be back in an operational flying configuration.''

As for the $1.5 billion space telescope, NASA science chief Lennard Fisk said the observatory's blurry vision eventually will be fixed by installing modified cameras and that in the meantime, the big observatory will produce ''world-class science'' by tracking non-visible energy like ultraviolet light.

''And there's growing optimism ... that we will be able to do image reconstruction with the telescope in the visible (light) and produce clear and exciting images of the universe,'' Fisk said.

''I think you will discover Hubble space telescope in the next few years ... produces exciting and very dramatic pictures of the universe in addition to science essentially uninhibited by the problem with the mirrors.''

Lenoir and Fisk said special teams were being formed to investigate both problems and develop corrective measures.

Engineers announced last week that Hubble's supposedly near-perfect mirrors somehow were ground to the wrong prescription, giving the most expensive satellite ever built blurred vision and limiting its ability to probe the secrets of the universe.

It was a devastating setback to NASA and the showcase space telescope project, touted for years as the most revolutionary step for astronomy since Galileo first trained his spyglass on the heavens 400 years ago.

But instead of beaming back super-sharp pictures of stars and galaxies at the edge of the universe, Hubble will be limited primarily to important but less-than-spectacular ultraviolet studies until new cameras can be installed during a space shuttle repair mission in 1992 or 1993.

Still, Fisk said computer processing of image data from Hubble may yet yield useful photographs, despite the optical flaws.

''We are stubborn. We are clever. We are going to make this work,'' Fisk said.

Hubble suffers from spherical aberration, a defect that apparently was built into its optical system some 10 years ago during construction of its mirrors by what is now Hughes Danbury Optical Systems Inc. of Danbury, Conn.

During the computer-controlled grinding process, one of the mirrors apparently ended up with a slightly different shape than called for by the equations describing its parabolic curvature. The amount of error is tiny: The mirror's curve is off by just one-fiftieth the thickness of a human hair.

In optical systems suffering spherical aberration, light striking the outer portions of the primary mirror comes to a focus at a different point than light bouncing off the inner region. The result is a blurry image.

But engineers say spherical aberration is relatively easy to fix and that new cameras currently under development can be modified to correct Hubble's trouble before they are installed by a space shuttle.

''Some people say this is a sign we should not be doing complex missions '' Fisk said. ''The complex part of Hubble (like the guidance sensors) is working just fine ... the simple part of the mission seems to be where the process fell apart.''

BEIRUT, LEBANON (JULY 2) UPI - Israeli-backed troops battled joint Palestinian- Moslem forces with heavy arms in southern Lebanon Monday after gunmen ambushed a Moslem patrol and killed four soliders, police said.

At least two others were killed in the subsequent fighting and police said Israeli warplanes that passed over the embattled region drew ground-to-air machine gun fire from Palestinian guerrillas below.

Police said the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army engaged in day-long fighting against the Sunni Moslem People Liberation Army militia along a 7-year-old frontline east of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut.

Two Moslem gunmen were killed and extensive damage was inflicted in the fierce fighting, police said.

Earlier in the day, unknown gunmen in a speeding car had ambushed a PLA convoy and killed four soldiers, sources and police said.

The sources said PLA militiamen responded by setting up checkpoints inside Sidon and closing a main road leading to the Palestinian refugee camp of Ein El-Hilweh on the southeastern outskirts of the city.

The violence coincided with mounting tension along points northeast of Sidon between troops loyal to the Palestine Liberation Army and followers of Druze chieftain Walid Jumblatt.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - The United States and the United Kingdom have reached agreement on new air services, increasing the number of trans-Atlantic routes between the two nations, Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner said Monday. Skinner said the agreement will create new oppportunities for U.S. airlines and cities in the lucrative and growing foreign market.

The agreement, which was concluded June 28 between Skinner and Cecil Parkinson, the U.K. secretary of state for transportation, gives the United States the right to serve the Chicago-Manchester route and also calls for the United States to select two additional routes to regional U.K. airports.

The United Kingdom, in turn, was given authority to designate a second air carrier for the London-Boston route and to open two routes from regional U.K. airports.

Skinner said the department has received applications for the additional regional U.K. routes from a number of domestic airlines, including: New York-Manchester service from American Airlines and Pan American World Airways; Newark, N.J.-Manchester service from Continental Airlines; Detroit-Manchester service from Northwest Airlines and a Washington-Manchester route from United Air Lines.

The pact is the first step in an effort to significantly expand air service in the North Atlantic market, Skinner said. "The foreign market continues to be a major growth area for the airlines and I think it will continue to be so," he said.

The arrangement also calls for flight operations between the United States and the Cayman Islands to be regulated for three years to allow the financially troubeld Cayman Airlines time to adjust to increased levels of U.S. service, Skinner said.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (JULY 2) UPI - Three bombings and at least six deaths Monday marked a one-day strike organized by the African National Congress but opposed by other black groups that was intended to promote black conciliation.

Explosions in the Johannesburg area damaged two railway stations and the house of an opponent of the work stoppage, which paralyzed much of the country and was estimated to have cost the South African economy nearly $300 million.

Law and Order Ministry spokesman Leon Mellet said the bombs caused no casualties but were ''part of attempts to scare and intimidate workers.''

A policeman shot and killed an 8-year-old boy and injured three children in an incident police said was unrelated to the strike. The officer's action was attributed to ''general tension'' when he fired on a ''hostile group'' stoning a vehicle in a black township in the northeastern Transvaal province.

The strike was designed by the ANC to force authorities to act on widespread black-on-black violence in Natal province. Police and army units went on nationwide standby but could not stop black groups in Natal from clashing openly over the action. At least five people died and 20 people were injured and five dead in the unrest Monday, according to independent monitors.

The strike left commuter trains and buses only 20 percent to 25 percent full in townships of Pretoria, Johannesburg and the port city of Durban. Several transportation services were canceled, hundreds of would-be workers were stopped from leaving home by strike enforcers and employer federations reported absenteeism in parts of Durban and Johannesburg at 100 percent.

Business leaders estimated the work stoppage cost the country the equivalent of $295 million.

The one-day strike on the first day of a ''Week of Action'' aimed at highlighting apartheid abuses also split black movements that have argued whether it would create or end conflict.

''We differed with the African National Congress over the merits of the strike and we are being proved right,'' a spokesman for the rival anti-apartheid group the Pan Africanist-Congress said.

But an ANC organizer said, ''The violence is not from us. We can't control everything.''

The ANC's allies, the United Democratic Front and the Congress of South African Trade Anions, a militant union umbrella body, firmly endorsed the strike call, saying only such decisive action will force Pretoria to take real steps toward stemming a virtual civil war among members of the Zulu tribe in Natal.

But a wide range of ANC rivals opposed the call, citing precedents of murderous intimidation caused by past politically motivated labor actions.

Among those fighting the action were the hard-line PAC; the black consciousness Azanian People's Organization, or Azapo; the National Council of Trade Unions; and the conservative Zulu Inkatha movement, a major party to the four-year Natal conflict usually scorned as a government-stooge group by PAC and Azapo.

PAC and Azapo have criticized the ANC mainly for welcoming white membership and agreeing to hold talks with the government before white minority rule is abolished.

The ANC alliance claims to represent some 800,000 workers, the PAC grouping about 100,000.

Inkatha President Mangosuthu Buthelezi, chief of the nominally self-governing kwaZulu tribal homeland, whose followers have been battling ANC supporters in Natownships since 1986 at a cost of more than 3,000 lives, said a strike ''can only be enforced by battering workers into doing what the ANC wants.''

While calling Nelson Mandela a ''great son of Africa,'' Buthelezi said the globe-trotting ANC deputy president ''is being sucked into the political sewers of violence.''

But the ANC's internal leader, Walter Sisulu, insisted a concerted work stoppage will convey the ''national response'' to the Natal violence needed to force the government into action.

President Frederik de Klerk lifted a 4-year-old national state of emergency March 8 in three of South Africa's four provinces as part of his racial reform program, but said ongoing harsh measures are needed to quash the Natal turmoil.

''The terrible carnage ... must stop,'' Sisulu agreed, but claimed Pretoria does not ''really want'' to stem the conflict and is ''indifferent'' to the black disunity. ''It is only through mass protest that the Pretoria government and its creation, the kwaZulu bantustan, will be forced to act.''

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JULY 2) UPI - West Germany's finance minister presented a $196 billion draft budget Monday, which for the first time in West Germany's 41-year-history includes cuts in military spending.

The draft budget, which foresees a 3.9 percent increase in total government spending, includes $6 billion for East Germany, which Sunday merged its economy with that of West Germany.

On Tuesday, the conservative-led government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl is due to discuss the draft budget, which will still need to go to Parliament for ratification in the fall.

The draft, presented by Finance Minister Theo Waigel, proposed to cut military spending by 2 percent to $31.87 billion.

The defense ministry has the second largest share of the national budget, after the labor and social affairs ministry.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - Mayor Marion Barry said ''no'' to drugs seven times before smoking crack the night of his arrest, the woman who lured him into an FBI sting testified Monday at Barry's drug and perjury trial.

During cross-examination of government witness Rasheeda Moore, defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said that despite Moore's repeated references to drugs the night Barry was arrested, the mayor never indicated he wanted to use cocaine.

On an 83-minute FBI videotape of the Jan. 18 sting operation at the downtown Vista International Hotel, Barry is heard at one point telling Moore, his former lover, ''I don't smoke no more, honey.''

Moore asked him, ''You don't want to smoke?''

Barry responded, ''No.''

Mundy, cross-examining the former model for the second full day, went through a transcript of the videotape, pointing out time after time he said Barry rejected drugs.

Some of the instances were not clear cut, however. For example, Mundy claimed Barry's insistence he did not know how to use a crack pipe was an example of his reluctance to use the drug.

But Mundy repeatedly got Moore to acknowledge Barry had, in his words, answered ''no'' when asked to use drugs.

''He said 'no' seven times,'' said Mundy.

''That's correct,'' responded Moore.

On Friday, Moore testified she overstepped boundaries given her by the FBI in inviting Barry to the hotel room and discussing drug use.

Mundy claims Barry was entrapped. He contends Barry went to the hotel room seeking sex, not drugs.

Barry, 54, faces 14 drug and perjury charges stemming from the arrest and subsequent indictments. He could face 26 years in prison and $1.85 million in fines if convicted on all counts.

Moore testified last week she and Barry used cocaine more than 100 times over a three-year period, and were lovers from 1986 to 1988.

Mundy said $20 Barry gave Moore the night of the sting was to buy crack for herself, not the mayor.

When Moore returned to the main portion of the hotel room after giving the money to an undercover FBI agent, Barry asked her, ''What did you get?'' according to the tape transcript.

''Wasn't Barry asking what you got for yourself,'' said Mundy.

''That's correct,'' responded Moore.

Moore also said Monday that Barry was uncomfortable in the hotel room and was lying when he said he did not know how to use the crack pipe.

''I couldn't understand why he was asking me to show him how to use the pipe,'' she said.

Moore said Barry ''felt intuitively something was going on. ... He felt something and he was suspicious of something.''

At one point on the tape Moore offers Barry a lighter to light the crack, and he tells her, ''You do it. ... If you don't do it, I'm not going to do it.''

The tape, shown in court last week, shows Barry picking up the crack pipe and asking how it worked, adding ''I never done it before.'' But when he received no directions, he lit up anyway and inhaled the drug. He was arrested moments later by FBI agents.

Moore never smoked crack on the tape.

Moore, wearing a sparkling silver jacket and matching scarf wrapped around her head Monday, had been testifying since last Wednesday. She was expected to be on the stand at least throughout the day.

Del. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., a longtime Barry ally, was in court Monday on one of four passes provided to the defense team.

He said later he was backing the American Civil Liberties Union in its appeal of Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson's decision to bar two controversial black religious leaders - Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan and Imani Temple founder George Stallings - from court as possible ''disruptive'' and ''intimidating'' influences.

The mayor made a surprise appearance at a downtown rally during the trial's lunch break Monday, telling about 300 supporters that race is playing a role in his trial, which began June 4.

''Let the people speak about what is happening in Washington, D.C.,'' he said. ''Not just here but for the other black elected officials all over the land who have misfortunately been harassed and arraigned by U.S. prosecutors.''

HELSINKI, FINLAND (JULY 2) UPI - Finland denied an application Monday for political asylum from the hijacker of a Soviet plane who forced the pilot to land in Helsinki June 19.

The Ministry of Internal Affairs said the decision not to grant asylum to Oleg Kozlov was final and could not be appealed.

Kozlov hijacked an Aeroflot Tupolev 134 aircraft that was en route from the Latvian capital of Riga to the northern city of Murmansk in the Kola Peninsula.

The Justice Ministry is awaiting a recommendation from the Finnish supreme court later this week before making a decision on whether the hijacker will be returned to the Soviet Union.

A second Soviet hijacker, Mihail Varfolomejev, who seized an Aeroflot airliner en route from Tallinn to Lvov on June 24, was also awaiting a decision on his request for political asylum.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union Monday demanded the extradiction of 19-year-old Anatoliy Mihkaylenko, who hijacked a Soviet plane and forced it to fly to Stockholm last Saturday.

GENEVA (JULY 2) UPI - U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar met with the Iranian foreign minister Monday and was scheduled to meet the Iraqi foreign minister Tuesday in an effort to revive Gulf peace talks.

Iran and Iraq agreed in August, 1988, to a cease-fire after eight years of war and began U.N.-sponsored talks on a permament peace settlement.

Talks, however, ran into an almost immediate deadlock - mainly over frontier delineation - and have been suspended since the middle of last year.

Perez de Cuellar met Monday evening with foreign minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran and scheduled a meeting Tuesday morning with Tariq Aziz of Iraq.

U.N. officials said the secretary general's main objective was to try and arrange a face-to-face encounter between the two foreign ministers to work out the resumption of peace negotiations.

Perez de Cuellar was in Geneva for the summer session opening Wednesday of the U.N. Economic and Social Council.

CHICAGO (JULY 2) UPI - Soybean complex futures rallied to limit-up levels in nearly every contract Monday and were sharply higher at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Grain prices were mostly higher, but well below session highs.

Aggressive buying and the forecast for hot weather to spread across the Midwest triggered the rally in the soy complex.

The August through January soybean contracts were up the 30-cent limit about midday, then gave up some of the gains to profit-taking. Forecasters said the record high temperatures in western sections of the corn and soybean belt were expected to cover most of the central part of the nation this week. And there was little or no rain predicted for the region.

Soybean oil futures made contract highs across the board and were up the 100-point limit in virtually every month, while soybean meal rallied to limit-up levels in several contracts.

Corn was higher early in the day on weather concerns, then retreated on profit-taking just before the close. Contract highs were set in every month.

Commercial buying and spillover from the rest of the floor supported wheat futures, although gains were tempered by harvest activity.

At the close, corn was up 2 1/2 to down 3 1/4, soybeans up 17 to 23, wheat up 3/4 to 2 and oats up 3 1/2 to 3 3/4.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (JULY 2) UPI - American-backed guerrillas in Afghanistan were warned Monday they face ''unsolvable political and military difficulties'' unless they can find solutions acceptable to all Afghan exile groups.

The warning came from a group of former Afghan officials and intellectuals now living abroad, who said the guerrillas must come up with a ''new political condition.''

The Afghan resistance groups ''have so far not been able to form an effective political entity acceptable to all or the majority of the Afghan refugees and other segments of the Moslem Afghan nation,'' said a statement released by the group.

The exiles are mostly from the United States, Europe and Iran. They include former Prime Minister Mohammad Youssef and other former officials who served in governments prior to the 1978 communist revolution. Exiled intellectuals also are part of the group.

They were invited to the Pakistani border city of Peshawar by the rebel government in exile - set up by Afghan resistance leaders in Pakistan 16 months ago and known as the Afghan Interim Government - to find some formula for breaking the stalemate in the 12-year-old civil war.

The AIG has become embroiled in bloody internecine disputes since its formation and has been unable to attract wide support. The guerrillas, backed by the United States and Saudi Arabia, have also failed to make any major military advances despite the 1989 withdrawal of Soviet troops backing the present government.

Analysts say the resistance is now under pressure to come up with some new initiative that would project it as a more credible political force.

''The interim government ... has not achieved its declared objectives,'' the visiting delegation said in its report at the end of its two-week study of the Afghan situation.

''Disagreements among Peshawar-based organizations ... have widened and if God forbid, this trend continues, the ideals of the Afghan holy war and supreme interests of the country will face serious dangers.

''The only short and effective means for the realization of the objectives of the holy war and the wishes and aspirations of the Afghan people is to bring about a new political condition to pave the way for understanding and joint cooperation among the (guerrillas), refugees and other sectors of Afghan society.''

The delegates did not elaborate on what they believed should be the structure of the ''new political condition.'' However, the statement said ''Soviet agents and other atheist elements'' would be excluded from the process, referring to members of the Kabul government.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) UPI - A police officer testified Monday about arresting two youths charged with beating and raping a jogger in Central Park, describing how a pack of teenagers stalking through the park after the attack ran when he identified himself.

Under questioning in state Supreme Court in Manhattan, Officer Eric Reynolds told how he was patrolling a moonlit park on April 19, 1989, in an unmarked van after a number of reports had come over his police radio about attacks by gangs of youths.

Reynolds said he and his partner then came upon a large group of youths walking in the park.

''As we rode along side of them, the group stopped and they started pointing together at the van. They were all together, like a pack,'' Reynolds said. ''We got out of the van, identified ourselves and told them not to run.''

In response to questioning from prosecutor Elizabeth Lederer, Reynolds said all but two of the group of youths ran away when they spotted the police.

The two, Steven Lopez and Raymond Santana, were taken into police custody and later charged.

Santana, 15, is one of the three youths on trial before Justice Thomas Galligan for the attack on the jogger. The other two are Antron McCray, 16 and Yusef Salaam, l6. Each is charged with 13 criminal counts, including attempted murder, rape and sodomy.

If convicted, each faces a maximum sentence of five to 10 years imprisonment. All three were juveniles at the time of the attack.

Lopez was expected to be tried at a later date on the same charges in the case of the woman jogger, who was gang-raped, beaten and left for dead.

Under cross-examination, the three attorneys for the youths tried to draw out inconsistencies in Reynold's memory of the sequence of events the night of the attack.

They also tried to show that the arrest of three youths had been illegal because police had failed to comply with proper procedures.

Reynolds testified under direct questioning that after Santana was caught, ''He stated that he had just come from a girlfriend's house and that he didn't know the group and that they were about to rip him off.''

Five suspects wanted for questioning in attacks in Central Park were taken into custody that night, Reynolds said.

He testified that when Santana was sitting in the Central Park police precinct's ''juvenile room'' with the other four youths, he said to one of them, ''Yo, we're going to Spofford and we're going to f-- up anyone that gets in our way.''

Spofford is the city's juvenile detention center.

Reynolds also described Santana's demeanor while he was being questioned. ''He wasn't crying or particularly upset,'' the officer said. ''He was carrying on a casual conversation with the others.''

Reynolds said repeated attempts were made to contact relatives of Santana so he could be released from police custody, but none could be found until after 4 a.m. the next day.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - Under new rules, Medicare will help pay for Pap smear cervical cancer screenings once every three years or more often for high-risk patients, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said Monday.

''Medicare coverage of Pap smear screenings is intended to increase access to this effective method for detecting cervical cancer at a stage when it is more easily treatable,'' Sullivan said.

About 2.9 million Medicare claims for Pap smears are expected to be filed in 1990 under the new Medicare rules effective July 1, officials said, and another 4.1 million in 1991. Medicare will cover Pap smears taken once every three years or more often if the patient is at high risk of developing cervical cancer. An upcoming regulation will define high risk based on factors such as personal medical history.

''Elderly women are less likely to be screened than younger women, a situation that must be corrected if we are to reduce the incidence of invasive cervical cancer in those 65 and older,'' said Gail Wilensky, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, which administers the Medicare program.

Pap smear screenings will cost Medicare about $15 million in fiscal year 1990 and another $30 million in fiscal year 1991, Wilensky said.

Medicare previously paid for diagnostic Pap smears only if the patient was being treated for an existing gynecological cancer or other disorder, or showed signs of some abnormality. In 1988, Medicare paid for nearly 1 million diagnostic Pap smears at a cost of about $7.4 million.

For beneficiaries enrolled in the Part B Supplementary Medical Insurance Program, Medicare pays 80 percent of the approved charge, after the beneficiary meets an annual deductible.

The American Cancer Society estimates there will be 13,500 new cases of invasive cervical cancer in 1990 and 6,000 deaths. Among these, 3,700 cases and 2,500 deaths will occur among women 65 and older.

Over the past 15 years, the rate of invasive cervical cancer among women age 65 and older has been dropping at an estimated annual rate of about 4 percent, due largely to the increased use of Pap smears, according to the National Cancer Institute.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - President Bush's veto of the family leave bill earned plaudits Monday from Health Secretary Louis Sullivan but scorn from TV producer Gary David Goldberg, who urged politicians to face reality.

The comments came during a hearing before the National Commission on Children, which was created by Congress to explore how America's youngsters develop values.

The Family and Medical Leave Act, vetoed by Bush last Friday, would require employers with more than 50 workers to offer three months of unpaid leave to care for a newborn, adopted child or a sick relative.

''What the president was saying is that this is a laudable goal,'' Sullivan said. ''But this is not the best way to achieve this because (of) the unintended consequences of this in terms of our economic competitiveness and viability.''

In his veto message, Bush said businesses should be able to negotiate benefits with workers, not have them ordered by the federal government. Congress is expected to try to enact the family leave bill over Bush's objection, but the president has not lost a veto override vote since taking office.

Noting Bush ''did express his regrets'' about the veto, Sullivan said the subject is ''certainly not a dead issue for the administration.''

Sullivan explained after the meeting that he meant businesses should be encouraged, but not forced, to offer parental or medical leave.

Producer Goldberg, whose award-winning Family Ties televison show portrayed a family of liberal parents with a politically conservative son, criticized the veto as detrimental to family values.

''The veto is much more of an offensive act than anything 2 Live Crew could ever dream of,'' he told the commission, referring to the controversial rap music group. ''That message is very clear and very precise - business counts more than family,'' he told the commission.

A Florida judge banned music by 2 Live Crew, deeming it obscene.

During the hearing, Sullivan and others discussed the ideal of a two-parent family in helping to shape children's values.

Goldberg said that is the ideal - and he acknowledged that Family Ties opened up the world of the nuclear family to many children with one parent at home - but it is does not represent all American families.

''You can have Mister Rogers, you can have Michael Jordan, you can have Bill Cosby on television 24 hours a day, but if there's no one here in Washington to acknowledge and confront the changing face of the American family and its impact, we will be whistling in the wind,'' Goldberg said. ''That's what we do for a living, but we'd like a little help from Washington.''

He added: ''We have to deal with reality. We can't keep punishing families for not being the Nelsons, the Keatons or the Andersons'' - the families on the TV shows Ozzie and Harriet, Family Ties and Father Knows Best.

Sullivan said the best role models for children are those who ''celebrate self-discipline and family commitment, rather than self-indulgence and short-term gratification.''

He was asked after the meeting about the consequences for children of the drug and perjury trial of Washington Mayor Marion Barry.

''I think all of us are saddened by the spectacle, that this clearly does not help our young people as they see our high officials who are involved in activities that have been depicted in the trial,'' Sullivan said, adding there are many other black and Hispanic role models for children.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - Under the terms of its recently negotiated merger agreement with MGM/UA Communications Co., Pathe Communications Corp. will increase by $150 million the deposit guaranteeing the conclusion of the deal, according to a copy of the agreement released Monday at the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The merger agreement, signed June 28 by Pathe and MGM/UA, also prevents Pathe from greatly leveraging the newly merged company in order to raise the $1.26 billion it has promised to pay MGM/UA shareholders for their stock.

The payment and covenants promised in the agreement will likely be crucial to obtaining shareholder approval for the merger, given Pathe's recent troubles in raising financing for the deal.

Approximately $650 million was supposed to come from Time Warner Inc., a partner that Pathe dropped last week because of the onerous restrictions Time Warner had tied to the financing.

Craig Parsons, a Pathe spokesman, declined to disclose how Pathe would raise the $150 million promised to MGM/UA. He also did not know whether Pathe had already secured the funds.

Parsons did note that Pathe used working capital and cash infusions from European affiliates to raise the initial $200 million deposit, which it placed in an escrow account for MGM at the Security Pacific National Bank.

Under the new merger agreement, Pathe will deposit $53 million in the escrow account by July 16. This will be followed by two more $50 million payments, one on August 21 and one on September 20.

In the meantime, Pathe must decide on the merger's structure by October 23 when it will have to present the plan at MGMN/UA's annual meeting for a shareholder vote.

In order to sway that vote, Pathe in the new merger agreement also agreed to limitations on its ability to fashion a highly leveraged deal. The agreement dictates that the value of the new company's property must be higher than the total amount of its liabilities.

Further, the fair saleable value of the merger's assets must be higher than the amount that would be required to pay the entity's liability on its existing debts as they mature.

EAST BERLIN (JULY 2) UPI - After a weekend of celebration and lines outside banks, East Germans started cautiously spending their newly acquired deutsche marks Monday as investors showed confidence in the unified German currency.

Many stood in awe as they watched displays of western goods that for the first time filled shelves of previously ill-stocked stores. Some said it was like Christmas.

Although shoppers crowded the stores, there was no evidence of a massive shopping spree that some economic analysts had feared could affect the stability of the deutsche mark, which became the all-German currency Sunday.

Banks also registered a steady flow of visitors, with many East Germans seeking advice on how to invest their D-marks. Ruediger Wrede, who manages the Deutsche Bank at East Berlin's Alexander Platz, said most customers had expressed interest in conservative investments.

The downtown square had been the scene of huge celebrations at midnight Sunday, when German economic union took effect. The strong D-mark replaced the virtually worthless ost mark and inner German border controls were practically abolished. A few hours later tens of thousands of East Germans jostled through lines to withdraw D-marks from accounts they had opened in the past weeks.

An official of the Bundesbank, the powerful West German central bank, said 3.7 billion marks, or $2.3 billion, had been paid out since Sunday morning. He said East Germans had withdrawn vouchers for a total of 4.5 billion marks, which will be paid out by the end of the week.

Depending on their age, East Germans can change the equivalent of $1,250, $2,500 or $3,750 at a one-to-one rate, which is also used to convert salaries and wages. Most other transactions are at a rate of two to one.

The mark fared well on domestic and international markets, facing its first tests since the merger of the two German economies. In Frankfurt currency trading, the dollar eased early on but regained to finish even with Friday's close of 1.6560.

At first, the trading was dominated by domestic activity, but later in the day Japanese investors led foreigners in joining the nervous stock market activity.

The DAX German Stock Index shot up by 33 points to 1,879.90 marks, with Siemens shares gaining almost 20 marks and Volkswagen 17 marks. Traders said they were reassured by reports that East Germans were spending their newly acquired hard currency cautiously.

Analysts had earlier expressed fears that monetary stability would be at risk if East Germans went on a huge shopping spree. "The time of insecurity is over. The baby is born and has been joyfully greeted. Now it will grow," a monetary expert said in Frankfurt.

"It's a completely new experience for us," said 49-year-old Dorothea Ramroth, an East Berlin mother of two after she paid 40 D-marks, or $25, for western groceries at a store in East Berlin's Lichtenberg district. "I'm somewhat familiar with some of the things I have just bought but only from seing them advertised on West German television," she said.

For East Germans, the introduction of the D-mark has meant a hike in the price of many consumer goods. But it also meant the availability of many items that were virtually impossible to come by in the past - such as the luxury automobiles displayed at an East Berlin square.

"We will want to sell more East German-made articles, but they will have to be of more competitive quality," said Vera Lehman, sales manager of East Berlin's huge Zentrum department store.

Experts believe many East German firms, previously run and funded by the state will collapse now that East Germany has a competitive market economy. As many as two million people may lose their jobs in the short term, but several Frankfurt bankers have said they are optimistic that a second German economic miracle will be achieved within five years.

Leading politicians in East and West Germany welcomed the economic union, a decisive step toward full German unification. East German Finance Minister Walter Romberg called it "a very important step for economic reconstruction in Eastern Europe."

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JULY 2) UPI - A reported U.S. proposal to change NATO nuclear policy from that of ''flexible response'' to a Soviet-led invasion of Western Europe to one of ''last resort'', was viewed by strategists Monday as a modest shift that carried more emotionalal than military impact.

'''Last resort' is not really such a bold step because we've always understood that's when nuclear weapons would be used,'' said Simon Lunn, deputy secretary general of the North Atlantic Assembly, NATO's parliamentary arm.

''But such language would be a very important shift, because in the public's mind - in NATO countries and the Soviet Union - 'flexible response' has always meant an early willingness to use nuclear weapons,'' he said.

Under the policy of ''flexible response,'' the North Atlantic Treaty Organization could use battlefield nuclear weapons against Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces if they invaded Western Europe with conventional weapons.

NATO never has stated whether it would be the first to use nuclear weapons to repel an invasion, arguing the ambiguity would keep the Soviets guessing and deter a strike across the East-West frontier.

A twin doctrine, ''forward defense,'' calls for countering a Warsaw Pact offensive at NATO's eastern border in West Germany.

The Bush administration's policy shift was stated in a letter from Bush to other heads of NATO member states in advance of their summit meeting in London, according to reports in The New York Times and the Washington Post.

''NATO's policy of 'first use' was really a policy of early first use,'' said Andrew Duncan of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London.

The alliance is not yet ready to abandon the ''first use'' doctrine, however, because ''we don't want to make Europe safe for conventional wars '' says NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner.

Changing the policy from ''flexible response'' to ''last resort'' retains the first-use flexibility but ''repackages'' it in defensive language less threatening to the Soviets, a NATO diplomat said.

'''Last resort' can mean anything to anyone, but the term de-emphasizes NATO's military side,'' he said.

The alliance seeks to present itself as a political, rather than military, grouping in efforts to make NATO membership for a united Germany more acceptable to the Soviets.

Bush reportedly also proposed removing 1,400 nuclear artillery shells from Western Europe, which is viewed by most defense strategists as a predictable step.

The shells, with a range of 18 miles, are obsolete because they would land on now-friendly East Germany. In May, Bush scrapped plans to modernize the artillery and aging Lance short-range missiles.

NANTES, FRANCE (JULY 2) UPI - Moreno Aregntin of Italy won the third stage of the Tour de France Monday, a leg of cycling's showcase race that had to be rerouted and restarted when protesting sheep farmers blocked a road.

Aregntin took advantage of the confusion after a crash to steal away from the pack to win the stage in a breakaway, casually donning a pair of sunglasses at his solo finish.

Canada's Steve Bauer retained an eight-second overall lead over Frans Maassen of Holland. A two-second bonus was awarded to the Dutch rider in a sprint section.

Argentin, the 1986 world road racing champion competing in his first Tour de France, covered the 144 miles between Poitiers and Nantes in 5 hours, 46 minutes, 13 seconds.

Christophe Lavainne of France was second, trailing by 2 minutes, 29 seconds. He raised his arms in victory, thinking he had won the stage.

''I didn't see him,'' Lavainne said. ''It was right after several riders had crashed and there was a lot of confusion.''

Argentin said he believed the others had seen him make his move during a rainstorm some 27 miles from the finish.

''I was just trying to stay ahead,'' he said. ''I wasn't thinking about winning until the last 15 or 20 kilometers.''

The Italian fell while crossing a village, but was able to get up and hold his lead. The hard rain led to several falls and added to the overall confusion.

The race had to be rerouted after sheep farmers, in a protest over their economic plight, blocked a road near Bressuire in western France by cutting trees and placing tractors, liquid manure and flaming haystacks on the road.

Organizers then arranged an impromptu detour and gave a second start to the stage at Bressuire, lengthening the course by several miles. The riders were grouped in a pack at the time the race was halted, so no adjustments had to be made for the interruption.

The stage featured only moderate climbs over rolling plains in the farming region.

Argentin jumped into fifth place overall, 8 minutes, 23 seconds behind Bauer. Otherwise, with the vast majority of riders finishing in the pack, the standings were relatively unchanged.

Among the favorites, Mexican Raul Alcala remained 9:47 off Bauer's pace, with Frenchman Laurent Fignon 10:28 behind and American Greg LeMond at 10:33.

Bauer called Monday a ''difficult day,'' adding, ''I was nervous the whole time, but I'm satisfied to keep the yellow jersey another day. I know I can eaily lose it.''

On Tuesday, riders head north in another relatively flat stage, 126 miles from Nantes to Mont St. Michel, the renowned Breton fortified medieval village cut off from the mainland by the tides.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (JULY 2) UPI - With the advance of flames arrested, firefighters battling a devastating wildfire Monday turned to stamping out hot spots but were braced for a return of high temperatures and winds.

Firefighters had hoped to put out the arson-set blaze Monday, but roughly 700 of them remained on the lines as the weather forecast forced officials to push back their expectation of total control to 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Aided by cool, moist ocean breezes over the weekend, firefighters were able to surround the 4,900-acre fire by dawn.

However, concerns of flare-ups grew with predictions of temperatures in the mid- to high-80s, winds of 20 mph to 30 mph and humidity at 20 percent to 30 percent.

''They're always dependent on the weather,'' said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Maeton Freel. ''If it (the weather) had held, everything would have gone as planned. It'll just be slower now because of the change.''

The conflagration, the worst to hit California in 30 years, consumed 487 buildings, including 430 homes and 15 businesses. Officials said the latest estimate put losses at $500 million.

One woman trying to run from a fireball that engulfed her house was killed. A $120,000 reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest of the arsonist.

The fire was set sometime Wednesday afternoon during a Western heat wave that fueled a dozen other fires elsewhere in California, Arizona, Texas and Colorado. Seven other people, all firefighters, died.

Arson was also suspected in most of the California fires, including blazes that destroyed 60 homes in Glendale, 14 homes in the Carbon Canyon area of Orange County and hundreds of acres of brush in eastern Los Angeles County and San Bernardino County.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency and the California Office of Emergency Services planned to open two disaster aid application offices Tuesday for those who suffered uninsured losses in the Santa Barbara and Los Angeles-area fires.

Numerous wildfires, meanwhile were still burning Monday in southern Arizona and western Colorado.

Most of the Santa Barbara fire's still-active areas were on the northeast and west flanks, on either side of the residential community of Painted Cave. However, no more homes were in danger Monday.

Fire crew used infrared cameras mounted on helicopters to search for any remaining hot spots, then dropped fire retardant on them before sending hand crews to the scene.

Environmental rehabilitation teams were also surveying the area to determine area where tree reseeding, channel clearing or sediment basins would be needed to prepare for slides feared when winter rains begin, Freel said.

Sheriff's deputies were dealing with the curious who flocked to the burned-out neighborhoods, citing more than 50 people on a misdemeanor charge of ''sightseeing at the scene of an emergency.''

Deputy Tim Gracey said that, while there was no evidence of looting, ''the last thing I'd want after losing a $500,000 home would be to drive up and find some yo-yo standing in the rubble.''

''But to be honest,'' Gracey said, ''there's not a whole lot left up there to take. The only things left standing in many places are chimneys. Everything inside was pretty well incinerated.''

Elsewhere in California, a 4,300-acre arson brushfire in eastern San Diego County was fully contained Sunday night. Six structures were destroyed during the four-day fire, including two homes, a Boy Scout camp building and a Navy Seabee training facility.

Forestry officials said the cost of fighting the fire will likely exceed $3.2 million. The fire should be fully extinguished by Wednesday.

In Arizona, the so-called Dude fire in the Tonto National Forest near Payson was contained Sunday night after burning 28,400 acres of tall pines and claiming the lives of six firefighters. Officials put the firefighting-cost at $4.9 million, including 65 homes, and allowed the last of about 1,000 evacuated to returned to their houses.

Control was predicted for July 10, mostly because of predicted thunderstorms and winds that could fan the remaining flames, said Erin Connelly, spokeswoman for the Tonto National Forest.

Firefighters from the Tonto blaze, however, were being sent to a lightning fire that started Saturday on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation near Whiteriver in eastern Arizona. It had grown rapidly to 2,000 acres and was still burning.

Another 10,000-acre fire on rangelands in the Whetstone mountains was contained Sunday night.

In western Colorado, firefighters Sunday contained the 4,100-acre Horsefly Creek fire near Norwood and expected to have it controlled Monday night.

Lightning started 10 new fires in Colorado's Western Slope Sunday, including one between Glenwood Springs and Rifle that burned two structures.

The U.S. Forest Service said six other large fires throughout Colorado also have been contained, and were expected to be controlled soon.

In Texas, firefighters Sunday contained the largest wildfire ever on 8,800-foot Guadalupe Peak, the highest mountain in Texas. Teams were dispatched to the area to determine whether the 6,014-acre fire, sparked by lightning, had disturbed the natural habitats of endangered animals, including the black bear and falcon.

DALLAS (JULY 2) UPI - Southland Corp. Monday announced details of its revised plan to sell 75 percent of the company to its Japanese partners, giving bond and preferred stock holders a higher stake in the new company and instituting a one-for-ten reverse stock split.

The details included specific terms for each class of security under the exchange offers announced June 14 to restructure Southland's outstanding public debt and preferred stock.

Southland, which operates the 7-Eleven store chain, will implement the reverse stock split immediately prior to the consummation of the exchange offers.

A reverse split allows a corporation to reduce the number of its shares outstanding. The total number of shares will still have the same market value immediately after the split as before, but each share will be worth more.

In the original plan, which ran into difficulties with the bondholders, Southland proposed to exchange its outstanding preferred stock and about $1.8 billion of debt for mostly zero coupon bonds and a ten percent stake in the new company. The $1.8 billion is part of the $4.9 billion debt incurred by Southland's founding Thompson family when it took the company private in 1987.

In the revised plan, the holders will get an 18.5 percent stake in the new company and also cash interest-bearing securities instead of the zero coupons. The additional 8.5 percent stake would come from existing equity holders whose ownership would correspondingly be reduced from 15 percent to 6.5 percent. That reduction in ownership would mostly affect the Thompson family which currently owns a substantial portion of Southland.

Upon completion of the exchange offers, Southland would sell 75 percent of its common stock for $400 million to its Japanese partners, Ito-Yokado Co. Ltd. and Seven-Eleven Japan Co. Ltd.

"This announcement is consistent with the trend that was developing after the first offer," said Carol Palmer, analyst at Duff & Phelps Inc. in Chicago. "It appears now the plan will be carried out in an orderly fashion because of the improved potential (the Japanese cash infusion) for the survival of the company."

The new plan would give the bondholders some $550 million of debt securities at 12 to 14 percent interest. Specifically, the company would provide:

- holders of $1,000 principal amount of 13.5 percent senior extendable reset notes due 1995 with $450 principal amount of 12 percent senior notes due 1996 and 37 shares of common stock.

- holders of $1,000 principal amount of 15.75 percent senior subordinated notes due 1997 with $300 principal amount of 13 percent first priority senior subordinated notes due 1997 and 24.5 shares of common stock.

- holders of $1,000 principal amount of 16.5 percent senior subordinated discount notes due 1997 with $255 principal amount of 13 percent first priority senior subordinated notes due 1997 and 21 shares of commonstock.

- holders of $1,000 principal amount of 16.75 percent subordinated debentures due 2002 with $200 principal amount of 14 percent second priority senior subordinated notes due 1997 and 16.5 shares of common stock.

- holders of $1,000 principal amount of 18 percent junior subordinated discount debentures due 2007 with $95 principal amount of 14 percent second priority senior subordinated notes due 1997 and eight shares of common stock.

- holders of each share of 15 percent cumulative exchangeable preferred stock, Series One, with one share of common stock.

"Our discussions to date with bondholders and preferred stockholders have been most constructive," said Southland Chief Financial Officer Clark Metthews in a prepared statement.

"While the bondholders' steering committee has not reviewed or approved the revised plan, we expect to begin discussing the terms with them later today and believe that the spirit of our ongoing negotiations will lead to a successful restructuring."

In earlier statements, Southland has said it might be forced to seek relief under the federal bankruptcy code if the restructing plan is not approved.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JULY 2) UPI - An undetermined number of Moslems on a pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca were crushed to death Monday when thousands of people crowded into a tunnel near the Saudi Arabian city, the Middle East News Agency reported.

The news agency quoted a Saudi Interior Ministry source as saying the pilgrims had squeezed into the Moassim tunnel near Mecca. Ambulances rushed to the scene to remove the victims and treat pilgrims who fainted in the crush.

The source did not say how many pilgrims were killed in the incident.

Moslem pilgrims must pass through the Moassim tunnel on their way to Mount Arafat, where the Prophet Mohammed is said to have delivered his last sermon.

MOSCOW (JULY 2) UPI - Muscovites said Monday the country's faith in the Communist Party has fallen so low that its leaders, gathered at the Kremlin for a key conclave, can do little to arrest the decline in confidence.

President Mikhail Gorbachev opened the 28th Communist Party Congress with a ringing call for Soviet communists to battle for power in the country's emerging multi-party system.

But a dozen people interviewed at random on a hot and muggy day in the Soviet capital indicated that communist candidates face an uphill battle in trying to convince voters they deserve to extend the party's seven-decade rule.

''If our (communist) party will give up its power, then maybe we can accomplish something,'' said Vera Nekipelova, 32, out shopping in the city's barren stores with her 7-year-old son, Rodion. ''I don't think I am alone in believing this - it's a general mood now.''

In his official report to the Congress, Gorbachev admitted he has made mistakes, but the 59-year-old Soviet leader said he took on enormous problems when he became the party's general secretary in March 1985.

''People are sick and tired of all this talk,'' said Vladimir Kholopov, 42 an electrical engineer. ''When there will be real steps, then we shall see.''

Romuald Znamirovski, a 62-year-old artist, clutched a beaten vinyl portfolio as he walked through a park on his way home from a nearby subway station.

''You know, lately I've somehow lost interest in all of this,'' he said. ''To be honest, I don't expect anything interesting to come of the Congress. Once again there will be a lot of words bandied about, a lot of demagoguery, again some name-calling, but in essence nothing can be changed because of the system we have.''

Several people said the communists are still clinging to power five months after the Central Committee's decision to abandon monopoly rule and lay the groundwork for a multi-party system.

But Oleg Kudinov, a 49-year-old clerk, said the political landscape is changing rapidly and the tumultuous transformations have left many people bewildered.

''It's very hard for a worker, a farmer, a simple man, to figure out all these (fledgling) parties and movements with all these different platforms '' he said. ''And they're all promising the good life overnight.''

Appliance serviceman Anatoli Petrov, 47, said he had listened to Gorbachev's opening address and came away unimpressed.

''For five years, it's been the same thing over and over,'' Petrov said. ''There's been nothing good.''

All of those interviewed said they were not members of the Communist Party and none showed any interest in joining.

''In my opinion, this congress is just as worthless as the previous ones '' said 67-year-old Galina Sergeeva, walking her dog.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA (JULY 2) UPI - While a heat wave baked much of Alaska, some had their minds on snow and on marathon sled dog treks across the frozen wilderness as 40 mushers raced to sign up for the 1991 Iditarod.

Registration opened over the weekend for next year's 1,150-mile

Anchorage-to-Nome Sled Dog Race, and mushers rushed to be among the first to sign up for the grueling winter marathon across Alaska by dog team.

By Monday, 40 mushers, as sled dog drivers are known, had signed up even though the race start is eight months away and winter seemed just as distant.

While mushers were signing up for Alaska's punishing winter sport, a summer heat wave was melting temperature records in the far north.

In Nome, the Bering Sea coast town where the Iditarod ends, the mercury hit 82 degrees Sunday, surpassing a 54-year-old record.

In Anchorage, where the Iditarod begins, temperatures were in the upper 70s.

Eighty-degree readings were common over the weekend in interior Alaska, where many mushers live and train their teams during the long, bitterly cold winters. Fairbanks hit a record 88 degrees Sunday. McGrath, an Iditarod trail checkpoint, reached 87. Near record heat continued Monday.

But mushers had cold and snow and huskies on their minds. They have an incentive to sign up early for the March 2 race because the first half of the registrants draw for the first half of the starting positions. Times are adjusted so no one is disadvantaged by the staggered start, but the trail is often better at the outset for mushers impatient to race out of town into the wilderness.

The purse for the 1991 Iditarod is $300,000, an increase of $50,000. The money is divided among the top 20 finishers but every musher who reaches the Nome finish line gets $1,000 just for going the distance.

Seven women were among the first 40 sign-ups, including Libby Riddles, first woman to win in 1985, and four-time winner Susan Butcher, who won this year in 11 days, 1 hour, 53 minutes and 23 seconds, a record.

The field of mushers is still predominantly male, but women have won five of the last six Iditarods, spawning a new T-shirt slogan: ''Alaska - Where Women are Women and Men are Butchered and Riddled and Left on the Trail.''

The only man to win in the last six years, Joe Runyan, signed up. Four-time winner Rick Swenson signed up - right after his wife Kathy entered.

''Poodle man'' John Suter, who became famous for hitching up big black poodles along with huskies, put his name down to run again.

Mushers from as far away as New Zealand, France and England signed up. So did adventurers from North Carolina, Illinois and Minnesota. Twelve rookies were among the early registrants.

Iditarod officials expect about 75 entrants by the January registration deadline.

One race veteran who will not compete is Jerry Riley, 54, who has run in a dozen Iditarods and won in 1976. Last month the Iditarod board banned him for life for mistreating dogs.

Next year will be the 19th annual Iditarod, a sport that recalls the 1925 life-and-death race by sled dog teams rushing diphtheria serum to Nome to fight an epidemic. The historic trail goes through the ghost town of Iditarod.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) UPI - Publisher Ralph Ingersoll said Monday he reached an agreement to sell all of his U.S. newspaper interests to financial partner E.M. Warburg, Pincus & Co., while one Ingersoll company owning local newspapers in Ohio and on Long Island, N.Y., failed to meet debt payments.

At the same time, Ingersoll said he will acquire all of the stake held by Warburg, Pincus in the publishing group's European companies. Financial details of the transaction, conducted through the companies' respective subsidiaries, were not disclosed.

"With equal partnership interests in companies on both sides of the Atlantic, Warburg, Pincus and I decided that our future interests would be best served by dividing our jointly owned properties on a geographic basis " Ingersoll said.

The three American newspaper companies now fully owned by Warburg are: Ingersoll Newspapers Inc. or INI, which publishes nine daily and 53 weekly newspapers in the United States; New Haven Acquisition Co., which publishes the New Haven (Conn.) Register; and Community Newspapers Inc., or CNI, which publishes newspapers in Ohio and on Long Island.

As the deal was announced, CNI said it was not making its semiannual interest payments due July 1 on 13-percent senior subordinated reset notes amounting to about $125 million, reflecting the group's long-standing financial problems. But CNI's financial problems have no impact on the INI and New Haven companies, both of which Ingersoll described as "healthy."

The 13-percent notes called for a new interest rate to be reset July 7 for payment in January 1991, but, because the debt payments were not made, the reset process stalled. CNI bondholders have been negotiating to guarantee their investment in the financially troubled company owning local titles in Ohio and Long Island.

"We are pleased to have agreed upon this transaction with Mr. Ingersoll, as it will enable our affiliates to use their resources to improve and expand the operations of INI and New Haven," said Lionel Pincus, chairman of Warburg, Pincus.

Pincus' upbeat statement about expanding operations left out the troubled CNI group. Pincus also failed to include CNI when pointing out that the "Warburg affiliates which will own INI and New Haven have equity capital of more than $3 billion."

The chairman of Warburg, Pincus also expressed hopes that "CNI would be able to work out its financial problems with the holders of its subordinated indebtedness," while declining to indicate whether his firm would play a role in any rescue plan.

Ingersoll said he was now focusing on Europe in view of the "single market" to be created there in 1992. "We are further expanding in Europe," Ingersoll said. "It is a wonderful time to be investing in the European market."

The European company, Ingersoll Publications Ltd., has annual revenues of $178 million, with cash flow of $40 million and bank debt of about $109 million. Ingersoll newspapers in Britain include the Birmingham Post, the Evening Mail, the Sunday Mercury, and the Coventry Evening Telegraph. The group also has a 50 percent interest in three newspapers in Ireland - the Irish Press, the Evening Press and the Sunday Press.

"We are saddened that our long partnership with Ralph has come to an end," Pincus added. "The venture in which we participated started in 1983 and resulted in a large and very high quality group of newspaper properties in the United States and Europe."

Ingersoll Publications Co. launched the St. Louis Sun, Sept. 25, 1989. The newspaper published 213 editions before closing April 25.

DUBLIN, IRELAND (JULY 2) UPI - South African black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela prepared to travel to London Monday, where a political storm awaited over his call for Britain to talk unconditionally with the Irish Republican Army and stop the ''mutual slaughter.''

The deputy president of the African National Congress had to cancel some meetings on the second day of a two-day visit to Ireland because of a cold.

He appeared physically taxed by his gruelling schedule, and was to depart Monday evening aboard a charter flight for a two-day visit to London.

Mandela visited England last April for a rock concert given as a tribute to his role as a civil rights leader during 27 years in prison, but it was anticipated that this trip would be less adulatory.

He will have two hours of talks on Wednesday with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, his main adversary in the ANC's efforts to ensure South Africa remains internationally isolated, primarily through economic sanctions.

Thatcher alone has removed restrictions against Pretoria as a reward for racial reforms by South African President Frederik de Klerk that included releasing Mandela and legalizing the ANC, the nation's leading anti-apartheid force.

But Mandela will also have to confront Thatcher over his Monday comments at a news conference that Britain should begin talks with the IRA because force could not create peace.

''It is not for the involved parties to argue that 'I can't talk to so and so because this is a minority group,'' he said. ''The issue is that differences have arisen. As a result of those differences many people have lost their lives. What is the sense of continuing with that mutual slaughter?''

Mandela said London had set many precedents of entering into dialogue with armed groups, citing as an example its role in arranging negotiations in 1979 between Rhodesia's white-minority government and the southern African nation's two guerrilla groups.

The Irish Times quoted informed sources as saying Prime Minister Charles Haughey, during an hour-long meeting, had asked Mandela not to mention the IRA because the Irish leader believed the black struggle and the war in Northern Ireland were incomparable.

In London, Thatcher's Downing Street office spurned Mandela's suggestion.

''The government's position on that is well-known,'' an official said. ''Britain does not talk to terrorists or their front organizations. Before such negotiations could be considered, they have to renounce the use of force or violence.''

Mandela's comments aroused a storm of criticism across Britain's political spectrum. Anti-IRA feelings have been running high because the radicals last Monday bombed a club frequented by members of the ruling Conservative Party, and have recently targetted soft, indefensible targets as part of their anti-British drive.

''As a friend, I owe it to Mandela to say: Make no mistake. The provisional IRA are a bunch of murderous gangsters. Nothing more. Nothing less,'' said Neil Kinnock, the leader of the main opposition Labor Party. ''They deserve no concession and no quarter.''

''He encourages Gadhafi. He encourages Arafat in the Middle East, and now he is encouraging the IRA,'' said Anthony Beaumont-Dark of the ruling party. ''I am afraid he is either very badly aroused, or frankly very foolish.''

In Dublin, Mandela also reiterated a call made throughout his world tour that sanctions should remain until profound and irreversible changes had been made to dismantle South Africa's apartheid system of racial segregation. At that stage, the ANC would review its stance, he said.

''We are even more concerned than the government about sanctions, because they are destroying our economy,'' he said. ''We don't want them because we are the people who suffer.''

Mandela was driven to the Dail, Ireland's lower house of parliament, through streets lined with thousands of cheering spectators.

His 30-minute-long address was the first by a foreigner who is not a head of state, and it inspired a rousing ovation from legislators, some of whom said they had not heard such a moving orator since President John F. Kennedy.

Mandela thanked Ireland for being one of the first nations to impose sanctions against South Africa, and compared the fight for black rights to Ireland's struggle to gain independence from Britain.

''Under apartheid, millions know nothing but the corrosive aches of hunger '' he said, and quoted from the Irish constitution in saying he hoped that South Africa would one day be a place where ''all the children are cherished equally.''

Mandela arrived in Ireland after an eight-city U.S. tour. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Sunday Mandela had called President Bush to thank him for the tremendous reception he had received, and promised to return in October to visit American Indians.

MONROVIA, Liberia (JULY 2) UPI - Rebels equipped with artillery and rockets attacked Monrovia in a two-pronged offensive Monday, cutting all major land routes out of the Liberian capital and apparently forcing President Samuel Doe to retreat for a last stand inside his heavily fortified residence.

With only an estimated 1,000 government troops left in the city, many indicating they would capitulate, a Western diplomat predicted that rebel leader Charles Taylor was close to victory in the rebellion he began six months ago.

People streamed out of the center of the shuttered and barred city as the guerrillas closed in. Heavy automatic gunfire and artillery fire erupted in the eastern and western suburbs.

Doe, in an apparent last-ditch move of desparation, repeated his offer on state-run radio to form a national unity government, which would include the rebel National Patriotic Front and all political parties. Taylor already has rejected the proposal.

All international telephone and telex lines were cut Monday evening, and flights from the Spriggs Payne Airfield were cancelled because crews could not reach the small inner-city facility.

Soldiers, some drunk, commandeered cars and extorted money from people, and witnesses reported rebel advances on both fronts.

Residents of the eastern suburb of Paynesville, 10 miles by road from the city center, reported that more than 100 rebel NPF fighters marched down the main road from Mount Barclay village past a Coca-Cola factory.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in Washington that the United States would help Doe leave Liberia if he asked for such assistance.

Asked whether the United States was considering evacuating all its citizens in Liberia, Tutwiler said, ''The United States is considering all options.'' She said 70 U.S. officials and fewer than 800 other citizens remain in Liberia.

Automatic rifle, artillery and rocket fire echoed through the heavily populated suburb of Paynesville for much of Sunday night and Monday morning. Smoke poured from the 72nd army reconnaisance base situated in the area.

Rebels were reported within a few hundred yards of the main state radio transmitter, which still was broadcasting music interspersed with repeated broadcasts of the government offer.

The station went off the air intermittently, but said it was suffering fuel shortages for a generator being used since Monrovia's power supply was cut off Friday. Water supplies were cut two days earlier.

Five soldiers near the Swiss, West German and Moroccan embassies just five miles from the town center prevented a foreign reporter from going further late Monday, saying rebels were in the area.

Other approaches to Monrovia were defended only by a few soldiers at roadblocks.

The main resistance was expected at Scheiffelin army base, 12 miles east of Monrovia, but rebels apparently bypassed the camp or had taken it in the advance on Paynesville.

''There are no defenses on the outskirts of the city, and once (the rebels) get to the executive mansion they will find a bit of resistance,'' a Western diplomat said. ''Then it will all be over.''

Doe was believed holed up in his fortified Isreali-built mansion facing the Atlantic ocean with 500 troops of his elite presidential guard. Vice President Harry Moniba and three other senior legislators held consultations with officials at the U.S. Embassy.

About 500 other government troops were believed to be in the capital.

Thousands of ordinary Liberians, apparently fearing their own army more than the guerrillas, trudged through the tropical rain back to homes that lay in rebel-held territory.

Residents reached by telephone said rebels also moved in from the northwest of this city of 500,000 people, cutting the road west to Sierra Leone at the Saint Paul River Bridge.

''It's terrible, terrible, there are so many (rebels),'' one resident said by telephone. ''They are so armed and coming with vengeance written on their faces.''

Most of Doe's Cabinet and senior administration officials already have fled, among them Commerce Minister John Wesseh McClain, Doe's speechwriter and a nephew of President William R. Tolbert, who was assassinated when Doe seized power in a 1980 coup.

Liberian and diplomatic sources said Army Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Henry Dubar resigned over the weekend.

Aviation sources said Defense Minister Boimah Barclay took the last plane out on Sunday to Guinea.

Taylor, a former civil servant who fled the United States to escape embezzlement charges, has said he personally wishes to kill Doe, who seized power in a coup 10 years ago and who has been charged with many civil rights abuses.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) UPI - The dollar skidded in New York trading Monday on the smooth implementation of German monetary unification combined with investors' belief that U.S. short-term interest rates are headed south.

Market confidence in the West German mark rose as it went into circulation in East German on the weekend without problems, analysts said. East Germans withdrew just 4.5 billion deutsche marks cash from new accounts, less than a projected six billion. This comforted analysts who had feared that an Eastern shopping binge could uncork the inflation genie.

"I think essentially the reaction has been that the unification process did go extremely smoothly," said Barclays Bank trader David Jaques. "This has generally been a strengthening aspect for the mark."

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.65 West German marks, off 0.90 pfennigs from 1.6605 marks at Friday's close, and at 150.75 Japanese yen, down 1.25 yen from 152.15 last week.

Jaques said the deutsche mark also was boosted by comments from Bundesbank President Karl Otto Poehl, saying the West German - now all-German - central bank was committed to a tight monetary policy.

Conviction strengthened among foreign exchange market participants that U.S. interest rates will soon be declining, while Germany's will remain firm and Japanese rates are thought likely to rise.

Economist Kevin Logan of Swiss Bank Corp. said investors are acting ahead of an expected Bank of Japan tightening. "It's not just the policy - it's what people anticipate the policy to be," he said. Lower U.S. interest rates weaken the dollar because global investment capital tends to seek higher returns in other currencies.

Other dollar rates: 1.3950 Swiss francs, off from 1.4145; 5.54 French francs, down from 5.58; and 1,211.60 Italian lire, off from 1,219. The pound rose to $1.7740 from $1.7485 - a gain of more than two cents. In Europe, the dollar weakened on speculation U.S. interest rates will ease.

Sterling jumped almost two cents, to $1.7630 against $1.7450 Friday. Dealers said the pound was boosted by high U.K. interest rates and persistent talk of Britain fully entering the European Monetary System by year's end.

The first day of trading after German monetary union went smoothly with the dollar falling to 1.6560 deutsche marks against 1.6650. It also declined in Zurich, to 1.4027 Swiss francs compared with 1.4170.

Klaus Elsner of Deutsche Bank said initial monetary unification results eased fears that inflation could be a problem.

Kit Juckes of Warburg Securities said it was a good day for the deutsche mark but meaningful data wouldn't be available until August.

The U.S. unit moved lower in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to 5.5570 francs against 5.61, 34.03 Belgian francs compared with 34.25, and 1,217 lire against 1,266.0 at the closing late last week.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar dropped sharply to end at 151.40 yen, down 1.45 yen from Friday's close of 152.85.

Dollar-yen trading was dominated by speculation on the direction of interest rates in the two countries, analysts said.

In Zurich, gold rose to $357.50 an ounce compared with $352.50 Friday. It was also higher in London at $357.50 an ounce against $352.75. Dealers said buying of the metal was prompted by the dollar's weakness.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $358.40 an ounce, up from $351.50 Friday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $358.80 an ounce, also up from $352.10 last week.

Silver closed higher in Zurich at $4.95 an ounce compared with $4.85 Friday, and rose as well in London to $4.95 an ounce against $4.84.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.96 an ounce, up from $4.845. The Comex settled silver at $4.935 an ounce, up from $4.813.

(JULY 2) UPI - Demonstrations by young women in Srinagar, India, were broken up today when para-military police charged into the crowds protesting alleged atrocities by Indian security forces in Kashmir. About 16 demonstrators were injured by the police, who used tear gas and clubs against the women. There have been several widely reported cases of human rights abuses by Indian security forces since January.

Iran has canceled celebrations for a major Islamic festival today as a mark of respect for the 50-thousand people killed in last month's earthquake. But officials say there will be a quiet observance tomorrow for the second anniversary of a U-S downing of an Iranian passenger plane.

SAN FRANCISCO (JULY 2) UPI - McDonnell Douglas Corp. sold its computer and hardware distribution division for $65 million, in the latest of a series of computer business divestments.

The aerospace giant based in St. Louis sold McDonnell Douglas Field Services Co. to a group that included management and the Menke Titolo Capital Corp., a buyout group based in San Francisco, spokesmen said Sunday. The former division, which has annual sales of more than $100 million, was renamed Novadyne Computer Systems Co. The deal closed Friday.

The sale is part of McDonnell Douglas' strategy to divest of computer businesses and concentrate on its core aerospace business. Last November, the company sold its Tymnet data communications network to British Telecom for $325 million.

Menke Titolo, an investment banking firm that specializes in employee stock ownership and management buyouts, was the lead equity investor. Additonal capital came from the San Francisco investment firms Lombard Investments and MBR Capital.

MEXICO CITY (JULY 2) UPI - Mexico's petrochemical industry would not be capable of successfully competing with the United States under a free trade agreement, government officials said in a report published Monday.

According to a report cited in Monday's edition of the business daily El Financiero, officials at the ministries of Commerce and of Energy, Mines and State-Owned Industry said free trade would emphasize the comparative weaknesses of the Mexican petrochemical industry. "It will not make us better producers, nor more competitive, nor improve our sales," the report said.

Part of studies being carried out previous to negotiations on a U.S.-Mexican free trade pact, the report said such an agreement would underscore relative weaknesses and comparative advantages.

Faced with a highly-developed U.S. petrochemical sector, the Mexican industry would be at a disadvantage, the report said. The officials listed a number of specific risks:

- Increased competition for the Mexican domestic market, which would result in lower profit margins and less investment for future growth.
- The need to accelerate the pace of technological changes and adjustments in the production process.
- The need to make sudden corrections in certain industry-wide structural deficiencies affecting the companies' competitiveness.

The report said free trade in the petrochemical sector could make the Mexican industry into "simple suppliers of raw materials."

Describing the differences between the two nations' industries, it said the U.S. produces petroleum-based chemicals at 12,000 plants, employing more than one million workers. The U.S. industry runs at a substantial international trade surplus - more than $10 billion in 1988, the report added. The Mexican industry, by contrast, operates 450 plants, employing about 125,000 workers. In 1988, the industry ran at a $959 million trade deficit.

The U.S. surplus, while substantial, has declined since the late 1970s, the report said, adding a free-trade pact with Mexico would help U.S. petrochemical producers "confront their true global competitors, the European producers."

Peru's monetary unit, the inti, has been steadily dropping in value in the weeks leading up to President-elect Alberto Fujimori's inauguration, set to take place July 28. Fujimori's economic program is as yet unknown.

On the black market, the inti traded Monday at 118,000 intis to $1, while the official rate was 36,468 intis to $1.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - An increase in median family income along with declines in interest rates and the median home price improved housing affordability in May, a real estate trade group said Monday.

The National Association of Realtors' Housing Affordability Index, which measures the ability of a typical family to purchase a median-priced resale home, was 105.6 in May, up from 104.3 in April.

The latest reading of the index indicated a family earning the national median income of $34,142 in May had 105.6 percent of the income needed to qualify for conventional financing covering 80 percent of a home priced at $94,800, the median existing-home price for the month.

Half the existing single-family homes sold in May for more than the median price and half sold for less. Similarly, half the families in the United States earn more than the median income and half earn less.

In May, the median home price dropped to $94,800 from $95,600 in April, while median family income rose to $34,142 from $34,032 and the income needed to qualify for a loan on the typical home dropped to $32,324 from $32,624.

The interest rate used to compute the trade association's index is a composite of closing rates offered for both fixed-rate and adjustable-rate mortgages on existing homes, as reported by the Federal Housing Finance Board. The rate dropped to 10.14 percent in May from 10.15 percent in April, according to the realtors.

PASADENA, CALIF (JULY 2) UPI - Unocal Corp. Monday unveiled a two-year smog-cutting program offering free smog checks and engine adjustments to about 1 million pre-1975 cars in the Los Angeles area.

The oil company estimated that its Smog Fighter program, which has a price tag of $4 million to $5 million, could remove as much as 15 million pounds of pollutants a year from the region, which has some of the nation's dirtiest air.

''Although this is a very simple demonstration program, we think it's a very cost-effective way to improve air quality,'' said Roger C. Beach, president of Unocal's refining and marketing unit.

Unocal will offer the smog checks and low-emission adjustments, which would normally cost $40 or $50, through 158 dealers in the Los Angeles area.

''Smog Fighter offers two benefits to participating motorists: The satisfaction of making a contribution to cleaner air quality in the Los Angeles Basin and savings of up to $100 a year through improved gasoline mileage,'' Beach said.

Vehicles subject to a state-mandated smog test during the calendar year will not be eligible. California requires vehicles to pass the emissions tests every two years.

Beach said the adjustments could cut hydrocarbon emissions from idling engines by 60 percent and carbon monoxide emissions by 40 percent. The service consists of adjustments to timing, idle speed and air-fuel mixture.

Should a vehicle need more extensive repairs, the owner will decide whether to bear the expense.

Unocal set the cut-off date of 1974 because most cars built in that year and earlier are not equipped with catalyctic converters, a smog-reducing device.

Beach said the company has not made any projections on the potential response to the program, the last of three air-quality improvement programs Unocal first announced in late April.

Unocal said it is buying 7,000 high-polluting pre-1971 cars for conversion to scrap. The cars cost the company $700 each.

Beach said the purchased cars have been emitting an average of 60 times more pollutants than a 1990 car.

Unocal has also started operating a fleet of six vans to aid stranded motorists from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays on Los Angeles freeways.

The vans have been aiding more than 500 stranded motorists per week, Beach said. He noted that each minute of a traffic jam on a Los Angeles freeway creates an additional 1,400 pounds of pollutants.

CLEVELAND (JULY 2) UPI - Jury selection began Monday in the trial of Rite Aid Corp. and its president, charged with bribing a member of the Ohio Board of Pharmacy to get him to resign.

A pool of 28 potential jurors was chosen before Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Lillian Green. Lawyers said they expected the selection process to continue through Tuesday, with opening statements to come Thursday.

Martin Grass, president of the nation's largest drugstore chain, was arrested at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport hotel April 27, 1989, after giving a $33,000 check to Pharmacy Board member Melvin Wilczynski of Toledo, Ohio. The meeting was videotaped by sheriff's deputies. Rite Aid, headquartered in Shiremanstown, Pa., has 2,300 stores in 22 states, including 350 in Ohio.

Wilczynski worked for a Peoples Drug Stores Inc. subsidiary, Lane Drug Co., which Rite Aid had acquired. Peoples Drug Stores is based in Alexandria, Va. Rite Aid has said the payment was for a contract buyout and that even if the payment was made to entice Wilczynski to step down from the board, it would not be in violation of Ohio law.

One pretrial motion said the Ohio bribery statute deals only with payments offered to influence a decision by a public official, not whether a public official resigns.

A prosecution motion said Grass at one point told Wilczynski that someone in Gov. Richard Celeste's office promised Rite Aid it would get to choose Wilczynski's successor. Celeste has denied that allegation.

Shortly after Grass's arrest, Rite Aid was fined $50,000 by the board for several violations, including how long the company had to dispose of out-of-date drugs and how drugs are secured within its stores.

The bribery charge carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $5,000 fine, and the possesion of criminal tools charge carries a panalty of 18 months in prsion and a fine of $2,500. The criminal tool in question is the company jet Grass used to fly from Harrisburg, Pa., to Cleveland for the meeting with Wilczynski.

(JULY 2) UPI - Liberian rebels are closing in on President Samuel Doe. The rebels staged a two-prong offensive on the capital of Monrovia today, driving the president and his loyalist troops into his heavily fortified resi- dence to make a last stand. Only about one-thousand troops remain loyal to Doe, and most of those are said to be willing to surrender. A stunned Imelda Marcos got what she called ''the best birthday present I ever had'' today when she was acquitted on all charges in her U-S racketeering trial in New York City. The 61- year-old former Philippine first lady marked the event by going directly to New York's St. Patrick's Cathedral, where she crawled on her knees down the center aisle and prostrated herself before the altar. A one-day strike in South Africa today led to the very violence it was intended to prevent. The strike was called by the African National Congress to force authorities to act on black-on- black violence in Natal province. But the police and army reportedly could NOT stop black groups in Natal from fighting, and at least five people were killed. An eight-year-old boy was also shot and killed by a police officer in an UNrelated in- cident. President Gorbachev took the offensive from the opening gavel today at the 28th Communist Party Congress in Moscow. He dared the Commu- nists to show their willingness to fight for political power in a multi-party state. Hard-line communists are said to be rallying their forces for a challenge to Gorbachev and his reform agenda.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - New York City is virtually certain to be the site of the 1992 Democratic National Convention and party officials said Monday only unforseen problems will bar the Big Apple from playing host to its fifth such gathering.

Ron Brown, the Democrats' national chairman, could make the announcement as early as the end of this week.

''There's only a one out of 10 chance that something could go sour'' and derail New York's bid for the convention, said a top party aide.

The party recently narrowed the list of possible convention sites to New York and New Orleans and there have been recent signs that passage of a tough anti-abortion law by the Louisiana Legislature hurt New Orleans' chances of winning the event.

However, the abortion legislation, which Democratic Gov. Buddy Roemer has promised to veto, is apparantly not the only factor.

For weeks, it has been believed that Brown - who was raised in New York and is a friend of Mayor David Dinkins - favored New York as the site to nominate the party's next presidential candidate.

New York has hosted Democratic conventions four times, including the 1976 and 1980 gatherings. It has never hosted a Republican convention.

New Orleans hosted its first national political convention in 1988 when Republcians met there to nominate George Bush.

Cities generally compete heavily for the conventions because of the business and national media attention they generate.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (JULY 2) UPI - Leaders of a 22-day-old sit-in strike at Sofia's main university vowed Monday to continue the protest despite a threat by farmers to besiege the capital with tractors if the students do not call off the action.

Officials of the opposition Union of Democratic Forces, meanwhile, expressed optimism for a quick settlement of the strike, which was prompted by student outrage over the victory of the former communist party in last month's elections.

The strike, which started June 11, has spread to a number of other universities around the country.

Atanas Kirchev, a spokesman for the student strike committee at Sofia University, told a news conference the protest would continue ''until we get some results.''

Kirchev said the students were demanding a full accounting of alleged irregularities during the elections June 10 and 17 as well as the resignation of the director of state-run television.

The students also are insisting that President Peter Mladenov explain a remark he made Dec. 14 during an anti-government demonstration, in which he allegedly said, ''The best thing to do is let the tanks come.'' The incident was videotaped by award-winning Bulgarian filmmaker Evgeni Mihailov.

A team of prosecutors has been appointed to examine the videotape to determine its authenticity. Internal Affairs Minister Col. Gen. Atanas Smerdjiev, who was army chief in December, said no order for military intervention was given.

The students' strike has forced cancellation of classes at Sofia University and other schools for more than three weeks, prompting warnings from the Interior Ministry as well as private groups.

Last Saturday, the Union of Cooperative Farms threatened to invade the capital with tractors and combines, blocking the main streets, if the strike is not halted by Thursday.

The farmers' group accused the students of being ''parasites,'' saying they should help with the harvest if they really wanted to improve conditions in the country.

UDF President Zhelyu Zhelev, who also attended the students' news conference, said the demand for an independent investigation into election irregularities had already been met, and he believed the other issues could be settled shortly. ''We think all the demands can be fulfilled,'' he said.

The opposition group, which lost the elections to the Bulgarian Socialist Party, or former communist party, has denied responsibility for organizing the sit-in strikes but says it supports the students' demands.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - A decrease in the number of stock and bond certificates physically held by investors has also led to a decrease in lost or stolen certificates, an official at the Securities and Exchange Commission said Monday.

The SEC released Monday statistics showing the aggregate dollar value of certificates reported as lost, stolen, missing or counterfeit in 1989 equaled $2.1 billion - a 26 percent decrease from the year before.

Thomas Etter Jr., an attorney in the SEC's division of market regulation, explained the improvement by saying more securities are being ''uncertificated.''

''The trend in securities is to have transactions by book entry, (where) an investor can hold a security at a broker-dealer such as Merrill Lynch, and the security will be held in depository in ... the name of the broker-dealer,'' he said.

''If they (the securities) are sold, there will be an electronic debit, but the certificate will remain on deposit at a depository trust company.''

Depository trust companies that hold stock and bond certificates often have two types of accounts.

Book entry only, often used for municipal corporate bonds, places an entire bond issue on no more than a couple of certificates. This greatly reduces theft, according to Edward McGuire, corporate secretary for Depository Trust Co. in Manhattan.

''You can't go in to your liquor store and say, 'I've got 2 billion worth of something - can you cash it for me,''' McGuire explained.

In other cases, the depository takes many certificates deposited for a particular security and exchanges them for jumbo certificates that are held in the company vault.

McGuire said his company now has $4 trillion worth of certificates on deposit, up from $3.3 trillion last year.

The book-entry-only program, he said, received certificates for stock issues worth $178 billion in 1989, as compared to just $61 billion worth in 1987.

''Book entry only is certainly something that greatly reduces the number of certificates that exist and reduces the movement of them,'' McGuire added.

MEXICO CITY (JULY 2) UPI - Texas Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams will meet Tuesday with Mexican businessmen to discuss expanded trade between Texas and Mexico in the 1990s.

Williams will also meet with the Mexican secretaries of tourism, communications and transport and commerce and industry. He also scheduled a joint news conference with officials of the Mexico City Chamber of Commerce.

''At the invitation of the Mexico City Chamber of Commerce, I'm embarking on a fact-finding mission to better understand the growing trade relationship between Mexico and Texas,'' he said Monday. ''My specific interest in this trip is to discuss with Mexican businessmen the potential benefits of a completed U.S.-Mexico free trade agreement.''

The Midland businessman's trip to Mexico City was ridiculed Monday by Monte Williams, a spokesman in Austin, Texas, for Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards.

Monte Williams said Clayton Williams' six-point economic plan calls for Texas to negotiate a free-trade agreement with Mexico, but he said the Republican apparently does not understand that the Constitution forbids states from signing treaties with foreign nations.

''If Williams is talking about a federal treaty with Mexico, that's one thing,'' said Monte Williams. ''But then, we must warn Williams that the governor of Texas doesn't ratify federal treaties - the U.S. Senate does.

''If he means that he wants a treaty between Texas and Mexico, you can tell him he hasn't met the U.S. Constitution.''

(JULY 2) UPI - Nelson Mandela arrived in London this afternoon where his reception may NOT be as warm as elsewhere on his world tour. The South African nationalist aroused a storm of criticism today across Britain's political spectrum. Before leaving Dublin, Ireland, Mandela said Britain should UNconditionally negotiate with the Irish Republican Army. He says that's the only way to end a ''mutual slaughter.'' Mandela later said the television interview distorted what he said.

The Middle East News Agency reports an UNknown number of Moslems pilgrims have been crushed to death in a tunnel near Mecca. The crowd of Moslems making their pilgrimage to the holy city ran into a bottleneck entering the tunnel, which pilgrims must pass through to get to Mount Arafat, where Mohammed is said to have delivered his last sermon.

NASA chiefs in Washington today defended the agency's ability to run complex missions. Some members of Congress have asked whether NASA should be trusted with a mission to Mars following problems with the Hubble Space Telescope and the space shuttles. Administrator Richard Truly insists NASA is doing what the public wants by stopping to fix any problems that arise. He says a proposed manned space station is NO more complex than the shuttle program.

Aspirin taken during the last three months of pregnancy may affect fetal circulation and uterine contraction.

MOSCOW (JULY 2) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev Monday criticized the scarcity of women holding senior political posts in the Soviet Union and said he and fellow communists ''should be ashamed'' of themselves.

''It is absolutely intolerable that women take an insufficient role in political life,'' Gorbachev told the 4,657 delegates to the 28th Communist Party Congress.

''Just look around and see how many women delegates there are in this hall. I think we should be ashamed of ourselves to see how many women take an active part in big politics in many countries across the world.''

The Novosti press agency later told United Press International that 344 women were in the room at the time of Gorbachev's remarks.

Gorbachev, an admirer of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, said the present congress should elect women to the Central Commitee, the Politburo and the Central Commitee's vital secretariat.

Only 9 percent of the present 247 full members of the Central Commitee and 108 alternate, or non-voting members, are women - a statistic Gorbachev lamented.

Only one woman, Alexandra Biryukova, is an alternate member of the policy-making Politburo, which has 11 full voting members.

Gorbachev, whose wife Raisa, a former professor, is a strong advocate of women's rights, said that ''despite all the slogans, of which there have been more than enough,'' there has been little improvement in women's problems.

''We have neglected the issue to such an extent that the latest attempts at improvement had next to no effect on the situation,'' he said.

During the Moscow summit of May 1988, President Reagan saluted the women of Russia for doing backbreaking chores.

But Reagan also sympathized with their having to do what is normally men's work, such as bus and truck-driving and construction jobs.

Women vastly outnumber men in the Soviet Union because of the heavy losses during World War II when 8 million soldiers were killed. In all, more than 20 million Soviets died during the war.

Gorbchev's call for promotion of women into top government echelons was made toward the end of his speech and received a tepid reception.

''I could have expected louder applause,'' he said.

OSLO (JULY 2) UPI - Many of Norway's 4,000 oil workers Monday continued their strike of North Sea oil fields into the second day despite a recommendation by union leaders that they return to work and accept government mediation.

Only one platform, the Oseberg Vest, was working again, a representative of the Oliearbeidernes Fellessammenslutning union told United Press International Monday evening.

A worker on a platform in the big Ekofisk field said, ''Out here we are in agreement that we will keep the strike going.''

OFS union local leaders at the ports of Stavanger and Bergen also refused to send their men back and said they would attempt to prevent helicopters from transporting to and from oil platforms.

Earlier, OFS national leaders officially accepted the government's offer to mediate the strike over wages and send the workers back to the platforms.

The cabinet of the conservative Norwegian government also introduced emergency legislation Monday labeling the stoppage as illegal.

World crude oil prices then dropped after rising on the initial news of the strike.

The union called the strike midnight Saturday, halting most production of oil and natural gas from the Norwegian sector of the North Sea.

About 1500 workers were taken off rigs Sunday and oil production from most of the fields had ceased by Sunday morning. The gas pipeline to continental Europe was empty by 10 a.m. local time Sunday.

Norway normally produces 1.6-1.7 million barrels of crude oil a day plus and 80 million cubic meters of natural gas.

The strike came after last-minute attempts by the government to find a solution to the oil workers' wage demands failed.

OFS leader Harald Sjonfjell said the strike was called to defend the union's right to free collective bargaining, adding that there was reason to believe it could be the longest yet.

The last strike in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea was in 1986. It lasted three days and is believed to have resulted in about $230 million in lost income.

Acting prime minister Mr. Johan J. Jakobsen told a Monday news conference that the strike could have serious domestic and international consequences for Norway. He said the conflict appeared to have reached a deadlock.

''About a quarter of Norway's income will be lost so long as the conflict lasts and in addition to this Norway is in the midst of important (natural) gas negotiations.''

The action, he said, could affect other countries' impression of Norway as a reliable gas supplier.

LONDON (JULY 2) UPI - Germany's top banking official said Monday that German monetary union carried risks but ultimately would lead to more prosperity in both Germany and Europe.

Karl Otto Pohl, president of the Bundesbank, spoke one day after the central bank took control of monetary policy in East Germany and the deustche mark replaced the ostmark.

He said that inflation would remain low and that German unification could offer an economic model for Eastern Europe's renewal.

''We are condemned to success in a situation such as this,'' Pohl told bankers and business executives at the Institute of Economic Affairs, a think tank in London.

''The initial costs will be substantial, but the benefits to be gained after a difficult, perhaps even turbulent initial phase will be well worth the effort,'' Pohl said.

''Benefits will not only accrue to my own countrymen and women but to others as well, especially in Europe.''

Pohl, who initially opposed Chancellor Helmut Kohl's efforts to achieve a rapid monetary union, said the pressure of events forced West Germany's hand.

''I would have preferred a step-by-step approach to the German unification but the urgency of the situation dictated otherwise,'' he said. ''With hindsight, there can hardly be any doubt now that German economic, monetary and social unification was at the same time inevitable, necessary and desirable.''

Some in the audience questioned whether the Bundesbank, which has prided itself on its independence, may have lost some autonomy.

But Pohl said he felt ''as independent as ever.'' He said that the decision for monetary union was a political one but that monetary policy was still in the hands of the Bundesbank.

NICOSIA, Cyprus (JULY 2) UPI - Kuwait's new oil minister stressed in an interview published Monday that there will be no change in Kuwait's oil policy as a result of last month's cabinet reshuffle and his appointment to the oil portfolio.

Rashid Salem al-Ameeri made his remarks in an interview with the Middle East Economic Survey, an authoritative oil journal based in Nicosia.

He said Kuwait still was pressing for an increase in its production quota as a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Each of OPEC's 13 member nations is assigned an output quota under the cartel's official production ceiling.

Al-Ameeri said he had explained his country's position on the quota issue to Algerian Oil Minister Sadek Boussena, the current OPEC president, during Boussena's visit to Kuwait last month.

He said Boussena understood Kuwait's position and agreed to leave the door open for further discussions.

Al-Ameeri was scheduled to meet Boussena and the Indonesian oil minister in Algiers July 4 for talks on the matter.

''Kuwait has made many sacrifices in the past regarding the quota issue,'' al-Ameeri said. ''There is a lot of pressure on Kuwait and on me as oil minister to ask for an increase in Kuwait's production quota owing to our large budget dificit.''

Al-Meeri replaced long-time Kuwaiti oil minister Sheikh Ali Khaifa al-Sabah, who was appointed finance minister in the reshuffling of the cabinet.

''We hope that the other member states will understand the situation of Kuwait, which has always sacrificed a great deal for OPEC,'' al-Ameeri said.

DETROIT (JULY 2) UPI - The Japanese Lexus was the top-rated nameplate among new car owners in a quality survey conducted by J.D. Power & Associates, while fifth-ranked Buick was the only American line to make the top 10, it was announced Monday.

Mazda led compact trucks in the Power Initial Quality Survey, which asks thousands of new vehicle owners about problems encountered during the first three months of ownership.

Ford, at No. 4, was the highest-ranked domestic compact truck nameplate. The category includes small pickups, sport-utility vehicles and minivans.

''Overall, cars have made a marked improvement in initial quality,'' said J. David Power III, president of the Agoura Hills, Calif., market research firm.

''Compact trucks, however, do not show the initial quality gains that the cars have made. And domestics clearly show they are in it for the long haul, responding with initial quality gains that have further narrowed the gap between them and the Asians.''

In the car survey, the number of reported problems per 100 cars dropped from 151 last year to 140 this year. Cars made by Asian companies held steady at 121 problems, but those made by American firms improved 6 percent to 153 problems. The largest improvement was scored by European automakers, whose carsregistered 11 percent fewer problems reported to 181.

The small truck survey saw an increase in overall problems reported to 181 per 100 vehicles, up 12 from 1989.

Lexus led the car nameplate rankings, with 82 problems reported per 100 cars, followed by: Mercedes-Benz, 84 problems; Toyota, 89 problems; Infiniti, 99 problems;and Buick with 113 problems.

Lexus and Infiniti were not included in last year's rankings. Mercedes-Benz was second last year, while Toyota was first and Buick seventh.

For specific models, Toyota Cressida was first at 63 problems per 100 cars followed by: Mercedes-Benz E-Series, 71 problems; Toyota Camry, 72 problems; Lexus LS400, 74 problems; and Mercedes-Benz S-Class, 76 problems.

Mazda led compact truck nameplates with 115 problems per 100 vehicles, trailed by: Toyota, 130 problems; Nissan, 147 problems; Ford, 148 problems; and Mitsubishi, 159 problems.

The rankings of Mazda, Toyota and Ford were unchanged from 1989, while Nissan moved up from seventh and Mitsubishi dropped from third.

Among specific models, Mazda Pickup was tops at 95 problems per 100 vehicles, followed by: Mazda MPV, 118 problems; Mitsubishi Pickup, 122 problems; Toyota Pickup, 124 problems; and Ford Bronco II, 130 problems.

Of 70,000 new car surveys sent out last fall, Power said, 26,000 were returned. About 6,500 of 19,000 small truck surveys were returned.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - The government has failed to fully assess the environmental consequences of oil and gas development on millions of acres of federal land, the General Accounting Office reported Monday.

The GAO found shortcomings of this nature in all but seven of the 82 plans governing management of federal lands considered high in oil and gas potential, including 76 million acres already leased for development.

Those lands produced oil and natural gas valued at $3.3 billion in 1988, with $600 million in revenues going to the federal treasury.

In addition, the two agencies administering those lands - the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management - often give short shrift to environmental factors in issuing oil and gas leases or drilling permits, according to the GAO, an investigative agency of Congress.

Several Forest Service and BLM offices visited by GAO investigators routinely approved leases and permits without completing environmental studies or without requiring measures to safeguard wildlife, archeological sites and other resources, the report said.

Such actions have led to court challenges by environmentalists that have delayed or suspended development of many potential oil and gas fields, costing the government millions of dollars in royalties, bonus payments and other revenues. Those losses ''far exceed'' the amount of money the government could reasonably expect to spend to improve its environmental studies, the GAO said.

The report was released by Rep. Nick Rahall, D-W.Va., chairman of the House Interior subcommittee on mining.

''In its management of over 76 million acres of lands leased for oil and gas development, the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management have adopted a policy of benign neglect that is improper, bordering on the illegal,'' Rahall said in a statement.

The BLM, in its official comments to the GAO, said it generally agreed with findings that environmental studies were insufficient to support leasing and development decisions and was working to correct the problem.

The Forest Service took the position that the forest plans reviewed by GAO auditors ''were not intended and do not purport to make'' decisions on oil and gas leasing and development.

Both agencies, however, said they supported the GAO's recommendations for ensuring that greater attention is paid to environmental factors in devising land-management plans and issuing leases and drilling permits.

The GAO reviewed a total of 82 Forest Service and BLM land-use plans covering federal lands with the greatest potential for oil and gas - most of them lying in California, Colorado, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon Utah and Wyoming.

Other states covered by the study were Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

The GAO found that 75 of the land management plans lacked at least one of the elements required by federal law or regulations as essential for assessing the environmental consequences of oil and gas development.

BEIJING (JULY 2) UPI - Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas signed a debt-repayment agreement with China Monday in a step toward normalizing relations between the two nations.

Alatas also said he had not yet succeeded in reaching a settlement on Cambodia.

Alatas met with Chinese Premier Li Peng for an evening session before Li hosted a banquet for him, following his second day of talks with Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen. They focused on restoring relations and on a peace settlement in Cambodia.

The Indonesian foreign minister's visit is the first by a high-level official from Jakarta since Indonesia broke relations with China 23 years ago, accusing Beijing of having supported a communist-led coup attempt two years earlier.

Alatas said before leaving Jakarta he hoped to set a date for full restoration of diplomatic ties, but Chinese and Indonesian officials have largely been mum on the content of the talks since Alatas arrived Sunday afternoon.

On Monday afternoon, Alatas and Chinese officials signed an agreement for Indonesia to repay an estimated $50 million in outstanding debt it has owed China since the 1960s, removing one of the obstacles to restoring relations.

Officials would not discuss details of the accord, with a Chinese Foreign Ministry official saying only it was ''on the settlement of Indonesia's debt obligation to the People's Republic of China.''

''We can say that the meeting between us today is of historic significance and your excellency has made major contributions to the development of relations between China and Indonesia,'' Li told Alatas in the meeting at the Great Hall of the People.

''I know you have been very active in the international forums for the settlement of the Cambodian question,'' Li said.

''It's true that I have been active in trying to contribute to a settlement of the Cambodia question,'' Alatas responded. ''But so far I have not been successful yet.''

Alatas has served as the co-chairman of the International Conference on Cambodia, and Indonesia has played a major role in efforts to mediate a settlement between the Vietnam-backed Cambodian government and the three-faction resistance.

China is a major resistance backer and a key supporter of the communist Khmer Rouge, the largest resistance force in the country's decade-old guerrilla war. Qian and Alatas discussed Cambodia both Sunday and Monday, but there were no details.

The Khmer Rouge has refused to participate in recent efforts toward a settlement, including a cease-fire accord reached last month in Tokyo between Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the resistance leader.

The Khmer Rouge, backed by Beijing, has demanded participation in a transition government to be set up along with a cease-fire until elections can be held. The Hun Sen government and Hanoi have steadfastly resisted any real role for the group.

The disagreement on Cambodia is not expected to hinder efforts to normalize relations between Indonesia and China, however. Trade between the two countries resumed in 1985 and reached more than $800 million last year.

(JULY 2) UPI - Liberian President Samuel Doe apparently is holed up to make a last stand against rebel forces advancing on the capital city, Monrovia. The Bush administration says it will help Doe leave the west African nation if he

18 senators are urging President Bush to oppose financial aid for the Soviet Union during this week's NATO summit in London. The senators say the president should stick by his earlier statements that the Soviets must pass more economic reforms before getting U-S assistance. The bi-partisan group of lawmakers says aid would only let the Soviets further delay those reforms. The French and West Germans are expected to press for monetary aid to Moscow.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - Reliance Group Holdings said Monday it will purchase 6 million shares in the Telemundo Group Inc. for $37.5 million.

The sale, a private placement transaction that will be finalized in July, increases Reliance's stake in the New York-based Telemundo to 78.5 percent of the 38 million Telemundo shares outstanding, according to a Schedule 13D filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The deal is contingent on a written opinion from an investment firm that the terms of the sale are fair, from a financial point of view, to Telemundo's public stockholders, according to a letter agreement from Telemundo to Reliance dated June 28.

The Telemundo Group owns and operates Spanish-language television stations that broadcast in Spanish throughout the United States. Telemundo stations reportedly reach close to 80 percent of the country's Spanish-speaking households.

Reliance Group Holdings, based in New York, is the parent company for Reliance Insurance Co.

A Schedule 13D must be filed with the SEC by investors who have acquired more than five percent of a company's outstanding stock. The filing includes information on the size of the purchase and the investor's intent in acquiring the stock.

CHICAGO (JULY 2) UPI - The Illinois Appellate Court Monday rejected a request by Commonwealth Edison for a delay in the implementation of a $235 million rate rollback for consumers.

Edison officers have not decided whether to appeal the decision to the Illinois Supreme Court, Edison spokesman John Hogan said.

It was the third setback for the utility in a week. The Illinois Commerce Commission voted 6-1 Thursday to order Commonwealth Edison to roll back its electric rates, effective July 1. The rollback action followed by a day an ICC order directing ComEd to refund $400 million to its ratepayers - the largest utility refund in state history.

For residential customers who use the smallest amount of energy, the ruling means a difference in their billing of about 5.3 percent in summer and a 6.6 percent in winter, said ICC chairman Terry Barnich.

Current Edison annual rates for the typical residential customer would be lowered to an estimated $727.40, from $772.56, said Susan Stewart, executive director of the Citizens Utility Board.

ComEd had asked the Appellate Court to issue a stay blocking the rate cut for its 3.1 million ratepayers, which was ordered after the Illinois Supreme Court ruled that a $235 million rate hike for Edison was approved illegally by the ICC.

Both the $400 million refund and the $235 million rate rollback stemmed from a 1989 rate hike rejected by the Supreme Court May 31. That rate increase was to take effect over two years and included a rate freeze for three years.

Another $300 million in additional refunds stemming from cost overruns in constuction of some of the utility's nuclear plants still are pending.

ComEd also has a $982 million rate increase request pending before the ICC.

MANCHESTER, MO (JULY 2) UPI - Twenty-nine people were arrested on trespassing charges during demonstrations at two abortion clinics Monday on the eve of the first anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's landmark decision to allow states to impose some restrictions on legal abortion, police said.

The anti-abortion protesters were arrested when they refused to leave the reception areas at a complex in St. Louis County that was the former site of Reproductive Health Services, the defendant in the Supreme Court case, police Capt. Dennis Long said.

Workers at the clinics said the protesters were waiting when the facilities opened at 8:30 a.m., then entered the offices and sat on the floor. Police were called in when the protesters refused to leave.

Those arrested were carried out of the building and driven off in police wagons to the St. Louis County Jail in Clayton, Long said.

Many of the people arrested were from out of state, and bonds of $500 were sought to ensure their attendance at subsequent court dates, he said. ''I do know quite a few of these people were from out of town, and they are going to require $500 to get out of jail,'' Long said.

The anti-abortion protesters were members of Whole Life Ministries performing what they called ''Operation Rescue'' at the Women's Care and Women's Health Center.

The action was staged to mark the first anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision in the case of Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, said Rick Weaver, a spokesman for the demonstrators.

In that landmark case brought by Missouri Attorney General William Webster the Supreme Court on July 3, 1989, made it easier for states to regulate abortions.

Weaver said the demonstrators hoped to deter women from entering the clinics for abortions, and that women who encountered the protest might change their minds about wanting to have abortions.

Weaver also said the protest was aimed especially at three doctors who perform abortions at the clinics.

A spokeswoman for Reproductive Health Services said the organization moved its offices to St. Louis from the picketed St. Louis County site last year because it was a frequent target of protestors.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - The World Bank Monday announced $462 million in loans to developing countries in Asia, Africa, South America and the Middle East.

The credit operations were the first ones approved in the World Bank's fiscal year 1991, which started July 1.

The multilateral organization said the cost of freight and passenger traffic on Pakistan's roads and railways will fall as a result of a project being supported by a $184 million World Bank loan.

In the Philippines, rural residents will gain increased access to safe water and sanitation facilities through a project being supported by a $85 million World Bank loan.

The bank said Indonesia is taking action to protect its forests while maximizing the long-term benefits derived from these resources through effective management, conservation and reforestation. The effort will be supported by a $20 million World Bank loan.

Tarim, a water-starved city in Yemen, will benefit from a project designed to expand the water supply in the area, strengthen the managerial capabilities of the Public Water Corp. and enhance environmental and health conditions through improved wastewater management.

The International Development Association, the bank's concessionary lending affiliate, will provide a $12 million loan to support the project in the Middle Eastern nation.

In the Ivory Coast, access to safe water by rural residents of the West African country will increase as a result of a policy-reform program being supported by an $80 million World Bank loan.

Guyana's efforts to restore economic growth after 15 years of decline will be supported by two loans totaling $81 million from IDA.

One loan for $78 million will support a program to reform the South American country's economy, while another for $3 million will help finance a project to provide technical assistance and advisory services to government agencies to help them carry the reform program, the World Bank said.

NORFOLK, VA (JULY 2) UPI - For the third time since May, the Navy has grounded its fleet of CH-46 Sea Knight helicopters pending an investigation into a June 22 helicopter crash off Virginia Beach that killed four people.

The grounding went into effect at 8 p.m. Sunday. It was called after investigators studying wreckage from the crash determined it was caused by metal fatigue in the pitch varying shaft.

The shaft controls the pitch - the up-and-down movements, as opposed to the side-to-side movements, called yaw - of the rear blades of the twin-rotor helicopter.

The worldwide grounding affects 341 helicopters, 261 operated by the Marine Corps and 80 by the Navy.

The helicopters are considered the Navy's primary means of resupply ships at sea. They are also used to carry Marines.

The first grounding was ordered May 14 after defects were discovered in the aft rotor transmission of the helicopter. The problems was found while investigators probed the wreckage of another helicopter crash in Twenty-Nine Palms, Calif. Seventeen Marines were injured in that crash.

The second grounding was ordered May 25 due to cracks found in the link between the rotors and the forward engine of the CH-46. That grounding stemmed from problems found during an inspection on a Marine helicopter at Cherry Point, N.C.

After both groundings military personnel corrected the defects, according to Navy officials.

A review found that nearly half of them had the transmission problem. All but 10 percent of the helicopters were repaired and the rest remain grounded while awaiting new parts.

Navy officials said the latest grounding is not directly related to the first two.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - The International Monetary Fund's member countries have formally agreed to increase the organization's resources by $60 billion, or 50 percent, to $180 billion, the multilateral organization said Monday.

During meetings in early May in Washington, the IMF's advisory body, the Interim Committee, recommended the increase.

The increase in resources is known as a hike in quotas. The size of a member's quota in the IMF reflects its relative position in the world economy and determines its voting power in the institution.

The quota also determines the amount a member can borrow from the fund if it encounters difficulties in its external finances.

For the increase to take effect the country members must first approve an amendment to the IMF's statutes to provide for the suspension of a member's voting and related rights if that member does not fulfill its obligations. Also, country members have to ratify the increase in their quota.

The IMF said these actions are expected to be completed by the end of 1991.

The last time the IMF, which now has 151 member countries, made an increase in its financing was in 1983, when subscriptions were increased by $38 billion, or 47.5 percent.

WASHINGTON (JULY 2) UPI - Eighteen senators urged President Bush Monday to oppose financial aid for the Soviet Union during the NATO summit because Moscow has not taken ''the difficult steps toward genuine and sustained economic change.''

The French and the West Germans are expected to press for economic aid for the Soviets at the meeting of the Western military alliance Thursday and Friday.

But in a letter circulated by Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and William Roth R-Del., the senators urged Bush to oppose any ''multibillion-dollar financial rescue package, and particularly any U.S. government or taxpayer participation in a major aid package, at this time.''

While noting ''much discussion'' among the Soviets that economic reform is needed, ''the Soviet government has not yet taken the difficult steps toward genuine and sustained economic change necessary to lay the foundation for a productive market economy,'' the senators said.

''We believe government-to-government aid would be squandered by the large inefficient Soviet state bureaucracy, which lacks adequate mechanisms for the productive channeling of Western assistance flows,'' they said.

Moreover, they said a bailout package ''could even be counterproductive'' because it would permit Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev to ''delay further making the hard choices associated with fundamental economic reform.''

LOS ANGELES (JULY 2) UPI - McMartin Pre-School defendant Raymond Buckey was portrayed Monday as both a notorious child molester and the innocent victim of a misguided prosecution.

In closing arguments in his retrial, Deputy District Attorney Pam Ferrero said the prosecution's case against Buckey, 32, hinged on three elements.

''The people have to prove that Mr. Buckey committed a lewd and lascivious act, that he committed it on an underage child, and that he did so to inflame the lust, passion or sexual desires of himself or the child,'' the prosecutor said.

Buckey, the sole defendant remaining in the once-massive case, is being retried on eight molestation counts for the alleged sexual abuse of three girls at the now-defunct Virginia McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach from 1978 until 1983.

Ferrero told the Superior Court jury that a simple standard will determine their verdict: Whether they believed the three girls who testified that Buckey molested them, or whether they believed the former nursery school teacher's claim that he never molested anyone in his life.

''This particular case boils down to credibility,'' the prosecutor said. ''It revolves around who do you believe?''

Ferrero also mocked defense claim that the children were manipulated by over-zealous social workers into making up the charges, saying a prosecution medical expert found scars on the alleged victims that indicated molestation.

''They (social workers) tortured her, brainwashed her and then she says she has been molested,'' Ferrero said in reference to one of the girls. ''But you know what? She has a scar in her anus and vagina.''

''That little girl was not brainwashed. So when she says she was molested, it means she was molested.''

In his closing argument, however, defense attorney Danny Davis attacked the prosecution's medical evidence as being unreliable.

He also said that because social workers had, in essence brainwashed the alleged victims, the children never really had a chance to tell the true story.

''We never really heard from the children,'' Davis told the jurors.

He said authorities bungled their investigation and had forever smothered the truth behind the allegations.

He said the truth was initially obliterated when Manhattan Beach police in 1983 sent out a letter to McMartin parents naming Buckey as a suspect in the case, thereby planting the suggestion of his guilt in their minds.

Davis said the truth was further concealed when social workers at the Childern's Institute International, while conducting videotaped interviews of the children, manipulated them into falsely believing they had been molested.

''If we look closely at the videotapes, these children are not saying they were molested by Ray Buckey,'' the defense lawyer said.

Davis asked jurors to acquit Buckey, but said above all, they must not come back with deadlocked verdicts, as jurors in the first trial did.

''My final argument is to make this the final McMartin case, and end this chapter of black history in Los Angeles County,'' Davis said.

The jury is expected to begin its deliberations next week.

Following the first trial, Buckey and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckey, 63, were acquitted in January of 52 other molestation counts. Buckey is being retried on charges on which jurors at that trial deadlocked.

The first trial, which involved the alleged molestations of 11 children, lasted nearly three years and cost more than $13 million, making it the longest and most expensive criminal trial in U.S. history.

Jury selection in the second trial began April 10.

If convicted, Buckey could be sentenced to up to 22 years in state prison. The nearly five years he spent in County Jail awaiting his first trial would be subtracted from that total.

When first filed in 1984, the case was the largest sex abuse case in U.S. history. However, five co-defendants and scores of charges were dismissed prior to the first trial for insufficient evidence.

WILMINGTON, DEL (JULY 2) UPI - Du Pont Co. plans to spend $106 million over the next three years to build and expand hydrogen peroxide facilities to capitalize on increased demand for the non-toxic alternative to chlorine.

The company said in a published report Monday the expansion is the result of consumer demand to move away from using chlorine in manufacturing processes. Chlorine is used in industry as a whitener, but a byproduct of the chemical is dioxin, a toxic cancer-causing chemical. A second byproduct, chloroform, also is a toxic gas.

By contrast, hydrogen peroxide breaks down into water and oxygen.

Du Pont will increase its capacity to produce peroxide by about 76 percent in the next two years, expanding plants in Ontario and Memphis, Tenn. A new plant also is planned for Alberta, Canada.

Du Pont also will construct plants in New Zealand, Indonesia and Venezuela in conjunction with EKA Nobel of Sweden and Mitsubishi Gas of Japan. Du Pont will be a minor partner in the Indonesian and Venezuelan ventures.

Du Pont ranks itself as the No. 2 producer of peroxide in the nation and the fifth largest in the world. The company estimates sales of peroxide of between $102 million and $115 million annually.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JULY 2) UPI - President Bush reassured President Hosni Mubarak Monday of Washington's commitment to continue efforts to help achieve a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, the Middle East News Agency said.

Bush made the pledge in a cable of congratulations he sent Monday to Mubarak on occasion of the Moslem feast of the sacrifice, the agency said.

MENA quoted Bush's cable as saying in part that ''the commitment our two countries share together to bring about peace and stability in the Middle East involves the responsibility to overcome obstacles in the way of achieving just and lasting peace in the area.''

''I want to emphasize to you that the United States would continue its persistent efforts to achieve that goal,'' then cable reportedly said.

The news agency quoted U.S. sources in Washington as saying Bush took the occasion to renew to Mubarak his country's commitment to work together with Egypt toward achieving peace in the Middle East.

The news agency also reported that Mubarak had sent Bush a congratulatory cable on occasion of the U.S. independence day.

ATHENS, GREECE (JULY 2) UPI - Firebombs destroyed three private cars Monday, and a previously unknown group claimed responsibility for the attacks, police said.

One of the firebombs destroyed a vehicle belonging Gerassimo Melissaris, a member of Parliament from the ruling conservative New Democracy party. Two other cars were destroyed in a similar manner in the Neo Patissia suburb of Athens.

Police said the bombings occurred 10 minutes after an anonymous caller claiming to represent ''Popular Rage,'' a previously unknown group, phoned the newspaper Eleftherotypia to say ''three bombs will explode in 10 minutes.''

The caller did not did say where the bombs were, but said his group was responsible for 15 other bomb explosions over the past month. No one was killed in any of the incidents, but two passersby were reportedly injured.

One series of blasts occurred in the affluent Kolonaki district in central Athens, close to the U.S. Embassy, but American citizens were not targeted.

An earlier series of explosions occurred in the affluent Ekali suburb north of Athens. Police said they were investigating, but have not so far made arrests.

BURBANK, CALIF (JULY 2) UPI - Entertainment giant Walt Disney Co. said Monday it is moving into a new venture, publishing children's books.

The company said the Disney Publishing venture, which will be operated within its Disney Consumer Products unit, will announce its first juvenile titles at the Frankfurt Book Fair this fall.

Disney Publishing will offer two imprints - Disney Press, which will publish books based on Disney film, television and characters, and an unnamed imprint offering general titles.

The unit will be headed by veteran publishing executive Elizabeth Gordon, former publisher and senior vice president of Harper & Row's Junior Books Group.

Disney has a long history of involvement with children's books, but its titles have been published through licensees.

The announcement reflects an increased trend on the part of Disney to establish a larger measure of control over its products, such as in last fall's annoucement that the company would create its own record label, Hollywood Records.

Disney also said that in the fall of 1991, it will begin offering non-Disney properties ''from the world's best authors and illustrators,'' but did not elaborate.

NEW YORK (JULY 2) UPI - Flamboyant civil rights activist Al Sharpton was acquitted Monday of charges that he illegally used proceeds from a charity to enhance his personal wealth.

Sharpton, a controversial black minister who has been at the center of a number of racially charged cases, was cleared by a jury in state Supreme Court in Manhattan of fraud and larceny charges.

Defense lawyers argued the charges against Sharpton were part of a vendetta by state prosecutors angered at Sharpton's actions in the Tawana Brawley investigation.

Sharpton had advised Brawley, a black 16-year-old from Wappingers Falls, N.Y., not to cooperate with investigators looking into her charges that she was abducted and raped by a gang of white men.

State Attorney General Robert Abrams investigated Brawley's claims and concluded it was all a hoax.

Sharpton, 35, was accused of looting at least $250,000 from the National Youth Movement, a charity he founded while in high school in 1971. He had faced up to seven years in prison if convicted.

The jury took only one day to acquit Sharpton of all the charges against him.

Sharpton's lawyer, Alton Maddox, argued Friday during closing statments in the trial that state prosecutors ''want him to stop his work.

''That's what this case is about,'' Maddox said, referring to Sharpton's community organizing efforts and outspoken actions during the Howard Beach and Bensonhurst racial murder trials.

Timothy Gilles, a spokesman for the state attorney general's office, which brought the charges, denied the case against Sharpton was politically motivated.

''That's not the case,'' he said. ''The investigation that led to these charges began more than a year prior to the Brawley investigation and there was no linkage between the two.''

Gilles said of Sharpton's acquittal, ''We accept the verdict of juries.''

Maddox argued during the trial that no one complained of being defrauded by Sharpton and the state could find no evidence of money misspent by the charity. Prosecutors, however, argued the nature of charitable fraud was that the victims may not know they had been victimized.

The trial attracted a steady stream of Sharpton's supporters, including boxing promoter Don King.

The trial, recessed numerous times, began March 29 and was marked by noisy demonstrations by dozens of Sharpton's supporters.

During the trial, a former employee of the National Youth Movement testified the organization had less than a dozen members and only one office.

In 1985 solicitation letters sign by Sharpton, contributors were told his organization had 30,000 members, offices in 16 cities and benefitted minority youth through anti-drug programs and the creation of 15,000 jobs, authorities said.

Sharpton has been a key figure in some of the city's most explosive racial controversies. He served as an adviser to the family of Yusuf Hawkins, a black teen slain in Bensonhurst, Brooklyn, in August 1989, and represented the victims in the 1986 Howard Beach, Queens, racial attack in their negotiations with investigators.

(JULY 2) UPI - An UNknown number of Moslems reportedly were crushed to death today during a pilgrimage through a tunnel to a holy shrine in Mecca Islam's holiest city.

The Middle Eastern News Agency quotes a responsible source at the Saudi Arabian Interior Ministry as saying thousands of pilgrims had squeezed into the Moassim tunnel near Mecca.

The source said ambulances rushed to the scene to remove the victims and treat pilgrims who fainted in the crush.

The source did NOT say how many pilgrims were killed in the incident.

Moslem pilgrims must pass through the Moassim tunnel on their way to Mount Arafat... where the Prophet Mohammed is said to have delivered his last sermon.

Nelson Mandela tried to tone down comments favorable to the Irish Republican Army today, before arriving in London... where his comments drew a barrage of criticism from several parties.

At a news conference in Dublin, Ireland, Mandela said Britain should begin UNconditional talks with the I-R-A. He asked what sense it makes to continue ''mutual slaughter.''

Mandela said London had set many precedents of setting up dialogue with armed groups, citing rebels in 1979 in Rhodesia.

Mandela later said he regretted being dragged into a dispute, adding that his statements were distorted in the television interview .

He said he is concerned because ''people are killing each other, when a dispute could be settled.''

Anti-I-R-A feelings are running high in Britain because the radicals have recently targeted indefensible targets such as social clubs.

In London, a spokesman for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office said the administration does NOT talk to terrorists. Before such negotiations could be considered, the I-R-A must renounce the use of force or violence.

Opposition Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock said Mandela is his friend... but the I-R-A are NO more than ''a bunch of murderous gangsters.''

(JULY 2) UPI - Defense lawyer R-Kenneth Mundy today hammered away at the prosecution's star witness in the Washington, D-C, drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry.

Mundy led Rasheeda Moore and the jury through a re-play of the videotape from last January's F-B-I sting, in which Barry was apparently caught smoking crack. Moore- a former model who says she was Barry's lover for two years- lured Barry to the hotel room where F-B-I agents and cameras were waiting.

Mundy got Moore to admit today that Barry seven times said he didN'T want to smoke drugs before lighting the crack pipe and inhaling, prompting federal agents to burst into the room.

Mundy is trying to use government entrapment as a defense.

But Moore also testified today that Barry was lying when he said during the sting that he didN'T know how to use the crack pipe. He eventually used it himself, without aid.

Mundy has NOT yet attacked Moore's allegation that she and the mayor used cocaine more than 100 times during their relationship. But outside court today he called Moore's testimony ''a lie'' and said her credibility has been damaged.

The 54-year-old Barry faces 14 drug and perjury charges and a maximum sentence of 26 years in prison and heavy fines if found guilty of all charges.

Federal agents say they've UNcovered a drug money laundering operation of UNprecedented size.

The agents seized more than 22-Million dollars in what they say are illegal profits from cocaine trade in New York and Miami.

Investigators displayed the money on tables which ran the length of the grand ballroom in Miami's Doral Country Club. Heavily armed federal drug agents lined the lobby to protect the cash... all of which was in bills of 20 dollars or smaller.

The money was accumulated during a number of seizures over 13 months. Most of the money came from cash-filled cars which were left by alleged drug-dealers in pre-arranged pickup spots.

U-S Customs Commissioner Carol Hallett said the seizures show the war on drugs is succeeding and should continue.

She said Colombians and Cuban-Americans who were involved in the case. Officials have made just one arrest, but expect more.

(JULY 2) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is trying to preserve his power at the 28th Communist Party Congress in Moscow.

It's the most serious test of Gorbachev's strength since he UNveiled his reform program of ''perestroika'' four years ago. Hard-line communists are mounting a challenge to both Gorbachev and his reforms.

He immediately seized the initiative today, trying to challenge the communists to rise to the changes sweeping eastern Europe. He dared the communists to earn their place in a multi-party system.

Gorbachev's close ally Alexander Yakovlev- credited as being the intellectual behind the reforms- shocked the party by urging all its top leaders to step aside, including himself.

Yakovlev said a younger, more left-wing leadership is necessary to deal with the changes sweeping the world. He called the reform movement ''unstoppable'' and said... ''It will go on with the party or without it.''

Yakovlev announced his intention to leave his post in the Politburo. But he would retain his influential position with Gorbachev's Presidential Council. Soviet political power has swung under Gorbachev from the party chairman to the president- making this party congress perhaps the last, best chance for hard-liners to fight reform.

Western firefighters have had to eat their words after predicting a stubborn California wildfire would be doused last night.

A weekend of cool, moist ocean breezes helped firefighters surround most of the huge blaze near Santa Barbara by dawn. But the weather turned hotter and dryer, and more of the same is expected.

Some 700 firefighers remain on the lines. Officials now expect to take total control of the blaze by tomorrow morning.

The conflagration is the worst to hit California in 30 years. It consumed 487 buildings, mostly homes. The latest loss estimate is 500-Million-dollars.

One woman was killed by the fire. Officials say all the pain and damage was caused by arson. A 120-thousand-dollar reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest of the arsonist.

Other fires are still blazing in California, Arizona, Texas and Colorado.

Dry and hot weather stretches from the Southwest to the High Plains and into the southern Atlantic Coast.

Temperatures were generally in the 90's or higher today. Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota and Montana topped 100 degrees.

(JULY 2) UPI - Coast Guard officials say Chesapeake Bay appears to have avoided the brunt of a 30-thousand-gallon fuel oil spill from two cargo ships that collided during a storm last night. (JULY 2) UPI - The days may be numbered for Liberia's President Samuel Doe. Rebel forces attacked the capital city, Monrovia, today and Doe is said to have taken refuge in his heavily fortified mansion. He's reported to be holed up with 500 members of his elite presidential guard. Rebel leader Charles Taylor is preparing to seize power in the west African country.

Moscow residents say the country's faith in the Soviet Communist Party has fallen too low for its leaders to remedy. The Communist Party today opened a congress to determine whether its future will be one of further painful reform or backtracking. But some of a dozen people interviewed at random in the Soviet capital say the only way to get things done is for the communists to give up power. The people expect a lot of talk and little action from the meeting.

At Cape Canaveral, NASA engineers say the fuel leak detected in the shuttle Atlantis may merely be the result of a sensor placed too close to a hydrogen line. Space agency officials are considering fueling tests for both the shuttle Atlantis and Columbia by this weekend. Engineers say it's almost impossible to launch both shuttles as planned before Discovery's October flight to carry a solar probe into orbit. But engineers are still shooting for an Atlantis flight before then.

150 cleanup workers are trying to contain a 30-thousand-gallon fuel oil spill in the Chesapeake Bay. The spill- caused by the collision of two cargo ships during a storm last night- has already affected wildlife, but is reported to be for the most part confined to the Elizabeth River. 50 ducks have turned up oiled, and Virginia officials are looking for damage to crabs and oysters.

W. August Hillenbrand, President and Chief Executive Officer, stated that results for the second quarter were mixed. Total revenues of $278.5 million were 8.4 percent higher than the second quarter of 1989. Industrial segment revenues rose 6.9 percent to $269.9 million while the Insurance segment increased 89.6 percent to $8.6 million for the comparable period. Net income of $20.4 million was essentially flat and earnings per share of $.56 compared to $.55 in last year's second quarter. All 1989 figures have been restated for the new Insurance accounting standard adopted this year.

Our Health Care companies reported higher revenues in the second quarter; however, SSI's growth was dampened by the implementation of reduced coverage available under Medicare's catastrophic illness provisions. At SSI, operating profit was negatively impacted by a higher level of fixed expenses and a drop in units attributable to the revised Medicare guidelines.

The Durables segment, comprised of American Tourister and Medeco, achieved minimal revenue growth as the anticipated softness in consumer spending directly impacted luggage sales. Operating profit margins were lower as a result of price competition and higher fixed costs.

SANTA ROSA, CA (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - The Department of Defense is about to announce the sale of U.S. fighter planes and technology valued at $2.7 billion to Korea, a Pentagon source has told SAM TRADE.

SAM TRADE, a newsletter which specializes in East Asian trade, has been told that Korea will purchase the McDonnell Douglas F/A-18 fighter plane under the following conditions:

--12 fighters made in the United States will be sold to Korea. The Korean government had orignialy insisted on purchasing only 3 fighters made in the United States.

--36 aircraft will be exported in sub-assembled form or in ''kits'' to be assembled in Korea. The Korean government had originally wanted to purchase only 20 kits.

--The United States has agreed to provide additional defense work or ''offsets'' to the Koreans valued at 30 percent of the $2.7 billion sale or about $900 million. The Koreans had originally pushed for 100 percent of the value of the sale in additional business.

The first American fighters are expected to arrive in Korea in 3 years.

The Korean deal is believed to be far more advantegeous to American defense contractors than the controversial sale of U.S. fighter technology to Japan which had to be re-negotiated after a congressional outcry in 1989. These are the reasons:

--Unlike Japan, the Korean government has agreed to buy American aircraft made in the United States and use American made components.

--Unlike the sale to Japan, the defense department said it has ensured that Korea will not acquire the blueprints to important U.S. technology. This was a major criticsim of the sale to Japan.

The defense department has negotiated a better egreement with Korea than it did with Japan because the Bush administration has brought in new leadership at DOD which is more conscious of the economic impact of defense sales.

Also, after the Japanese fighter controversy, DOD agreed to work closely with the U.S. Commerce Department to assure that U.S. economic interests are taken into account when negotiating arms sales.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - The innovative EPASS security management information system that stores virtually unlimited data and video images, and provides verification of people as well as badges, is already being used at major airports, governmental installations and sites and in the corporate headquarters of industrial firms.

John Abbott, newly appointed board chairman and chief executive officer of the Falls Church-based Data Link, the company that designed and markets the unique system, points to the money-saving and time-saving capabilities of EPASS.

EPASS -- for Electronic Pass and Security System -- provides data processing, video imaging, ID badge photo sizing, design and production, user authorization, system audits and networking and data communication.

''We can produce badges without the employees leaving their job stations and, in fact, we can produce hundreds of ID badges overnight depending on the number of color video printers being used,'' Abbott said. ''And the system will interface with any off-the-shelf security components and with hardware already in place.''

''If EPASS were being used when ex-PSA employee David Burke walked through airport security and boarded that fateful PSA plane Dec. 7, 1987, he never would have reached the aircraft,'' Abbott declared. Burke, it was later determined, had six different employee badges, none of them valid.

He got on board, and in flight fired three shots at the pilot and co-pilot then killed himself, taking 43 persons to their death near San Luis Obispo, Calif.

EPASS systems are installed at both Honolulu International and Dulles International Airports. The Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, with its far-flung human resources, has installed EPASS in its headquarters building. Warner Lambert has an EPASS system at its international headquarters facility in New Jersey.

INDIO, CA (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Thrift Guaranty Corp. Tuesday filed a motion in the United States Bankruptcy Court in Southern California to suspend bankruptcy proceedings for San Diego-based American Thrift and Loan Association, claiming that American is not eligible to be a debtor under Chapter 11 bankruptcy laws.

Thrift Guaranty Corp.'s motion states that American filed for bankruptcy to prevent TGC from taking it over and conducting an investigation into its affairs. Thrift Guaranty Corp. is the organization chartered by the state to guaranty member company deposits.

''American has violated the intent of the State Thrift and Loan Law,'' said Tom Cunningham, president of Thrift Guaranty Corp. ''It wants to retain control over its assets and prevent the Department of Corporations (DOC) and TGC from gaining access to its record, yet still enjoy the benefit of TGC guaranteeing its deposits.

''TGC wants the liquidation of American Thrift to proceed in accordance with the law,'' he added. ''Thrift Guaranty Corporation has the assets and responsibility to guarantee customer accounts up to the $50,000 limit as provided by the Financial Code. But the law intended for the Department of Corporations to gain control of a failed thrift's assets and records in an expeditious manner.''

In 1985, the California Legislature passed a law (Section 18521.5 of the California Financial Code) requiring all thrift and loans to obtain insurance from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) by July 1, 1990 or convert to another type of financial institution, merge with another company, or sell its assets for cash.

According to Cunningham, high ranking officials at American recently offered the DOC the opportunity to conduct a friendly take-over of the thrift, but only if the DOC and TGC would provide immunity for the thrift's officers and directors from activities associated with American.

DOC and TGC declined to enter into such an agreement. Less than a week later, on June 6, 1990, American filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, preventing the DOC, by virtue of an automatic stay, from taking over American and conducting an investigation into its affairs.

According to Cunningham, 95 percent of the state's thrifts and loans obtained FDIC insurance during the past few years. With the exception of Riverside Thrift and Loan, which is undergoing an orderly liquidation of assets by TGC and American Thrift and Loan Association, all remaining thrifts in the state have complied with the 1985 law.

''The thrift and loan industry as a whole is healthy and growing,'' said Cunningham. ''Earnings have increased during the past five years. Although the number of companies has decreased slightly, larger firms have been formed with greater financial strength.''

PHOENIX (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Aztar Corp. (NASDAQ/ NMS: AZTR) Tuesday announced that the Nevada Supreme Court had upheld a judgment by a lower state court ordering the company to pay approximately $33 million in a contract dispute.

The Supreme Court dismissed the company's appeal of a Clark County (Nevada) District Court verdict entered in May 1989 involving a contract dispute in the acquisition by Ramada Inc., Aztar's predecessor, of the leasehold interest in the Tropicana Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, Nev., in 1979. The plaintiffs in the 1983 suit were Hotel Conquistador, Inc., and its stockholders.

The lower court had ordered the company to pay $14.225 million as part of the Tropicana acquisition plus interest on that amount from January 1982 forward, and to pay attorney's fees and costs.

Aztar officials said the company is considering petitioning for a rehearing under Nevada Supreme Court rules permitting such petitions within 18 days after a decision. If the company decides not to petition for a rehearing, or if it petitions and the petition is denied, the company intends to satisfy the judgment from available company funds.

Aztar Corp. is a publicly held casino gaming company that operates TropWorld Casino and Entertainment Resort in Atlantic City, N.J., and the Ramada Express Hotel and Casino in Laughlin, Nev., in addition to the Tropicana.

SANTA ANA, CALIF (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Alpha Microsystems Tuesday reported a net loss for the first quarter ended May 27, 1990, of $2,472,000, or 87 cents per share, on net sales of $13.51 million.

During the same period last year, the company reported a profit of $579,000, or 19 cents per share, on net sales of $14,087,000.

Robert B. Hitchcock, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Alpha Microsystems, said: ''Alpha Microsystems is implementing a strategy of diversification through acquisition. Our first-quarter results reflect that we are still in the transitional stage of absorbing the investment of adding both new product lines and new dealers to the company.

''Our revenue and orders have not yet reached anticipated levels. Revenue has been further impacted by the general softness of the domestic computer industry on our traditional business. While unit shipment volumes have generally increased, margin contribution has been affected by a shift toward smaller, less profitable configurations.

''At the same time, continuing growth in service revenues and market reception of our expanded Intel and Motorola-based product offerings are encouraging signs that our strategic investment plan is on the right track.

''We are also pleased that IBM has recently recognized our patented Videotrax technology as a viable backup option for the new PS/1 home computer system, and we anticipate wider reception of this innovative product across a broad front.''

DTI will design the APM interactive multimedia merchandising kiosk. IBM will manufacture the units at its facility in Charlotte, N.C.

BRENTWOOD, TN (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Comdata Holdings Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS: CMDT) Tuesday announced that it has prepaid a non-compete obligation to American Express Information Services Co. arising from the June 1989 acquisition by Comdata of three American Express Information Services units.

Comdata has satisfied the remaining non-compete obligation with a cash payment of $15 million and the issuance of a non-interest bearing note of approximately $5.7 million, payable on June 30, 1995. The non-compete agreement will terminate on Dec. 31, 1990. Funding for the $15 million cash payment was provided by the company's revolving credit agreement with its bank group.

As a result of the company's decision to terminate the non-compete agreement and prepay its remaining obligation in the matter, Comdata will record a charge of approximately $23 million in the quarter ended June 30, 1990. This amount represents the write-off of the unamortized value of the non-compete agreement net of the discount achieved on prepaying the related obligation.

The transaction will increase the loss expected to be recorded by the company for the second quarter, but will reduce substantially the ongoing amortization costs recorded in future periods.

Commenting on the announcement, George L. McTavish, Comdata's president and chief executive officer, said: "This transaction is important for Comdata for it helps position the company to begin operating profitably. However, our focus on building strong cash flow from operations will remain a priority.

"Our growing cash flows have allowed us to make accelerated reductions in the company's leverage and paved the way for a private equity offering in March 1990 that more than doubled our equity base to approximately $68 million," McTavish continued.

"Now, with those initial objectives accomplished, we have the balance sheet strength to take advantage of this prepayment opportunity and thereby enhance future earnings and cash flows by eliminating the continuing amortization charges related to the 1989 acquisitions from American Express."

McTavish said the three units acquired from American Express Information Services Co. were Financial and Communications Services, Cashchek International and Fundsnet. Those units, which offered funds transfer, cash advance and information processing services to the transportation, leisure, and gaming industries similar to those already offered by Comdata, greatly strengthened Comdata's leadership position within the industry.

LITTLETON, MA (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Alliant Computer Systems Corp. (NASDAQ:ALNT) reported Tuesday that second quarter revenues and earnings will fall short of the company's and Wall Street analysts' expectations.

The second quarter has experienced some problems associated with the risks of a new product transition period, according to Alliant Chief Executive Officer Ronald H. Gruner. It was the first quarter of volume shipments of the FX/2800 supercomputer, which was announced in January 1990. Since the announcement, approximately 30 of the new, RISC-based supercomputers have shipped.

''While we have not completed a final accounting of the quarter's results, we estimate that revenues, instead of reaching the $23 to $24 million mark that some analysts anticipated, remained close to the first quarter 1990 revenues of $20 million,'' said Gruner. ''In addition, we expect a loss of from eight to 12 cents a share for Q2 1990.''

First quarter 1990 revenues were $20.3 million, with an earnings of $.07 per share. In the 1989 second quarter, revenues were $17 million, with an earnings of $.03 per share.

Revenues are being impacted by longer and more extensive customer benchmark processes than for previous, lower priced FX/Series systems, and by a predominance of upgrade business for the quarter. Average selling prices for upgrade systems are approximately 60 percent of those for full system sales.

An additional impact results from the significant cost of rolling out the new product. Also, while the recently acquired Japanese subsidiary has met its second quarter revenue plans, the acquisition has led to an increase in the company's overall selling, general and administrative expenses.

''As we have noted before, we expected the second and third quarters to involve product transition risks,'' Gruner said. ''We are disappointed that a number of large system orders did not close by quarter end.''

Alliant Computer Systems Corp. manufactures standards-based parallel supercomputers with visualization tools that enable scientists and engineers to quickly interpret and solve complex problems.

EVENDALE, OH (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - A major milestone in the GE90 engine program has been reached with the signing of a formal agreement between GE Aircraft Engines and SNECMA of France, which gives SNECMA a 25 percent share in the development and production of this advanced, very high thrust engine.

SNECMA's participation in the GE 90 program will involve the design and manufacture of the high pressure compressor, based on the GE/NASA Energy Efficient Engine, the low pressure compressor, and various fan components. The French company will also provide approximately 40 percent of the GE90 assembly and test work.

"The foundations upon which we and SNECMA are building this program are solid as a rock," said Brian H. Rowe, senior vice president of GE Aircraft Engines. "We have now been working with SNECMA on civil engine programs since 1969, and the relationship has never been better.

Cooperation on the GE large engines and the successful 50/50 partnership we've formed in CFM International provide a solid basis for more productive and mutually beneficial teamwork on the GE90 program.

"The market for the GE90 looks better than ever, and we are forging ahead on an aggressive development program with SNECMA," said Rowe. "In the meantime, discussions are being held with other international companies who may join the GEAE/SNECMA team in the near future."

The GE90 engine is being developed to power the 767-X and other future widebody applications. Equipped with a 123-inch fan, the GE90 will be the most powerful commercial engine ever developed and will produce this power while burning ten percent less fuel than any of its large fan predecessors.

Engine emissions will be as much as 33 percent lower than those of previous large engines, and noise levels will be sufficiently low to meet the most stringent requirements of airports around the world.

Rated from 75,000 to 95,000 pounds of thrust, the GE90 is scheduled for initial certification at 85,000 pounds thrust in mid-1994, in time for service entry on the Boeing aircraft in 1995.

TORONTO (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Corona Corp. announced Tuesday that as a result of Murray Pezim's refusal to deliver his shares under a previously signed contract, Corona has made substantial revisions to its plans for reorganization.

First, the arrangement whereby Corona Gold Corp. (''Corona Gold''), Prime Resources Group Inc. (''Prime'') and Stikine Resources Ltd. (''Stikine''), were to be merged, has been shelved. Corona Gold, however, will be formed as a wholly-owned, precious metals subsidiary of Corona Corp. and will continue with its move to Vancouver.

Second, in order to satisfy the principal shareholders of Stikine with whom Corona had signed the original lock-up agreement, Corona has redesigned their agreement to allow them to immediately sell their Stikine shares in exchange for a Corona preferred share which is redeemable for Corona shares on approximately the same terms as the previous announced ''lock-up'' agreement, with the additional element of a $70-per-share retraction privilege.

The preferred shares will be retractable by the holders at $70 per share after Sept. 30, redeemable by Corona at any time after Dec. 31, and mature on June 30, 1992. The preferred shares will bear cumulative cash dividends of $4.20 per share per annum, payable quarterly.

The preferred shares will also have the right at any time prior to maturity to be exchanged for 8.5 Corona subordinate voting shares for each preferred share.

(In addition, should a publicly-traded precious metals company be created in the future similar to the creation of Corona Gold as originally proposed, each preferred share will have the right to be exchanged for 4.5 common shares of the newly created gold company and 6.5 subordinate voting shares of Corona.)

The four principal shareholders of Stikine with collective ownership of 1,413,200 shares have signed definitive agreements to this revision, with the result that Corona will own directly 1,453,200 common shares representing approximately 43 percent of Stikine's outstanding shares.

Corona intends to make a follow-up bid for sufficient shares of Stikine to achieve up to 55-percent ownership of that company. The bid would not be made in the United States and would not be open to residents of the United States. Corona's bid will be for all shares not already acquired by Placer Dome Inc. under that company's outstanding bid.

IRVINE, CA (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - American Savings Bank Tuesday introduced a new seven-year mortgage program giving home buyers an amortized fixed-rate loan with lower payments for the first seven years and a refinancing option after the seven year period.

"The 7+ Mortgage Program is ideal for first-time home buyers who want affordable monthly payments and are likely to be transferred, planning to move or trade up within the next seven years," said Frank Bonetto, executive vice president and chief lending officer.

"This program's interest rate starts at a competitive fixed rate, below the traditional thirty-year fixed-rate loan. With this lower rate remaining constant for the next seven years, the homeowner has the extra cash to pay moving expenses, buy furniture, or landscape the back yard."

The 7+ Mortgage Program is available for residential, single family homes and condominiums with a 90 percent maximum loan-to-value and a loan cap of $187,450, and there is no pre-payment penalty.

The streamlined refinancing option at the end of the loan makes refinancing easy. Assuming the rate is below the five percent note rate, refinancing doesn't require credit/income verification, an appraisal or requalifying, said Bonetto.

The borrower receives a new note and modification agreement. Fees are limited to $250 plus title update fees and any other applicable fees. The remaining balance on the refinanced loan is reamortized for 23 years.

Some conditions apply for the streamlined financing option. The home buyer's payment history must have remained stable during the final 12 months of the maturity due date, the home must remain a primary residence, and the current interest rate must not exceed five percent above the original interest rate of the loan.

If any of these conditions are not met, then the refinanced loan is simply treated as a new mortgage loan. Bonetto added that if a homeowner is using the property as a second home or investment property, the owner still may qualify for streamlined refinancing.

"This program may not be the right loan for all American Savings customers, and that is why we offer a variety of loan packages ranging from monthly adjustable rate mortgages (ARMS), Quick Qualifier loans, and conventional fixed-rate loans.

Our commitment is to offer our customers superior service and innovative products. The 7+ Mortgage Program is an example of that commitment," said Bonetto.

PROVIDENCE, RI (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - The Narragansett Electric Co. Monday filed a general rate increase with the Rhode Island Public Utilities Commission (PUC) which if approved would increase rates by $18.7 million or 4.9 percent.

''The rate increase is needed in part to recover cost increases caused by inflation since Narragansett Electric's last general rate filing on June 1 1989. The rate request is subject to review by the PUC and is not expected to become effective until April 1, 1991. If approved, the new rates would increase the bill of a typical residential customer using 500 kilowatthours of electricity per month by approximately $2.65.

WASHINGTON (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T Tuesday said that because the entire long distance marketplace is ''vigorously competitive,'' it's time for the same rules to apply to all long distance companies.

The company cited the numerous federal restrictions that ''hobble'' AT&T, and said they serve only to stifle competition and deprive customers of the lower prices and service benefits that a free market offers.

''It's time to give customers the full benefits that a competitive marketplace can deliver,'' said Bill Catucci, AT&T's vice president of federal regulatory affairs. ''Continuing to treat AT&T differently from other long distance companies is anti-competitive and harms consumers.''

Catucci said that current regulation of AT&T is based on industry assessments that are more than a decade old. ''The facts are clear and compelling,'' he said. ''A radical transformation of the industry has occurred. Full competition, by any standard, is a reality today.''

AT&T made its comments in response to the Federal Communications Commission's proposal to change the rules governing competition in the long distance market. The company filed approximately 200 pages of documentation demonstrating that competition is vigorous throughout the entire interexchange market - from business services, to 800 services, to residential services.

AT&T emphasized that its position is supported by the FCC's own studies and data.

Numerous additional studies, including one by AT&T Bell Laboratories, as well as studies by Louis Harris & Associates and Harvard Prof. Michael Porter, author of ''The Competitive Advantage of Nations,'' demonstrate convincingly that no single company can possibly control any segment of the long distance market, Catucci said.

PORTLAND, ME (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - On May 18, 1990, the Insurance Department of the State of New York (the ''Department'') directed American Colonial Insurance Company (''ACIC''), a New York-based property-casualty insurer and a wholly-owned subsidiary of North East Insurance Company (NASDAQ:NEIC), a Portland, Maine-based property-casualty insurer, to cease writing business in New York until the New York Superintendent of Insurance determines that ACIC's policyholders' surplus is commensurate with its amount of writings and obligations. Such action is authorized under newly passed legislation granting the Department broad powers as respects interpretation of financial ratios.

On May 23, 1990, North East contributed $150,000 in capital to ACIC in order to address an approximate $104,000 impairment in ACIC's capital identified by a New York State Audit at December 31, 1988. Notwithstanding this step, the Department advised ACIC on June 27, 1990 that the May 18 directive remained. ACIC exercised its statutory right and requested that formal hearings be scheduled with respect to the directive, pending the completion of which the directive does not take effect.

Although ACIC had ceased writing new and renewal business at its own initiative in October, 1989, the previously announced combination involving North East and Mega Group Inc. (NASDAQ Symbol:MGIN), a Delmar, New York-based insurance brokerage and agency concern, had contemplated that ACIC would be available to write business for customers of Mega in New York.

While North East is confident of the long term benefits in a business combination with Mega, however, as a result of these regulatory developments affecting ACIC, it is uncertain whether certain necessary preconditions to the consummation of the proposed Mega/North East combination (including the obtaining of necessary regulatory approvals and financing) are capable of being fulfilled prior to the scheduled expiration of the agreement on October 31, 1990.

MESA, AZ (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - U.S. Army helicopters will be more effective and survivable at night and in adverse weather with the development of an advanced system that takes advantage of artificial intelligence and other cockpit automation.

McDonnell Douglas and IBM will begin development of the Day/Night Adverse Weather Pilotage System (D/NAPS) under a $7.5 million contract awarded this month by the U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command's Aviation Applied Technology Directorate.

Under the initial 29-month D/NAPS contract, McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. and its principal subcontractor, IBM Federal Sector Division, will use manned simulation to develop, integrate and demonstrate advanced pilotage technologies.

An identical development contract was awarded to a team led by Sikorsky Aircraft. Both teams will compete for a follow-on D/NAPS contract that will permit flight testing of actual D/NAPS hardware and software to validate simulation results.

''Our primary objective is to improve rotorcraft mission effectiveness and survivability, especially during night adverse weather conditions,'' said Dean Borgman, vice president of advanced product development and technology at McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co.

Borgman said artificial intelligence (AI), sensors, cockpit displays, and digital flight controls would be part of D/NAPS. ''The D/NAPS program will significantly advance the state-of- the-art for rotorcraft pilotage and will result in major increases in functional capabilities for Army Aviation,'' said Galen Ho, assistant general manager at IBM's Owego, N.Y., facility.

McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co.'s full mission simulation facility in Mesa, Ariz., will be used to demonstrate the effectiveness of D/NAPS, which could become standard equipment on future military rotorcraft.

The contract calls for two demonstrations. The first, in October 1991, will demonstrate the ability of D/NAPS processors and software to operate at speeds close to those required to perform pilotage functions in actual flight.

In June 1992, real-time operation of D/NAPS will be demonstrated in a full-mission flight simulator that duplicates the actual flight environment.

During the test phase, D/NAPS will simulate an advanced cockpit aboard a U.S. Army combat helicopter. Existing advanced digital flight controls developed and flight tested by McDonnell Douglas on the AH-64 Apache, will be modified under the D/NAPS contract, Wasson said.

IBM also will provide real-time AI computers and will support the development of AI decision-aiding software, Harland added.

MACON, GA (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Charter Medical Corp. announced that it has withdrawn from a proposed management contract in Saudi Arabia.

The company ascertained that the selection process would be protracted, according to officials. The withdrawal releases a $6 million bid bond related to the Saudi project.

Including the $6 million, Charter's total cash on hand is $50 million. In addition, Charter has a $30 million line of credit available under its bank credit agreement. The company is current with all debt obligations.

As previously contemplated, the company is reviewing sale/leaseback proposals of approximately $100 million on certain facilities. The proposals, if consummated, would generate approximately $45 million of net cash flow to the company after payment of bank debt and transaction costs.

A number of strategic cost-reduction measures have been identified, and steps to implement these reductions have been taken and are continuing. The company expects to realize significant additional improvements in expense reductions in the coming months.

''Our primary focus continues to be on quality patient care,'' said William A. Fickling Jr., chairman. ''Cost containment simply will not be accomplished at the price of diminished healthcare. We have identified areas -- including corporate management staffing and marketing expenses -- where expense reductions can be made with no compromise in the level of care.''

SAN FRANCISCO (JULY 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Richard Thalheimer, president and chief executive officer of Sharper Image Corp. (NASDAQ:SHRP) announced Tuesday that the generally weak retail environment nationwide continues to impact sales negatively.

''The effects of the current retail environment are reflected in our level of sales for Father's Day and graduations, which were below our expectations.

''Net sales for the current quarter-to-date period are less than the comparable period of the prior year. Although we are unable to precisely predict the final results of the second quarter which ends July 31, 1990, the lower sales are expected to cause second quarter operations to result in a loss.

''Our current estimate for the second quarter loss ranges from 15 cents to 20 cents per share, as compared with prior year's second quarter net earnings of 1 cent per share.

''Despite our disappointment with the anticipated results of the second quarter, we are optimistic that the company will be profitable for the 1990 fiscal year.

''Management is continuing to review the company's operations and is taking appropriate steps to reduce expenditures without sacrificing our level of customer service and overall quality of operations. We plan to reduce advertising costs substantially in the next six months as compared to the same period last year primarily by lower catalog production costs and a revised circulation plan,'' said Thalheimer.

He further stated that ''We are optimistic about our merchandising strength to develop more exclusive products which will be available only from The Sharper Image. We expect to introduce 10 to 12 exclusive products in the second half of the current year, which is a significant increase over the prior year.

''In addition, with four new stores opened so far this year, we are on course to have 10 new store opened by the end of year. We believe the increase in the number of exclusive products and the additional new stores will contribute positively to our sales and earnings in the second half of the current fiscal year.''

The Sharper Image is a specialty retailer of a unique selection of innovative and high quality products that are marketed through its colorful, monthly catalogs and expanding retail network, which now totals 70 stores nationwide and eight internationally through its foreign licensees.

The company offers a variety of products, including consumer electronics, communications, health and fitness, recreational and novelty items. Its common stock is traded on the NASDAQ under the symbol SHRP.

GROUP LED BY HERITAGE MEDIA CORP OF DALLAS, TX OWNS 2,616,708 SHARES (67.50%) OF POP RADIO CORP (TICKER: POPX) OF NEW YORK, NY.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

On July 2, 1990, the Heritage announced that it has been informed that Thomas Dilk, a former employee of Pop Radio and the plaintiff in one of the two putative class actions that are the subject of the settlement agreement relating to the proposal of Heritage to acquire Pop Radio, has not withdrawn his assertions that his counsel in that action was not authorized to enter into the settlement agreement and continues to consider contesting aspects of the agreement.

The settlement of both actions and the giving of a release by all plaintiffs is a condition to Heritage's obligations to proceed with the settlement of all litigation and the proposed merger.

Heritage believes that this situation involves primarily a dispute between Dilk and his counsel and has not decided what action it will take with respect to the settlement agreement.
